Ward 8 race warming up

By Edward Cafasso, Staff Writer

OAK HILL — The four-way race to fill the vacant Ward 8 aldermanic slot is heating up as the candidates begin to trade barbs, gather support, coin slogans and prepare for a series of upcoming debates.

Slightly less than five weeks remain before the 5,964 registered voters in parts of Oak Hill and Newton Centre go to the polls to pick a temporary replacement to finish out the term of the late Robert L. Shuman.

The winner in the June 4 special election — the city's first in nearly two decades — will have the extra advantage incumbency provides when the time comes for voters to choose a Ward 8 legislator for the next two years this November.

Since nomination papers for the fall contest become available on May 1, voters may have a hard distinguishing where the special election campaign ends and the regular election effort begins.

If the losers in the special balloting decide to try again in the fall, a preliminary election may be needed to narrow the field — a possibility that makes a strong show of force in the current race even more important for the immediate political future of the losers.

Howard U. Passman, of 89 Dorcar Road, kicked off the campaign's first significant exchange of political rhetoric when he accused his three opponents of "ducking the issues" last week.

Local reactions to Mt. Ida plan mixed

By David Weber, Staff Writer

OAK HILL — Oak Hill residents will bring mixed emotions to the June public hearing on a zoning change for a 250-unit elderly housing complex with a medical care facility on the Mount Ida Jr. College campus, according to Stephen Buchbinder, attorney for the Life Care Center project.

Buchbinder said his group has recently met with two neighborhood groups, the Oak Hill Park Association and the Nahanton Woods Association, to hear their concerns about the project.

He said the meeting with the Oak Hill Park Association "went well," while the residents of the Nahanton Woods condominium development were "somewhat more agitated."

Nathan Nager, president of the Oak Hill Park Association, said, "We have taken no stand at all on the issue. Most of the people who attended the meeting were abutters to the project and the reaction was mixed."

Nancy Levin, who lives on Wiswall Road, which abuts the proposed site of the development, said, "We don't feel too good about it. The traffic on Dedham Steet is already horrendous." She said she had to turn right on Dedham Street when she took her children to school earlier this week even though she wanted to turn left.

"That happens three out of four times during the morning. You

Library question dividends to state

By Edward Cafasso, Staff Writer

NEWTON — The Commonwealth's general fund will soon be almost $900 richer thanks to unencumbered funds left over in the accounts of the two political action committees that fought over the city's 1983 ballot question on financing a new library.

City and state political finance officials said last week that the residual funds remaining in the accounts of the Committee to Elect a New Library (CENL) and Stop The Override of Prop. 2½ (STOP) will have to be turned back to the state eventually.

The unspent contributions, which total exactly $898.16, will have to be forwarded to the Commonwealth of Massachusetts' Local Aid Fund because neither group has any outstanding debts or liabilities, according to the officials.

Campaign Finance Reports (CFRs) on file with the city's Election Commission show CENL with residual monies totalling $807.31 and STOP with $90.85 remaining from the 1983 battle over a ballot question that asked voters to endorse an override of Prop. 2½ to finance the construction of a new library.

Residents ultimately rejected the idea by an overwhelming margin.

According to Pat Carli, senior auditor and investigator for the state's Office of Campaign and Political Finance, said the money must be turned over to the state's general revenues.

Alan W. Licarie, executive secretary of the Election Commission, informed the both committees' treasurers of the situation in an April 11 letter that explained the same statute Carli cited.

By law, CENL and STOP were required to file their respective CFRs on the fifth day of every month until all campaign liabilities were wiped out. With their slates clean, the two groups can now either give the money to the state or simply keep it in their

Massey is named as publisher

DEDHAM — N.E.N.I. Inc. has named Paul J. Massey publisher of Transcript Newspapers.

Massey has served as general manager of Transcript Newspapers for 15 years. He held the position of production manager for 10 years before being promoted to general manager.

The Transcript Newspapers, headquartered in Dedham, Mass., publishes The Newton Graphic, The News Tribune, covering Waltham, Newton, Watertown and Weston; The Daily Transcript, a daily covering Dedham, Needham, Norwood, Walpole and Westwood; and five other newspapers, including Needham Chronicle, West Roxbury Transcript, Parkway Transcript, Family Shopper and Trib Plus.

N.E.N.I. Inc., which purchased the eight-newspaper group last week, also named John Skakle publisher emeritus of The News Tribune.

Vietnam — 10 years later

Local veterans take a look back

'Here we were, 17, 18 and 19-year-olds carrying M-16 machine guns through these jungles with grenades strapped to our chests. If there wasn't a war, we would have been back in Newton cruising the streets, playing sports, dating girls.'

Richard Metro

By Edward Cafasso, Staff Writer

"I'd do it all over again for my children, but I wouldn't necessarily want my children to do it for theirs."
— Vietnam vet from Waltham who requested anonymity.

They were kids just out of high school when they left the streets of Newton and Waltham.

Some 2,400 of them from these two cities travelled halfway across the world to put their lives on the line, either at the government's request or because they chose to follow the patriotic legacy handed down by their fathers and grandfathers.

They were the flesh and blood of this country's longest, most controversial and most painstakingly analyzed war — a conflict that, for those totally removed from it, ended a decade ago today when the last U.S. helicopters lifted off from the roof of the embattled American embassy in Saigon.

The men lucky enough to make it home alive — 23 from Newton and 12 from Waltham were not — have distinct and personal memories from their time in Vietnam.

Some remember the country's beautiful beaches or the paralyzing fear that gripped them when an enemy mortar shell could be heard whistling toward their position through the dark night air.

Others recall the young village children, boys and girls barely into their teens, who played happily in the bombed-out streets by day and became soldiers in the jungle at night.

Like many of the area's Vietnam veterans, Richard C. Metro came back to his hometown, Newton, and eventually landed a job with the city.

Local vets look back and wonder

Now the city's forestry superintendent, Metro worked with a small group of about a dozen men — often behind enemy lines — gathering information for the Central Intelligence Agency and other branches involved in the conflict.

When he entered the service in 1968, the Navy trained him to speak and write Vietnamese fluently, which made him popular among the natives and village children with whom he spent much of his time.

By the time of his discharge two years and three wounds later, he had earned a Purple Heart with three Oak Leaf clusters, the Silver Star, the Bronze Star Medal, the Vietnam Cross of Galantry, and several other commendations.

"Here we were, 17, 18 and 19-year-olds carrying M-16 machine guns through these jungles with grenades strapped to our chests. If there wasn't a war, we would have been back in Newton cruising the streets, playing sports, dating girls.

"Instead, we grew up in combat. We never experienced our youth," Metro, now 38, says.

Despite the years he would have otherwise enjoyed in peace and his brushes with death, Metro is "not a complainer. I did my thing and I'm home now. I'm happy with what I did then, and I'm happy with what I do today."

There are "bad" and "good" lessons that stem from America's involvement in Vietnam, according to Metro.

"It's too bad that some of the politicians and people today don't want to go out of their way to help the people in countries that need it. The Russians jump on that," he says.

"In Vietnam, on one side of the checkerboard, were the military people, and on the other side were the politicians. I don't think we, the military people, were allowed to do what we felt we had to do over there to gain these people their freedom.

"We left without any dignity and honor, and when we arrived back home we got abused. I can remember my father telling me not to wear my uniform in the streets because I wouldn't like the reaction it got," Metro says.

For him, the "good" lesson of Vietnam 10 years later is the most important.

"People are starting to realize finally, after all these years, that the guys who went to fight in Vietnam weren't so bad after all," according to Metro.

William Kelly, a recently retiree after 11 years with the Newton Fire Department, will never have the chance to forget his 11 months and 28 days in Vietnam.

"I remember it every morning when I get up. I lost a leg over there. I was caught in an ambush," says the 40-year-old Garden City native, whose damaged limb still requires regular medical attention.

Kelly, a former Army seargent who earned numerous commendations during his combat service, spent nine months in a European hospital before returning to civilian life, a stay he believes helped him accomplish a smoother transition than Metro and other veterans.

"I think it's a helluva lesson we learned over there. Because of Vietnam, something drastic would have to happen today for us to commit troops to a battle like that again. I don't think we're going to jump into Central America like we did in Vietnam. I don't think the people will let it happen today," according to Kelly.

"It lingered on for too many years. We didn't fight it to win it. I don't think people will let that happen again either," he adds.

Sgt. Robert Williams, a recruiter at the Army-National Guard office on Sharon Street in Waltham, agrees with Kelly's perspective.

"I looked at it as a year lost out of my life. At the time (1966), we had no real sense of what was going on. I didn't really start to think about it until 1970. That's when I realized we were fighting a losing cause," says the former tank commander who now lives with his family on Berkeley Street.

"A lot of guys were just calling it a political football. It seemed to us that nobody wanted to win the damned thing.

"If we're going to go into combat, let's go in to win. Don't play no games. Don't use us as pawns in a chess game. You have to have that commitment or it just becomes useless bloodshedding," according to Williams.

Lawrence Marino, now comptroller for the city of Newton, echoes Williams's "If you're not going to do it to win, don't do it at all" view. Marino was drafted into the Army in 1968 while a junior at Boston College and spent most of his tour in Vietnam's central highlands.

"I didn't have it as hard as a lot of guys did. I mean, it wasn't easy, but I was only involved in a couple of firefights. I didn't spend 12 months humping through the jungle like some guys did," he says.

Although he described the combat action he particpated in as "nothing significant," Marino's most vivid memory is of colleagues who were not so lucky.

"I remember when friends of mine from 173rd Airborne Division went out on a patrol one day. I had grown close to a lot of guys in that outfit. Three-quarters of the patrol was wiped out. From the compound, I could see the firefight off in the hills about five miles away. I found out later that 15 of them had died."

Marino also remembers, all too well, coming to grips with his own mortality.

"It's an amazing feeling when you're in fear of your life and you have no control over anything that's happening. No one who hasn't gone through it could really understand what genuine fear means," according to the Lyme Road resident.

"Three or four nights a week, our compound would get blasted with rocket and mortar fire. You could see them being fired and hear them in the air. You know they're heading your way, but there's nowhere to hide and you're afraid to move because you don't want to move into it.

"You wonder, 'Is this the one with my name on it?' and you're just frozen there waiting for it to happen and praying it doesn't. It makes you think about God once in a while, too," he recalls.

Marino's first greeting when he got back to the States in 1969 is typical of the "Welcome Home" many vets had to endure — a different kind of war they never expected to have to fight.

"A flower child at San Francisco Airport, a young long-haired girl, saw me and called me a 'baby killer.' If I had a gun at the time, I think I would have killed her."

The anxiety of being a veteran of the country's most unpopular war soon had "a very nervous, extremely tense" Marino smoking three packs of cigarettes a day. He now considers his successful adjustment to civilian life "lucky."

"You can't expect a guy who's been in a combat situation for 12 months to be sent home to reality in one day with no psychological debriefing and no rest."

"What they did to some of these kids was horrendous. I mean, one day you're in Vietnam coming out of the jungle and the next you're home. Maybe the military gives you a steak dinner and thanks you, but then you're on the streets and people are calling you 'baby killer.'"

Like Richie Metro and some of the other area vets interviewed during the past week, Marino hopes to go back someday to visit Vietnam.

This time, however, they would like to make the trip in peace.

Local musician wins a Pulitzer prize

By Suzane Dulude
Staff Writer

NEWTON — West Newton resident and composer Stephen Albert is having a hard time "fathoming" that he has won the 1985 Pulitzer Prize for Music.

The Valentine Street resident said he never expected to win a Pulitzer. "One thinks about all the reasons one won't get it," the 44-year-old Albert said. After having a day to consider his good fortune, Albert described his mood as "very happy, very pleased about it. I just wish that some of the people who worked so hard alongside me could be mentioned."

Albert, who was honored for "Symphony, RiverRun," first performed by the National Symphony Orchestra on Jan. 17, said "I know two of my works had been submitted, but it's just one of those things I put out of mind. I know of other works submitted that were pretty good, besides my own."

He was nominated but not chosen for the coveted prize two years ago.

As far as his future, Albert said he expects, "performing opportunities will increase for the time being," and that he will have the chance "to work with many kinds of musicians, especially people who are good."

Of the selection process, Albert said, "In the past when I was not involved, I thought 'That was an awfully political choice.' I don't know how these things are really won."

A native New Yorker, Albert has lived in West Newton for four years. He has supported his wife Marilyn and his two children, Joshua, 15, and Kate, 12, for the past seven years by dealing in philately, the buying and selling of postal history.

Albert studied at the Eastman School of Music in Rochester, N.Y., the Philadelphia Musical Academy and the University of Pennsylvania.

Gender differences in graffiti

By Laurel Babcock
Correspondent

CHESTNUT HILL — Thirteen years ago, Lanny Kutakoff embarked on a world exploration in search of a topic for his master's thesis in communication research.

After trekking through some of the globe's most exotic locales, such as Greece, Israel, Scotland and Ireland, Kutakoff, then a graduate student at Boston University, returned to America with a greater appreciation for what he found to be a universally-shared architectural trademark — bathroom graffiti.

Kutakoff had found his master's thesis topic.

During his lecture last week at Pine Manor College, where Kutakoff is assistant dean of students and an assistant professor in sociology, the master of bathroom graffiti explained how his unusual fascination began.

"I enjoy reading walls," Kutakoff said. "While looking for a topic I remembered my professor's advice how the thesis should be a labor of love, not just labor."

Kutakoff, 37, focussed his research on the gender differences found in "latrinalia" — graffiti written specifically in bathrooms. After reading what little information he could find on the subject, Kutakoff established two hypotheses, both of which were disproven by his own work.

According to Kutakoff original theories, women wrote an equal amount of sexual comments on walls as did men and used more socially unacceptable language and content in their brief dissertations on life. But countless bathroom stalls and 727 pieces of catalogued graffiti later, Kutakoff discovered men had more to say in reference to sexual matters and used language that was better left where it was written.

"It was not what I expected it to be," Kutakoff said of the results of his 1972 study. "I had to come to grips with that. Then again, this was about the sixth or seventh study I did where I proved myself wrong."

The educator, who conducted his studies in the hallowed stalls of Boston-area college bathrooms, was unable to find the answers he sought regarding bathroom graffiti artists. But he did discover some interesting facts about what, and how much, people had on their minds at the time.

Men not only had more to say than women, but said it more succinctly, according to Kutakoff's findings. Of the 727 pieces of graffiti recorded, 575 were written by men and 152 by women. On average, men's feelings were summed up in about three words while women needed 27.

Women, according to Kutakoff, "correspond" with each other through their bathroom writing more than men, record more "personal laments" and write phrases more difficult to categorize.

The majority of men's writing is related to sex "in one way or another" and includes many more ethnic slurs (none were found in women's bathrooms), Kutakoff said.

He was more surprised by the subjects not found on bathroom walls than those permanently inscribed.

"I found nothing on ecology," he said. "That really astounded me. I couldn't figure out where anybody's sensibilities were on a such a timely issue."

Kutakoff conducted another study of bathroom graffiti in 1983 and discovered that times hadn't changed much in over a decade — in bathrooms at least.

"We're basically looking at the same phenomena and 11 years had passed," said Kutakoff, who did find that women are now writing more graffiti, including more political comments, and men have increased their amount of sexually-oriented writing.

"I didn't chuckle once out loud though," Kutakoff said of his second round of bathroom investigations. "People don't seem to have the sense of humor now that they had in the '70's."

One thing that has definitely changed over the years is Kutakoff's attitude towards graffiti writing.

"I never, ever wrote one piece of graffiti in my entire life before these studies," he said. "Now I'm rather prolific. I know it's not socially acceptable, but I just feel this urgency to write on the walls whenever I'm there," he added, referring to his research field.

Praises for a 'perfect gentleman'

By Edward Cafasso, Staff Writer

NEWTON CENTRE — Many years ago, then-Alderman Ernest F. Dietz visted friends in Hampstead, England, and, as was his custom, decided to take a walk through a nearby park.

After he and his wife, Jean, had strolled through much of the lovely environs, admiring the comings-and-goings of the passers-by, they decided to rest for a while on a convenient bench.

The white-haired, stately Dietz noticed that each bench had been dedicated in the memory of a local who had lovingly frequented the park during his or her lifetime and commented, "Now, this is really thoughtful."

Sunday, friends and family of the Newton Centre civic leader who died unexpectedly last August at age 73 showed how much they thought of Dietz and his unselfish contributions to the Garden City by dedicating a park bench in his memory at the Newton Centre green.

Nearly 100 residents and community leaders attended the afternoon ceremonies, braving a chilly breeze and intermittent drizzle to offer a fitting tribute to one of the city's most notable citizens.

The focus of the event was a purple beachwood bench facing Centre Street, set in a red brick foundation and flanked by freshly-planted flowers.

Just beneath the bench, a granite tablet sunk along the sidewalk bears an inscription which capsules the impression Dietz's life had on those he left behind: "A legacy of public service for others to follow."

The bench, tablet and subsequent landscaping were all paid for from private contributions that flowed in after the alderman who guided the city through its formative phase for 20 consecutive years passed away late last summer.

"It's a beautiful tribute to Ernie for his caring. This was his hang-out. He loved this place. He just loved people and liked to help them if he could," Jean Dietz said of her husband as she cast a hand toward the heart of the Newton Centre neighborhood just prior to the ceremony.

"I liked Ernie. He was a nice guy and never pretended to be what he wasn't. He stood up for what he believed in," Bullwinkle said before the ceremony.

Bauckman, who spoke briefly to the crowd, called his former colleague and friend "a magnificent gentleman" and "a person for whom we can all be proud."

During his remarks, Mayor Theodore D. Mann said Dietz "left an indelible impression on the lifestyle of our community" and described him as "a rare human being."

Tennant characterized his former colleague as "a sort of a bull-dog type who, once he got his teeth into something, wouldn't let go. He was aggressive and very protective of his community. We need more guys like him."

Richmond, who took over the chairmanship of the then-aldermanic Public Buildings Committee from Dietz, called him "a quality guy" and "a good man to have on the Board of Aldermen."

Former Newton Centre alderman Ethel Sheehan noted that Dietz was "a perfect gentleman all the time. He was always able to disagree in a courteous manner."

Others remembered Dietz's devotion to his constituents and his love for the community's youth, especially on Halloween when he would don costume and mask to joyfully greet surprised youngsters at the door of his Hancock Avenue home.

Behind-the-scenes thanks went out to Parks & Recreation Commissioner Russell J. Halloran, Chief Recreation Supervisor Carol Stapleton, City Clerk Edward G. English and his staff, Anne C. Wyman of The Boston Globe, mayoral secretary Ellen Harrower and the members of Girl Scout Troop 3005, who have agreed to be the caretakers of the Dietz Memorial Park Bench.

New way needed to preserve past

The tapering off of federal funds that came to the city through the Community Development Block Grant program is lamentable from a number of different angles. It hurts the most when it directly affects people who have come to depend on that sort of help over the years.

But there is another effect of the cutoff that is a bit harder to see. The funds used to be the basis of a citywide program called VIP that encouraged business owners to rehabilitate their buildings by offering reimbursement in federal funds.

Now, a large part of the Garden City has been ruled ineligible for that reimbursement. We care because we think the city should join the preservation movement that is restoring other cities across the country to their historical splendor.

Behind the often tacky facades of commercial buildings in the city lie works of architectural artistry that deserve to be resurrected. A prime example is the building on the corner of Watertown and Waltham Streets. Now tenanted by CVS, Store 24 and the phone company, the old building, known as "the Robinson Block," has been covered with a thin skin of aluminum siding.

When this was done, the owner must have thought he had come across a perfect solution to the problems of preserving an old building. The siding was relatively cheap, relatively durable and maintenance would be close to nil.

Many such "improvements" were completed years ago, when a number of the city's old buildings were in disrepair and "urban renewal" was something of a fad. But now, our stock of architectural history has been depleted and the few remaining remnants of a glorious past era are even more valuable.

Given the push in Washington to cut back funds for programs like that which assisted in the preservation of our history, it would seem a fool's errand to hope for help from that quarter. Is there something else that can be done besides appealing to commercial property owners to realize that they have a responsibility to help us preserve, as much as possible, some of the landmark buildings in the Garden City?

Dems at crossroads

By Loring Swaim

Massachusetts Democrats will wrestle with their philosophy and their future next month, searching for a winning formula.

Up to 5,000 delegates, chosen at caucuses in February and including 1,000 ex-officio officeholders, will hold an "Issues Convention" in the Springfield Civic Center May 18.

It will be facinating to watch them struggle with the game as played in Ronald Reagan's court.

The pow-wow takes place against the backdrop of Reagan's devastating defeat of Democrats nationally last year. Democratic State Committee chairman (and now Cong.) Chet Atkins hopes the deliberations might send some kind of national message about the road back to power.'

That's a tall order for a party that had lost the lean and hungry look and stopped paying the price for leadership. One hears little self-criticism from last year's defeated standard-bearer (or beareress) acknowledging why they lost touch with the American mood and lost 49 states to Republican Reagan.

The meat of the convention is expected to be a new Democratic platform hammered out by ex-Cong. Jim Shannon and a committee of elders. The idea was to redefine what Democrats should stand for nowadays.

They came up stressing broad thematic principles and generalities in contrast to the traditional Democratic laundry list of special interests and constituent groups' issues. (One cynical Democrat reports the hottest item on the agenda may be whether or not to include gays and lesbians in the Democratic charter.)

We are being treated these days to the spectacle of prominent Democrats searching their souls for the lost formula. In the process, they are heard to voice numerous heretical departures from Democratic scripture. It is as if, to get national attention and to prove their intellectual manhood, each must outshock the other by seeming to jettison Democratic dogma and embrace revolutionary Republican cant.

* Newly-installed National Chairman Paul Kirk, for one, said last week Democrats should consider freezing Social Security cost-of-living increases! Hey, SS is the very heart and sacred soul of Democratic identification with the masses.

* Chet Atkins says federal revenue sharing with the states is no longer acceptable in a time of towering deficits!

* Ted Kennedy ventures that some time-honored Democratic nostrums for the needy may actually have lost their usefulness and should be questioned!

This all is apostasy to issue-oriented party activists who have gained power by mastering the system as it was. Indeed, Gov. Dukakis worked the coalition-of-constituencies route to perfection and rode it back into office. To be asked now to abandon that strategy and, instead, to pound mighty resounding chords like patriotism, self-sacrifice, less government, volunteerism, strong defense, that Reagan found so effective, takes a lot of adjustment.

It is entirely possible the convention could erupt in turmoil over this thematic challenge. There may be enough diehard traditionalists to put up a fight against having to hold their ideological noses and cater to Reagan generalities just because they're where the public is at these days.

By the same token, there will be those holding that if these ideas are good enough for a majority of Americans as Reagan demonstrated, they should be good enough for us.

Will there be a shootout--directly or subtly--between Atkins of the new school of thought and the play-tough, do-whatever-succeeds Dukakis forces? Will narrow constituencies fight at the mike for their accustomed moment in the spotlight? Will Paul Kirk or anyone else be able to lift divisive debate to a loftier plane?

Paul Tsongas encapsulates this particular dilemma in something of a enigmatic non-sequitor cited in the opening preamble to the party's proposed platform: "It's about time," he is quoted as saying, "we confronted the future with confidence by adcpting neither the past nor blind dogma."

'People's Republic of Brookline?'

It is well known that the border between Newton and Brookline is pretty much a one-way affair. When they can afford the price of admission, Brookliners flee to the Garden City. The reason why just came out. At least one source has indicated the political climate just east of us is quite different from ours.

Excoriating our state senator, Jack Backman (D — Newton, Brookline), at a recent political rally on the North Shore, taxpayer champion Barbara Anderson (the "godmother" of Prop. 2½) roasted him for authoring a bill she considers "anti-taxpayer." Anderson referred to Backman and his co-sponsor State Rep. John Businger as "neo-socialists from the People's Republic of Brookline."

That's one revolution we missed.

A recent discussion of the latest police radio equipment before the aldermanic Public Facilities Committee yielded an interesting insight into the workings of the Police Department.

Someone on the committee asked about the "I.D." component of the equipment being discussed, the component that tells the central dispatcher exactly who is calling in. Alderman Richard McGrath, who has become notorious for his super-close scrutiny of the Police Department over the years, volunteered that the component was used to identify exactly who was using the radio to transmit "derogatory statements about the chief."

Never hesitant to correct Alderman McGrath, Chief William Quinn informed the committee, "When the I.D. came in, all derogatory statements about the chief stopped."

The cookie crumbles... The Building Department's recent well-publicized woes have some of its employees looking out for the next bombshell.

After reading numerous reports in the press, Election Commission official Alan W. Licarie half-jokingly asked one of the department's employees what was going on.

Those who still believe that America's military involvement in Central America will never lead "another Vietnam" should note this recollection from Richard C. Metro, the city's forestry superintendent.

Metro was specially trained to gather intelligence data for the CIA and other branches during his two tours of duty in Vietnam. In 1970, when it came time for him to either re-enlist or return to the Garden City, Metro asked his commanders what might be in store him if he stayed in the military.

"They told me that they expected Central America to be the next hotspot. I'm not kidding, that's really how they described it. They said it had the potential for problems. They wanted to send me there next and that was 15 years ago," he said recently.

During this particular verbal fray, which focussed on the city's effort to rehabilitate decaying sewer lines, Hickey suggested that McGrath might have an easier time understanding the discussion if he "just stopped talking sometime and listened to what's being said."

McGrath, not one to take such advice lightly, leaned across the table toward Hickey, whom he called, "Buster," and warned the commissioner and his colleagues that he "will never be kept quiet."

"So, tough petootee (?) to you," the always fluent legislator added.

Board of Aldermen President Emeritus Wendall R. Bauckman has begun a counter-attack to test "Alderperson" Carol J. Robinson's penchant for genderless titles.

Whenever Robinson is within earshot, the aldermanic veteran of over four decades now jokingly refers to himself as "Wendall Bauck-person."

Imagine the possibilities if Mayor "Mann" followed that lead.

Dispute over daylight-saving time

By Robert J. Wagman

In 1784, Ben Franklin, then ambassador to France, had one of his bright ideas. If the clock were rearranged to give Paris shopkeepers an extra hour of daylight during business hours, they could save more than a million francs a year on candles.

Thus was born the idea of daylight-saving time, which was eventually to become widespread in America. Each U.S. state and county determined how and when to set its clocks until 1967, when Congress passed the Uniform Time Act.

It mandated that all clocks in the continental United States be set one hour ahead at 2 a.m. on the last Sunday in April, and remain there until 2 a.m. on the last Sunday in October.

What's the purpose of daylight-saving time? By mid-spring, the sun rises early enough so that even if the clock is pushed one hour ahead, people can still begin the day in daylight. By extending daylight by one hour in the evening, there's still light available for business, recreation or leisure at day's end.

In 1972, Congress passed an amendment that permitted any state split by a time zone to have all or a portion of the state not reset its clock. Currently, part of Indiana and Arizona don't go on daylight-saving time, nor do Hawaii, Puerto Rico or the Virgin Islands.

Most people seem to like the daylight-saving time arrangement.

In 1973, Congress decided to experiment by extending daylight-saving. As an energy-conservation measure, it decreed that from Jan. 6, 1974, until Oct. 26, 1975, the nation would set its clocks an hour ahead and leave them there.

daylight was fine in late spring, summer and early fall. In the winter, though, the day began in the dark and it got dark again by the end of the workday. Less than halfway through the experiment, Congress ordered a return to the old DST schedule.

Many businesses still love daylight-saving time.

Convenience-store operators say that more daylight would increase their business, since women avoid the stores on dark afternoons and early evenings.

In addition, daylight-saving time appeals to leisure firms — since, for example, a lot more golf would be played with an extra hour of daylight. The Barbecue Industry Association salivates at the thought of the extra briquettes and bottles of sauce that could be sold for those extra hours, and candy companies like the idea of extra daylight on Halloween.

These groups have formed the Daylight Saving Time Coalition and have proposed that DST be extended. It should start, they say, on the third Sunday in March, rather than the last Sunday in April, and should end on the first Sunday in November, not the last Sunday in October.

They say this change would save energy, reduce crime and cut down on traffic accidents during sunset rush hours. (In March and April 1974, during the short-lived experiment, accidents were down almost 3 percent.)

It's a modest change — but quite a few people oppose it.

Under the DST coalition's plan, some areas would experience "sunrise" as late as 8:10 a.m. for several weeks in late March. Parents groups, such as the National PTA, complain that this will force children to leave for school in the dark. Radio stations that are licensed to operate only during daylight hours would miss the valuable early-morning drive time.

Farm groups say that farmers who hold second jobs or take part in evening community and church activities would have to quit their fields during daylight — losing an hour of work time each day. Dairy farmers say that cows would still follow the old schedule; they'd have to be milked in the dark, and probably would give less milk.

Several religious groups also oppose the change. Orthodox Jews whose day begins in synagogue at sunrise argue that with a later sunrise, there would be several weeks in which they couldn't say morning prayers and get to work on time. Some Christian fundamentalists oppose daylight-saving, period — claiming that it violates God's will.

The proposed DST change was defeated in the last Congress by a House vote of 211-199. It has been reintroduced, though.

Backers say it might pass this time. Opponents warn that daylight-saving partisans shouldn't count their chickens before they hatch — especially if they'll have to hatch in the dark.

Letters

No such thing as loopholes

To the editor:

This is an open letter in response to a misleading and illogical full-page advertisement which appeared recently in the Boston Globe (and, I assume, many other national newspapers) paid for by the American Association of Retired Persons (AARP) entitled "The Budget Deficit, A Question of Fairness."

This advertisement asks, "Is it fair to cut back on Social Security, Medicare, Medicaid, job training, housing and student loans while ignoring massive federal tax giveaways to large corporations and wealth individuals?" The ad answers, "No. To deal effectively with the huge budget deficit, we must deal with the real causes of the deficit problem — tax loopholes, military spending and rising interest costs."

It continues, "Is it fair to force older Americans, working families and the poor to sacrifice still more to help reduce the budget deficit while many of the nation's most profitable corporations and wealthiest individuals aren't sharing the burden?"

The illogical thinking reflected in this misguided advertisement almost defines in reverse what the real causes (and possible solutions) are to the budget deficit.

The first bit of reverse thinking demonstrated in this ad is the assertion that social security, Medicare, etc. are being "cut back" when, in fact, they are all increasing in costs to taxpayers. AARP must assume that continued skyrocketing costs of these programs is a natural state of affairs (which is almost true, unfortunately), so that any slowdown in the increase becomes a "cutback."

The next illogical statement is the assertion that "massive federal tax giveaways to large corporations and wealthy individuals are being ignored" as if such a phenomenon can actually exist at all! The kind of thinking that assumes there can be such a thing as a tax giveaway can only follow from the assumption that the government, not the people, owns everthing to begin with, so whatever the productive citizens create of value and keep is "given to them" by the government.

The ad continues by postulating that the solution to the rising deficit will come by addressing the "real causes" — tax loopholes, military spending and rising interest rates.

To answer these points, first, there is simply no such thing as a tax "loophole" — I defy the AARP to name one. There is simply the tax law as it exists, as passed by our elected representatives. Does loophole mean "deduction?" If so, the biggest loophole now is home mortgage interest!

Second, military spending is the first and most basic responsibility of our government, and our present level as a percentage of total tax revenues has barely caught up with the percentage it was back when John F. Kennedy was president, and in absolute terms it is lower than our totalitarian enemy, Russia. Lastly, rising interest rates "cause" the deficit to rise about the same way wet sidewalks "cause" rain. Rising interest rates simply reflect the free market's changing "price" for credit — and when demand for credit is high, such as government demand to finance skyrocketing social programs, interest rates can indeed "rise."

This ad asks me to write my senators and congressmen to protest the unfair budget proposal. The AARP will be pleased to know I am writing my senators and congressmen, but fortunately for them, I aam writing to support the present proposal.

In my view, taxpayer funds flowing from a growing, productive economy are the only source for increasing dollars for social security, medicare, etc. President Reagan has demonstrated that by lowering tax rates. tax revenues for these social programs actually increase. In fact, the latest tax revenue figures show that the percent of total taxes paid by individuals with incomes under $20,000 has dropped from 17.1 percent to 15.5 percent; those earning $20-50,000 from 50 percent to 49.1 percent, and those earning over $50,000 rising from 32.9 percent to 35.4 percent. Hard to believe, but true — lowering tax rates increases total tax revenues, and a higher percentage of the total taxes get paid by the "wealthy."

And as to the AARP's complaint that a deficit "solution" lies somewhere in the area of getting corporations to "pay more taxes," I will simply ask the AARP to define just how "corporations" really pay taxes at all. More and more economic "experts" seem to be concluding that only productive citizens "pay" taxes, corporations can only collect them — and, you guessed it, they "collect" them if they have to "pay" by simply raising prices high enough to do so.

The AARP should consider reversing its position and support the current budget proposal because it does in fact eliminate well intentioned but wasteful programs that drain the incentive and the resources of the productive workers in our society. Only by continuing to streamline the delivery of necessary social programs and lower the tax burden for all will our free economy generate real additional revenues to pay for the types of social programs outlined by AARP.

Open letter to the Board of Aldermen:

Listening to the smooth, soothing silk-like presentation performed and enacted by Howard Levine, attorney for developer Jack Antaramian, I was lulled into thinking that these truly benevolent, altruistic, caring men have only one concern — to build a beautiful development for the benefit and welfare of the City of Newton, particularly the residents of Nahanton Street.

As they spoke of preserving the meadows and retaining the natural wooded appearance of the land on the Lacy Estate, it sounded so rural and countrified that I forgot, momentarily, that this is a multi-million-dollar condominium development being constructed for the financial benefit of Mr. Antaramian and the Nahanton Street Limited Partnership.

I had to concentrate in order to focus on the reality of what will happen when 78 units are squeezed into this land. I take little comfort in listening to Mr. Antaramian's engineer and landscape architect assure us that their plan will not in any way affect our already overloaded water and sewer systems in the area.

I am concerned that the adjacent farmland will be destroyed next. Right now, Mt. Ida Jr. College is waiting in the wings with their request for a zone change so that they will be able to lease their land for the construction of a nursing care institution. Nahanton Street is already clogged with auto traffic from the Needham Industrial Park, Wells Park and the Jewish Community Center.

It's time for our city planners, engineers and Board of Alderpersons, who represent the best interest of the residents of Newton, take a lengthy and careful review and analysis of these proposals and all future requests for zone changes in this area. Let's not be lulled by the developers who would have us believe that their projects will not alter our land, the sewage system or water pressure.

'Air-rights' in private hands

To the editor:

I read your recent editorial regarding the Urban Design and Beautification Commission's study of design guidelines to control future development of air-rights over the turnpike, and generally agreed with the very valid points you made.

One correction is needed, however.

I am an architect and urban planner in private practice and the chairman of Morris Architects.

I do not now work, nor have I ever worked, for the Newton Planning Department.

'Star Wars' plan is nonsense

To the editor:

The "Star Wars" system of defense against nuclear attack may be an attractive idea, but, in reality, it just doesn't make sense. According to leading scientists and defense experts, there is virtually no chance that an invincible shield against nuclear attack could be developed.

Taxpayers should not be asked to spend hundreds of billions of dollars to build a massive and complex system about which there is such widespread doubt. Even if such a system could be built, a tiny margin of error could mean that hundreds of nuclear warheads would get through to explode in our cities and towns, killing millions of us.

Isn't it time to stop dreaming about — and paying for — the impossible, and start talking about the realities of arms reduction?

Noble acts bring immortality

To the editor:

Perhaps this is an appropriate time to respond to your editorial: "A dying breed: America's heroes." You published the editorial almost a year ago; however, considered thought about the significance of heroic acts in the maintenance of a Great Society will never be outdated, nor will it be "stale news."

Your editorial included a photo with the caption, "Was JFK our last hero?" I don't believe that President Kennedy would have agreed to the direction that the inquiry takes as a result of that question. His book, "Profiles in Courage," did not celebrate personalities. Rather, it was his intent that we celebrate, be inspired by and consider emulating acts of courage. Consider: "We may remember Daniel Webster for his subservience to the National Bank ..., but we have forgotten his 1850 act, "I speak for the Union. Hear my cause."

In my 28 years of teaching, I have dealt with more than 2,000 students. My own daughters have attained the ages of 27 and 25 during this time. Being a party to the raising of two children has impressed upon be the uncounted number of courageous parental acts that are necessary to bring children to the point where I deal with them in 11th and 12th grade chemistry and physics classes.

Mr. Editor, look for heroic acts, not for heroes, and you will find them. Then, with your writing skills, help the rest of us to celebrate and be inspired by these acts. You have in the political arena — John Kennedy's interest — acts of courage coming from both Ronald Reagan and Elie Wiesel regarding the projected visit to the Bitburg military cemetery. Reagan — at least to this point in time — has attempted to expand our conciousness as to who were and are the "victims" of the Nazi regime. Wiesel has resisted the siren call to play the hysterical demogogic zealot. Both men have acted toward each other in a spirit of "OK-ness" regarding their disagreement about the meaning to be attributed to the Bitburg visit.

Mr. Editor, write us editorials and news reports which speak not only of death and cynicism, but also of live acts of courage. Immortality of personality appears unlikely; but the divine aspect of the universe incorporates noble acts into its becoming, thereby giving them immortality.

CLT wants Prop. 2½ for state

Open letter to the Massachusetts Legislature:

As you go into the FY '86 budget debate, you have $800 million in new revenues to spend and, as yet, no Proposition 2½-for-the-state to help you resist spending it.

Citizens for Limited Taxation estimated in January of this year that FY '86 revenues would be at least $6.4 billion, an increase over FY '85 of $800 million. The administration insisted that revenues would be only $6.2 billion. The administration now admits to ¢6.302 billion. The Revenue Advisory Board currently estimates $6.374 billion, an increase of $764 million over FY '85.

Since the board is only $36 million off the Citizens for Limited Taxation estimate, with two months to go, we assume you will accept our figure of $800 million as the FY '86 revenue increase, and we hope you will consider our recommendations on how the money should be spent.

The easiest and most responsible thing to do right now is to repeal the "temporary," "emergency" 1975 surtax, which we obviously do not need with a revenue increase of 14 percent. Money for infrastructure maintenance, the unfunded pension liability, and other state priorities should come — and should have been coming for years — from your share of the state revenues, not from the share you owe the taxpayers for all the years of high taxation, temporary surtax and totally unnecessary REAP tax increases.

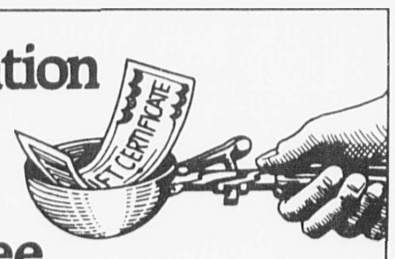

We appreciated the legislature's attempted tax cut of FY '85. The governor owes us approximately $80 million from last year's veto, and his suggested exemption increase will almost cover that debt to the taxpayers. For FY '86, the taxpayers should get $220 million to $230 million worth of surtax repeal, and they should get it now before someone spends it all.

speaking out. Maybe it's because I have nothing to gain from real estate development in this town and other people do," according to Passman, who has appeared at recent aldermanic meetings on the suggested building moratorium, proposed development of the Lacy Estate and other ward issues.

Long-time neighborhood activist Teresa F. Walsh, of 33 Wallace St., laughed heartily when she heard of Passman's claim.

"He said that, huh? Well, nobody is ducking the issues. I never ducked an issue in my life. I've always worked on issues in the community and I've always taken stands," she said.

Walsh, who has been going door-to-door to meet residents in her ward, pointed out that she was home in bed with a 103 temperature and tonsilitis when the Lacy Estate hearing was held. A supporter read a prepared statement on the issue for her, she noted.

Passman's campaign literature touts him as "the strong, independent and effective voice" Ward 8 voters "deserve" and Walsh's slogan paints her as "the candidate who deserves the job."

While Passman appears to be the most outspoken of all the entrants, William H. Shaevel, of 881 Dedham St., has been quietly picking up important political clout from some of the Oak Hill's community's most notable members.

Out-going Oak Hill Park Association President Nathan Nager, of 875 Dedham St., is the chairman of the political action committee formed to boost Shaevel's bid.

Four members of Mayor Theodore D. Mann's family put their signatures on the nomination papers that helped make Shaevel an official candidate for the seat, including Mann's wife, Florence, two daughters, Stacie and Debbie, and his son, Eric.

Shaevel's nomination papers also carried substantially more resident signatures than those offered by his opponents.

Although Mann has said he would not formally endorse any of those vying for the seat in his home ward, he demonstrated his support for Shaevel late last year by appointing him as a member of the city's first Economic Development Commission.

Responding to Passman's contention that he is "ducking the issues," Shaevel commented, "Mr. Passman is innaccurate. I have two debates scheduled. I have consistently been willing to talk about the issues and to speak out on them. My campaign is designed to reach as many peopie as possible and to deal with the issues."

Regarding Passman's comment about his being so far removed from involvement in real estate development, Shaevel could only say, "I'm not sure what he would mean by that ...."

Katz, who could not be reached for comment, is the only candidate in the race with prior aldermanic experience. He narrowly lost the Ward 8 seat to Shuman in the hard fought 1983 race that established a base of political support he hopes will separate him from the currently crowded field.

Both Katz and Walsh appear to be running lean campaigns. Election Commission records show that Katz has appointed himself chairman of his own political action committee and Walsh has not even formed one.

All four candidates will have to file CFRs detailing their fundraising activities on May 27, eight days prior to the special election.

If the issues are not being discussed now, they certainly will be within the next several weeks.

The Newton Taxpayers' Association will reportedly sponsor the first debate among the contestants on May 15. The tentative location for that bout is the Solomon Schechter School.

Another candidates' forum is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. on May 23 at Temple Beth Avodah.

NEWTON CENTRE — A May Fellowship Luncheon will be held on Friday, May 3 at noon, at the First Baptist Church, corner of Beacon and Centre streets. Donation is $3.50, and tickets will be available from your church delegate. Reservations are essential, and may be made by contacting Betty Burns at 244-2997.

The program, observed all over the United States, is entitled "Our Piece of the Action." Chairperson Eloise Houghton has secured two outside speakers who will interpret their personal part of the "action" to us.

Church Women United of Newton is organizing a support group for adult children, etc., caring for elderly parents in the home. Come and share your experiences on May 15 at 8 p.m., 227 Lincoln St., Newton Highlands. If interested, phone Marianne Talis at 527-4469 or Eloise Houghton at 969-9423.'

Local reactions to Mt. Ida plan mixed can't get across Dedham Street to make a left. Buchbinder says he's only going to a make the traffic a couple of percentage points worse. I don't want it any worse... For people around Mount Ida, it's horrendous. Dedham Street is becoming a highway."

Phillip Jackson lives on Appleton Circle, which intersects with Carlson Avenue, a proposed entrance road to the elderly housing complex. Jackson's experience fighting the traffic yesterday morning also confirmed his opposition to the project.

"I came out of my driveway and went to the intersection of Carlson and Dedham Street. And I saw one car sort of banged up and a station wagon carrying young children was banged up. At that moment, I became more dedicated to seeing that this situation is not compounded. It really hit me hard."

Jackson said he wants to help organize a "consortium" of four groups opposed to the Mount Ida project. He said it would be made up of residents from around nearby feeder routes in the area, such as Dedham and Brookline Streets, residents from the area between Rte. 9 and Mount Ida, and residents from Oak Hill Park and Nahanton Woods,

Despite such opposition, Buchbinder is confident that problems between residents and the Life Care Center can be worked out.

"Most people don't want any development and I can understand that. All we can ask is that people give us a fair shake," said Buchbinder. "We'll try to respond where we can. And we already have done that in several areas. The meetings have been very beneficial to us."

He said one request from residents during the recent meetings was for an alternate access besides Carlson Avenue.

"We'll try very hard for a rear access from Wells Avenue," he said. "Whether we can remains to be seen."

Massey made Transcript publisher

Headquartered in Woodbury, N.J., N.E.N.I. Inc. is owned by Dean Singleton and Richard B. Scudder. It purchased Transcript Newspapers from Thomson Newspapers Inc. April 25 for an undisclosed price.

Massey is a graduate of Carnegie-Mellon University in Pittsburgh with a degree in printing management. He also has a degree in business management from Bentley College in Waltham. He spent his early childhood in Waltham before relocating to Dedham, where he attended Dedham schools and now resides.

"Transcript Newspapers feels gratified," Massey said today, "that the future seems secure. We expect this will be a long-term relationship."

N.E.N.I. Inc. said there would be no changes in the management of the Transcript group. "The new owners plan no changes in the operation," said Massey.

The Transcript Newspapers has published newspapers in the Boston area since 1870.

State blamed for inspections snafu

NEWTON — Mayor Theodore D. Mann has placed partial blame for uninspected city schools on the state Civil Service Commission, saying efforts to increase staffing in the Building Department have been hampered by delays in receiving civil service lists.

Mann admitted personnel shortages within the department should not have prevented the schools from being inspected, saying "that should always be a priority."

But regarding personnel shortages, he said, "I would have to lay the blame for that right at the doorsteps of the state, frankly... In the period of time we've been trying to hire new people, there has been an enormous problem for years in updating civil service lists."

Compounding the turmoil in the department is the recent indictment of a building inspector, Richard C. Thorne, hired by the city just six weeks ago. He pleaded innocent last week in U.S. District Court to charges that he attempted to defraud the federal government while working for the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development.

Last week, the aldermanic Public Facilities Committee voted unanimously to reconsider the Building Department's budget after approving it the previous week.

The committee has also asked Mann to appropriate $20,000 for an organizational study of the department.

South seniors win Merit Scholarships

Two city high school seniors have been declared winners of the corporate-sponsored four year Merit Scholarships, according to the NMSC, National Merit Scholarship Corporation, which conducts the annual competition.

Over one million of the nation's high school juniors took the qualifying test. Winners were chosen to be finalists based on their academic and extracurricular accomplishments, without regard for finacncial need.

Two graduating seniors of Newton South High School, Grant C. Covell of Newton Highland, and Jeanne M. McKinney of Chestnut Hill were among the selected.

Covell, recipient of the Time-Life Merit Scholarship, has been a teacher for four years at community schools, and a member and the conductor of his school orchestra. He is a free lance writer for the school newspaper as well as a writer for the school literary magazine.

McKinney, interested in pursuing a career in writing and journalism, received the Textron Merit Scholarship, which provides scholarships for eligible children of employees.

She has been the news editor for her school newspaper for three years, and student director for a school play, The Crucible. Jeanne has been secretary of the international relations club for 3 years, and a member of the French-Russian honor society.

$2.25 million for St. Jean's housing

NONANTUM — The $2,224,000 contract for the construction of 42 units of housing at the site of the old St. Jean's School, on Watertown Street, has been awarded to the Logan Plastering and Construction Company of Billerica, according to John Quatrale of the city's Planning Department.

Funds originally targeted for the project fell short of Logan's low bid, but the state kicked in the remainder, Quatrale said. He estimated that work would begin on the project within the next couple of weeks and that it could be completed in a little over a year.

Foremen sign patented '5-5-1' pact

NEWTON — Foremen last week grudgingly ended their collective bargaining dispute with the city, leaving members of the police and firefighters' unions as the only non-school employees without a new two-year contract.

Members of the Foremen's AFSCME Local 2443 voted 16-3 to accept the city's patented "5-5-1" wage hike formula, the same package already ratified by seven of the city's 10 municipal labor groups, according to bargaining team member Richard Metro.

Union President Louis Dirienzo told his membership, "We lost the battle this time, but the war is not over," according to Metro.

Bazer in race for Silbey's school seat

Gerald Bazer

NEWTON — A local state college administrator became the first resident to announce his candidacy for the School Committee in the November city election.

Gerald Bazar, of 35 Grove Street in Aurburndale, will seek the Ward 4 office to be vacated by school committee member Susan Silbey. Bazer serves as the Dean of Academic Affairs at Massachusetts Bay Community College in Wellesley.

"I (make this announcement) cognizant of the important contribution that Susan Silbey, the current School Committee member from Ward 4, has made," Bazer stated in a prepared statement.

Bazer's slogan, a "Refocus on Excellence in Education," echoes statements Silbey made recently criticizing the committee for its obsession with "process."

Bazer has served as an educator for nearly 25 years, having taught and counseled at the junior high school, high school and college level. For the past 12 years, Bazer has served as an academic administrator.

Locally, Bazer has served as co-president of the Williams Elementary School PTA for two terms while assisting with the Newton West Little League. He has two schoolchildren that attend Williams.

accounts and file CFRs every January, Licarie said.

After learning of the requirement, STOP Chairman Sam Robbins said, "It's outrageous, but if that is the law then we'll have to obey it. I find it hard to believe, but there are all kinds of subparagraphs in the law that many of us know nothing about."

CENL Treasurer David S. Wilbourne and Chairman Sandra S. Butzel could not be reached for comment.

New Japanese 'Super Pill' Insures Rapid Weight-Loss

No Dieting — Eat All You Want, Pill Does All The Work

BEVERLY HILLS, CA — An exciting new "all natural" weight-loss "Super" Pill developed by the JMA (Japanese Medical Association) has just been approved for distribution in the United States. Reportedly, it can guarantee that you will lose more than a pound a day without dieting, from the very first day until you reach your ideal weight and figure. News of this "Super Pill" is literally sweeping the country. It's called Amitol and there has never been anything quite like it before.

"Flushes Calories Right Out Of Your Body"

What makes Amitol so thrilling and unique is its reported ability to flush calories right out of your body. Amitol is completely safe, it contains no drugs whatsoever. Its ingredients are derived solely from the Konjac root which grows primarily in Northern Japan.

Why the Konjac root? It has been used in Japan for over 1600 years to produce rapid and natural weight-loss!

Japanese studies verify that Konjac root actually prevents fat producing calories from being absorbed into your system. They say it does this by surrounding much of the fats, proteins and carbohydrates you have eaten with a protective viscous coating which is then gently flushed out of your system. And according to Japanese research this produces absolutely amazing results.

And who can disagree! Amitol (although brand new to this country) is already being called by many people, "the most exciting weight-loss breakthrough of the century." In fact, everywhere there are reports of easy and fast weight-loss from formerly overweight people (in all walks of life) who are now slim, trim, and attractive again.

Company Offers Extraordinary Guarantee

You now can purchase Amitol direct from the North American distributor, and it comes with an extraordinary guarantee.

If you place your order now and then follow the simple instructions for a period of 30 days, you must be completely satisfied with the dramatic visible results or just return the empty container and Dyna Labs will immediately send back your entire purchase price. This guarantee applies regardless of your age or current weight level. What could be better than that! It's just that simple. If you've tried to lose weight before and failed you no longer have an excuse. Amitol is available, it's easy and it works without dieting!

$19.95—30 day supply, or $35.95 — 60 day supply. Order immediately by sending a check or money order to DYNA LABS, 270 No. Canon Dr., Ste. 1255 (Dept. U-11) Beverly Hills, CA, 90210. (Enclose your return address). Credit card holders can order by simply dialing toll free: (1-800-367-2400) 24 hrs a day, 7 days a week. Either way your order will be promptly sent. Please don't wait. You really do deserve to be thin.

Changes coming in the housing market

By Denis G. Gulino
UPI Economics Writer

Home buyers demanding quality

WASHINGTON — Many people are still making nearly intolerable sacrifices to buy a house. Builders and real estate sales people — their fingers crossed — are looking forward to another good year. But in a fundamental sense, analysts say, things will never be the same.

The major conclusions of housing industry analysts surveyed by United Press International are:

—"High" mortgage interest rates are not temporary but a permanent result of banking deregulation and the recent dynamic growth of the secondary mortgage market — the mechanism for recycling most mortgage money.

—The industry's lobbyists, trying to preserve important tax advantages for housing, have united in a warning about the falling proportion of home owners but are several years too late.

—Builders, facing a revolt of buyers no longer satisfied with mediocre quality, are being forced to pay much closer attention to design, detail and the peculiarities and diversity of living styles in order to survive.

—Buyers are drying up in the Sun Belt as the South and West try to emerge from a painful oil industry crisis of plenty. Houston builders can be found working in Chicago.

—Misbegotten new tax breaks and the threat that some of the old ones will be taken away have left thousands of hollow monuments — from vacant office buildings to unwanted apartment buildings, rejected condominiums and time-sharing resort units — wasted housing that will never be sold for the same billions they cost to build.

—The American housing industry is leaving the exuberance of youth, now that so many dwelling units are in existence, and entering the mature years more typical of European countries. Year-round rehabilitation, not springtime building and buying surges, are the future.

—Although agricultural land values have depreciated, living space in and around cities and towns has never been more expensive. Area, inside and out, becomes the first amenity to be sacrificed by developers and their customers.

—The ominous threat of a catastrophic collapse of housing demand remains very much alive. A higher unemployment rate later this year, a rapid decline in the foreign exchange value of the dollar, which some analysts say is already under way, or a failure of Congress to diminish government borrowing are among the possible triggers.

The sudden slowdown in the growth of the gross national product to an annual rate of only 1.3 percent in the first quarter made those threats far more credible.

Mrs. Charles Bunch looks out one window of her Anchorage, Alaska, home and sees the boats in Cook Inlet. Through another window are the mountains. "On a clear day you can see the tip of Mount McKinley," she says.

The Bunch family, with three children, is moving to Washington, D.C., but selling and buying houses are challenges they do not plan to scale.

In Anchorage, the housing "supply is starting to meet demand," she says. Sellers find the sales are less automatic and more costly.

In Washington too, it seems. There, the Bunch's real estate agent, Betty Randall, says she has never seen more houses being purchased. The firm she just left in Northern Virginia just had its best month.

But she has also never seen such caution, with sellers putting their homes on the market months earlier than the planned move and putting up with the inconvenience of showing it to buyers on Christmas, Thanksgiving and Easter.

"They just want to make sure they sell their homes," she says.

The intuition of the market place is responding to a variety of new circumstances. After decades of being a sanctuary of sorts from market risk, although suffering from periodic bouts of credit starvation, the tables have turned.

Now the risks are many but the supply of credit has become stabilized at expensive levels.

Buyers and sellers still have to contend with leaky basements. But also with the possibility of drastic tax reform that will change the nature of their holdings, of an economy that keeps the best analysts on the edge of their seats, and of new shifts in the makeup of the buying and selling population.

The old formulas, quaint in their simplicity, get less useful every day.

Home improvements: Investing in quality

By Eric Jude
Copley News Service

A home is the largest investment most people ever make, and it takes smart improvement planning to guarantee that the investment retains or increases its value.

Before making any improvement to your home, ask yourself if you'll be able to recoup the cost of the project if you sell the home in the future. If the answer is no, make sure the project at least has value to you while you're living there, according to Darrell Stanton, a veteran builder.

A second or third bathroom, particularly off the master bedroom, is a strong selling point. So is a remodeled kitchen with energy-saving appliances.

But carefully consider the other homes in your neighborhood when planning improvements, Stanton advised. For example, family rooms are popular in suburbs, but in cities there's more demand for versatile living space such as a third bedroom.

Garages usually are worth the investment in colder climates, but Stanton estimated that most people get only about a 50 percent return on the investment.

When asked about home improvements, most people think of such projects as remodeling the kitchen or adding a bathroom. But there are other, less expensive improvements that can make a difference in the quality and longevity of your home, Stanton said.

Start from the bottom and work your way up. The basement may have leaks or seepage that can be controlled by applying a sealant to walls and floors.

Is your clothes dryer vented to the outside? If not, it's pumping wetness into your home during the summer. This can cause mildew and warp furiture, walls or woodwork.

On the other hand, lack of proper moisture also can damage your home's structure and furnishings. Door and window frames can shrink and let in drafts. Furniture may become brittle and plaster walls can crack. You can control the humidity by installing a humidifier.

Installing an air cleaner is another relatively inexpensive addition that can be connected to a forced air furnace. It will remove dust, pollen and pollutants from the air circulating through it.

Smart home improvements, adding both longevity and quality to your home, are well worth the cost and effort. Not only will they make it more enjoyable for you and your family, they may make your home a standout at resale time, Stanton said.

Klafsun® UV-A Sun Systems: The easy, sensible way to be tan all year long.

PALE ISN'T YOUR COLOR

You know you look and feel better when you're tan. But, if you're like most people, maintaining a deep, rich tan just isn't practical on a year-round basis. Until now. Now, Klafsun-UV-A Sun Systems let you get a golden, natural-looking tan easily, quickly, comfortably. And they let you keep your tan all year long, with just minutes a week.

THE 20 MINUTE VACATION

Tanning with Klafsun equipment is simplicity itself. You stretch out full length on a tanning bed that's curved to follow the contours of your body. You set the automatic timing device. You relax completely. You spend but an average of 20 minutes per session. And you look like you've just come back from some fabulous and expensive tropical vacation. Sound good? You owe it to yourself to try it.

In "Chicago" these women are jailed for shooting their husbands, lovers, boyfriends and/or anyone else who gets in the way of their bullets.

'Chicago' is finger-snapping good

By Candy Kosow
Correspondent

"Chicago," by Fred Ebb and John Kander, presented by the Turtle Lane Players, now showing through May 18 at Turtle Lane Playhouse, 283 Melrose St., Newton.

What would you call a small, but well laid-out community theatre, with a lounge serving thirst-quenching beverages during intermission, enlarged still photos on the walls, a pleasant ticket-taking lady, who tells every customer to enjoy the show, and, even, clean rest rooms? I'd call it the Turtle Lane Playhouse, on Melrose Street in Newton. And, what would you call a toe-tapping, finger-snapping, whirl of color and sight, set in the mid-west, after the turn of the century? I'd call that, "Chicago." The combination of the two makes for a fun evening's entertainment.

The show centers on the rough and tumble, shoot-em up world of that toddling town in the roaring 1920s. A time when the booze was cold, the women 'hot' and guns smoking all over town. And it wasn't just mobsters and shady characters that were carrying hardware. Some of these gun-wielding residents of Illinois were ladies. Well, maybe not ladies, per se, but they were females.

"Chicago" showcases seven women, who are all in jail because they shot their husbands, lovers, boyfriends, and/or anyone else who manages to get in the way of their bullets. The two female leads in the show are among this dirty half-dozen, plus one.

Velma is a singer/dancer, who feels lots of publicity and an acquittal will revive her somewhat sagging career. Roxie never had the spotlight, so she feels the notoriety and a not guilty decision will make her a star. Both women enlist the high priced aid of that dashing, slightly under-handed, legal beagle, Billy Flynn.

Of course, all's well that ends well in the world of musical comedy, but first we must get through two acts, 20 songs, a few dance numbers and some pretty spiffy orchestration.

Donald Baillargeon is absolutely wonderful as Billy. He is charismatic enough to steal center stage away from the ladies, and his vocalizations are impeccable.

Natalie-Anne Doliner as Velma is the only real dancer in the cast. Her lithe body moves with great style and rhythm across the art deco stage. She possesses the right sense of comedic timing needed to act in a musical, but unfortunately, her singing lacks range and projection.

On the other hand, Cheryl Salatino delivers a strong protrayal as Roxie Hart, largely because she does have the belting vocals needed to carry off this part. Miss Salatino does need work on her acting. Some of her dialogue and physical gestures got lost in the on-stage action.

Honorable mentions must go to Deborah Parks as the Matron and Jaye Bowen as Mary Sunshine. Their antics certainly contributed to the chuckles coming from the audience.

Howard Bowles plays the Master of Ceremonies, as well as being the conductor and the music director of this production. The orchestra, which is perched atop the stage, rather than sitting in a pit, sounded totally professional, and added a great deal of pizzazz to the musical numbers.

Dan Dowling's direction and choreography is nothing special, but he did keep the pacing tight and the performances, upbeat.

"Chicago" is a Fred Ebb-John Kander collaboration. This writing duo faired better in the theatre with "Cabaret" and in movies with "New York, New York," but "Chicago" does play better than their most recent Broadway bomb, "The Rink." It's a nice, little revue which does feature one outstanding song and dance number called "All That Jazz." This tune is a real showstopper, and has been covered by just about every lounge singer that ever stepped up to a microphone.

"Chicago" is the Turtle Lane's final show this season. It runs through May 18. Season subscriptions are already being taken for the 1985-86 season, consisting of "Fiddler on the Roof," "Baby," "Guys and Dolls" and "Pirates of Penzance." For more information, call the Turtle Lane at 244-0169 for more information.

107 years as volunteers

By David Weber
Staff Writer

Jay and Jeanette Burack — Dave Weber photo

NEWTON — For 43 years, Felix Edenfeld of Oak Hill has devoted his Sunday evenings to volunteer work in Boston's Beth Israel Hospital.

Robert Davis and Jay Burack, both of Newton Centre, have been volunteering at the hospital for 42 years and 22 years, respectively.

That's 107 years of volunteer work among the three of them and it accounts for about one quarter of the total number of years a current staff of approximately 70 volunteers has given to the hospital.

Like many other volunteers, these men give up five hours, and sometimes more, of their free time each week to help those less fortunate than themselves.

Sunday, Beth Israel Hospital held an awards breakfast to honor and thank its volunteers. Edenfeld and Davis have attended many in the past and did not go. Burack and his wife, Jeanette, were present as they have been for the last 22 years.

Edenfeld and Burack talked about their work in separate interviews.

Edenfeld, 71, began his volunteer work at Beth Israel on April 1, 1942 as part of the Male Volunteer Corps. The corps was started during World War II as a partial solution to a shortage of hospital personnel.

Edenfeld said the volunteer duties have changed dramatically as medical technology has improved over the years. When he began, the male volunteers were responsible for carrying ice for drinking water up from the basement, setting up oxygen tents, making beds, administering enemas, and washing and shaving male patients on nights prior to scheduled surgery.

About four years ago, doctors at the hospital discovered that washing the patients in the operating room just prior to surgery significantly reduced instances of infection among patients. So that part of the volunteer work was scrapped.

Since then, he has worked in the intensive care unit, aiding the nurses and running errands to the blood bank and the pharmacy.

Edenfeld likes his current work, saying, "You get your thanks right there from the nurses when you leave at night. I enjoy it. I always have."

Edenfeld came to the United States in December 1938 as a refugee from Germany. Shortly thereafter, he moved from New York City to Brookline. In 1939 he was an outpatient at Beth Israel and he said, "They took excellent care of me and I felt that if there was one payoff I could do for them, it was to work as a volunteer. If we couldn't give them money, we gave them hours so the hospital could save money."

He has lived in Newton for a number of years now and works in Brockton for Geoffrey Beene Part Two, in its accounts receivable department. But his Sundays still belong to Beth Israel.

"As long as God lets me work, then I will. My wife has made the sacrifice because I'm always gone Sunday nights. When we were married, I gave up the weekdays," he said. Prior to their marriage in 1946, Edenfeld also worked two nights each week at the hospital.

Jay Burack's favorite part of volunteering is visiting patients from out of town. He said businessmen or salesmen who suffer heart attacks or other ailments while visiting Boston often find themselves in the hospital, feeling very lonely.

"I just talk to them and try to alleviate any anxieties they might have," he said. Burack, 64, feeds patients who cannot help themselves and takes them for walks through the halls for exercise. He also works in the hospital's gift shop.

He has lived in Newton for almost 35 years and for 40 years, has owned Jay's Jewelers in Roslindale Square.

More than anything else, he provides companionship for people who need it. He always checks the patient list to see if there is anyone in the hospital he might know. If there are, they are likely to see him drop by their rooms for some friendly conversation.

"Volunteering is very productive for me. After a night's work, I feel as if I've done something worthwhile. I really enjoy this and wouldn't give it up," said Burack.

Silbey prefers family life to politics

By Robert K. Newman
Staff Writer

NEWTON — When a political history of the Garden City is written, School Committee member Susan Silbey would like to be known as the person who put Auburndale on the map.

"People once asked, 'Where is the Williams School?,'" Silbey said in an interview this week. "Nobody is unaware of Auburndale now. Mayor Mann told me it's my fault that taxes have gone up in our part of the city."

Six years have passed since Silbey was first elected to the Ward 4 School Committee seat. But, recently, the self-proclaimed "most outspoken School Committee member" opted not to seek re-election in November.

"The realization struck me that I have a child who will graduate from high school," she explained. "If I run again I will have spent her high school years giving more time to everyone but her."

The decision to step out of the public eye was not easy for the Wellesley College sociology professor and mother of two. However, she says her respite is temporary, declaring "some form of politics" will be in her future.

As one of eight representatives charged with overseeing the school system, Silbey has weathered both social and political storms, school closings and collective bargaining negotiations.

"I learned a lot about politics," she said. "While it's good to have vision and your own ideas, it's most important to listen. I didn't give enough credence to the fact that probably the best solutions come out of discourse and discussions rather than telling people what you think."

Throughout her tenure, Silbey has unsuccessfully protested the shape of the table at public meetings. She claims it prohibits members from facing each other in conversation.

"So I spent a lot of time trying to get people into situations just to talk," she said. "I think I've failed at that."

Recalling her years on the committee, Silbey said she is also disappointed by the committee's failure to speak about education because "everyone is submerged in the the process and not in talking about what is happening in the classrooms," she said.

If you won't talk, we can't listen.

Boston Edison wants to hear your point of view.

So we're holding a special meeting in Newton to listen and talk to you about our energy future.

We want to learn how you feel about energy issues, specifically electricity issues, and to answer any questions you have.

Come hear what's new.

And we're eager to share information—to fill you in on special issues and projects, including our plans to control costs by exploring cheaper fuel sources, and our efforts to meet the ever-increasing demand for electricity.

You'll also have the chance to win a complimentary door prize—an energy-saving deluxe toaster oven.

Bring your questions and ideas.

So come to our community meeting with your questions and ideas. Because such important programs as our IMPACT 2000 Solar House, the installation of coal scrubbers at the proposed coal conversion of our South Boston Station, and conservation proposals for home and businesses have all developed from past Boston Edison community meetings.

And that's why it's important for you to come. Because if you won't talk, we can't listen.

Self-analysis for Democrats

Barney's frank about the future

John Moroney
Correspondent

NEWTON — The Democratic Party has nothing to fear but itself, Rep. Barney Frank told a gathering of Newton's Ward Two Democratic Committee last weekend.

Speaking to a group of about 50 persons at the home of Jerry and Barbara Wise, Frank said that democrats are "substantively better on the issues than republicans," but spend too much time "beating each other over the head" with rhetorical differences.

"If we can't accept the ideological co-partisan for granted, we can't win an election," Frank said.

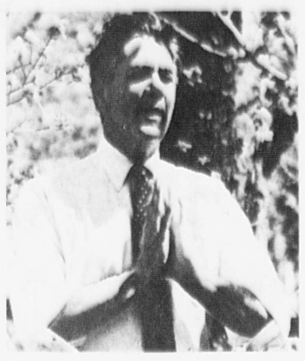

The emotional way in which democrats conduct themselves and arrive at party policy, Frank said, is poorly perceived by the electorate. Since the party represents such a vast number of special interests, he added, voters feel the party is often controlled by interest groups.

Despite the logistical problems which plague the democrats, Frank believes the party is still the most, "liberal political process in America."

"I don't think there are many substantive issues that liberal democrats have held that are unpopular," Frank said.

Historically, such issues include the party's approach to the economy, as opposed to the Republican approach. Frank tried to dispel the notion that the Democratic Party was anti-business while the "other side of the aisle" promoted the idea of laissez-fair.

Frank said he and his colleagues have encouraged legislation for businesses and small companies. He cited as an example, current laws which allow small businesses to merge inorder to form exporting companies which promote economic growth at home and aboard.

> 'I don't think there are many substantive issues that liberal Democrats have held that are unpopular.'
> Cong. Barney Frank

Ronald Reagan and a majority of the Republican Party, Frank said, believe that if the economy is healthy and maintains good economic growth than "everything is OK."

"I disagree. Being healthy is necessary to economic growth — but not sufficient," Frank said.

This is why the government has adopted programs that address occupational safety, pollution and a myriad of industrial-related problems, Frank said.

"They (Republicans) present themselves as a party that is concerned with values that we take for granted," Frank said.

Frank believes the Democratic Party is on the upswing because of what he calls "counter-cultural tendencies." Frank said the party that controls the country's political mood is seen as the "establishment," and open to greater criticism.

"It's (criticism) going to happen more and more with Ronald Reagan," Frank said.

Taking more direct aim at the president, Frank attacked Reagan's upcoming visit to the Bitburg military cemetery which contains graves of Nazi Germany's Waffen SS troops.

"Everytime he addresses it, he makes it worse," Frank said.

When Reagan first decided to visit the German cemetery, Frank explained, he justified his actions by telling the country, "hardly anybody in Germany remembers the war."

"He's planning to take his wife, who is 62. Does he think she'll be the only one there who remembers the war," Frank quipped.

Frank sees the visit and its repercussions as a new signal to President Reagan, which says he "is now responsible for his actions."

The House of Representatives has taken the first steps in forcing the president to make responsible decisions, Frank said, because his budget will reach the House for a vote while he is laying wreaths in Bitburg.

"I don't think he can get that budget," Frank said, referring to the likelihood of Reagan's budget passing in the House. A stumbling block to ratification of the budget in the House is the "military budget," Frank said.

"There has been a great increase in the military, and I don't think its necessary," he added.

Frank also explained that increases in the military budget, unlike Social Security, are figured at a post-inflationary rate which is a percentage above the current inflation rate.

North scores fifth in decathalon

NEWTONVILLE — With less than 12 hours remaining before the kickoff of the National Academic Decathalon, Newton North High School students huddled in their hotel rooms drafting last minute speeches.

Procrastination during the four-hour plane ride forced the team into pre-game seclusion. In other rooms, opponents were memorizing orations prepared at an earlier date. By relying on "genuine talent," the Newton team hoped for a "respectable showing."

The team, which placed first in the state competition last November, was comfortable with this impromptu approach to the contest. After all, as one participant said, "We were there to have fun.

"At the national level we got to meet people from all over the country," Jeffrey Liebman said. "Meeting someone from Alaska was a great experience."

The six-member Garden City team was supported by Hunnewell Corporation, funds raised through candy sales and several private contributors.

To prepare for the competition, individuals were asked to read prescribed literature as well as study about World War II, biology, physics, chemistry, economics and the fine arts. For two months, the team gathered at least once a week for several hours.

When the competition ended and the Newton team placed fifth in the nation, students and faculty deemed the finish "a fantastic achievement."

"It has to be a decision made the previous year that the team is going to go all out for this," team advisor Jim Schreider said. "We didn't feel this was the way to do it.

"Our goal wasn't to come in first, it was to enjoy the experience," he added.

If Schreider had recruited students to be participate exclusively in the team, Liebman, Decky Gander, Pablo Silva, Jim Patriquin, Dan Weinfeld and David Sgan would not have been the proper choices.

"Our group had so many things to do, it was hard to get them together," Schreider explained, noting each student's music and athletic achievements. "This was just a part of their activities versus some schools that devoted their entire year to the competition.

"It shouldn't be your only extracurricular activity," Liebman added.

Launched 17 years ago in Orange County, California, the Academic Decathalon was intended to capture some of the excitement traditionally reserved for athletics.

"One of the problems with test is that it relies on memorization and not thinking," Liebman said. "It could have asked for your views on the causes of the war or what could have been done to stop the war."

Liebman also said he learned that what's good in one area of the country does not necessarily suit another region. The senior won a "gold metal" for his speech in the state competition. At the national level, judges were not as generous.

"I think they were a little bit more conservative out there," he said.

In his speech Liebman criticized the conclusions raised in one of the books participants were asked to read.

Martin keeps Tigers on roll

QUINCY — Southpaw Bob Martin pitched five innings of one-hit, shutout ball as Newton North continued to roll through the Suburban League, wasting North Quincy, 11-2, at Adams Field on Monday.

North, now 7-2, will go head-to-head with yet-to-be-beaten Suburban foe Waltham at home on Friday in what should be a hot-and-heavy battle.

North struck for three first-inning runs and added a pair in each of the next two frames to build a lead it would not relinquish.

Artie Aaron walked to lead off the game and took second on an attempted pick-off gone sour. He went to third on a passed ball before scoring on an Aldo Calcagni sacrafice to centerfield. Bob Martin started things off again for North with a single and a stolen base, advanced to third on an error, and scored on a Greg Larson single. Larson later came home on another error.

Calcagni drove in two more runs with a single in the second, scoring Jim Proia and Britt Ryan. Proia then matched Calcagni's effort with a two-run single in the third to put North up 7-0.

North Quincy scored solo runs in the sixth and seventh innings.

Proia had four RBI's in the game while Calcagni knocked in two. Larson, who has been killing the ball for North, collected two hits and two RBI's.

South loses in 8th

The Newton South baseball squad lost an extra-inning heartbreaker to Lincoln-Sudbury Monday, 9-7, after an eighth-inning rally fell short.

Newton South scored two in the fifth and three in the seventh to send the game into extra innings. But in the eighth, an infield error by the Lions led to Lincoln-Sudbury scoring four unearned runs.

The Warriors were leading 4-0 when Newton South started on the comeback trail. With two out and Greg Manthei and Judd Cohen on the bases via singles, Darvell Huffman walked to load the bases and bring up Mark Maiocca, the Lions' leading hitter with a .412 average after going 1 for 4 against Lincoln-Sudbury. Maiocca singled home Manthei and Cohen to cut the lead to 4-2.

Lincoln-Sudbury added a run in the sixth, but Newton South scored three times with two men out to send the game into extra innings.

With Huffman on via a walk, Steve Altman belted a long single to center. After a passed ball, Matt Spengler drove a hot shot past third to score Huffman and send Altman to third. When the Warriors' left fielder threw the ball away, Altman scored and Spengler took second. Pillan Thirumalaisamy promptly singled home Spengler to tie the game.

In the eighth inning the Lions' defense let down pitcher Jon Glick, who picked two runners off base and struck out eight in his eight innings of work.

The hitters tried to make amends in the home half of the inning, but fell short. The Lions loaded the bases on walks. Huffman forced in one run with a ground out, and Maiocca drove in another with a sacrifice-fly. A single by Altman kept the inning alive. But that was all the Newton South scoring there was to be.

The Lions, now 3-1 in the DCL and 3-2 overall, are at home Wednesday afternoon when they entertain Acton-Boxboro.

BU's top award goes to Newton's D. Quinn

Debbie Quinn

BOSTON — Debbie Quinn of Newton, a First-Team All-Seaboard Conference player for the Boston University women's basketball team, was named the university's 1984-85 Female Athlete of the Year. She received the Mildred Barnes Award at the annual end-of-the-year banquet on April 16.

Paul Lewis, a two-time All-America tailback for the Terrier football team, was named the Male Athlete of Year and received the Mickey Cochrane Award.

Quinn was the leading rebounder on the women's basketball team with an 8.8 average and the second-leading scorer wuth 10.9 points a game, despite missing the last seven games due to aknee knjury.

A versatile athlete, Quinn played both guard and forward as she started in 17 games. She was named to the All-Tournament team of the Queens Holiday Classic, leading the Terriers to a second-place finish. She scored 34 points and pulled down 35 rebounds in the three-game series.

In addition, Debbie was named to the ECAC Honor Roll after leading the team to wins over Siena and Northeastern. She had 51 points and 29 rebounds in the two games.

North girls 'net' Brockton

BROCKTON — Without the services of its star player, Diana McCarthy, the Newton North girls' tennis team still had little trouble sweeping past Brockton, 5-0, for its second Suburban League victory.

Lise Abrams, Sarah O'Brien, and Wendy Fullertor, posted singles victories,while the doubles teams of Liz Melhado and Karen Thompson, and Nancy Green and Marcy Plotkin dominated their Brockton rivals.

Newton South thrashed Bedford, 5-0, to give it a 2-1 record in the Dual County League.

South's Mimi Kaufman topped Diana Birmingham, while Nicole Jackson and Kaly Upshaw also won handily in the singles. Leslie Semonian and Ellen Jacobs and Lisa Teuscher and Stacy Millander prevailed in the doubles matches.

Hackel HR lifts South girls, 16-4

SUDBURY — The Newton South girls' softball team won big Monday as it walloped Lincoln-Sudbury, 16-4, on the Warriors' home field.

First baseman Stacey Hackel keyed the Lions' attack with a three-run homer, her first of the year, as Newton South hung five runs on the board in the opening frame and never looked back. DH Jessica Olansky singled home the Lions' two other first-inning runs.

Freshman lefthander Julie Blankstein went the distance for Newton South, winning her fifth of the year against a lone loss. She allowed seven hits, walked three and struck out one.

North holds on

Newton North jumped out to an 8-0 lead after two innings, saw North Quincy close to within four runs, and then exploded for seven more runs in a wild fifth inning to outlast North Quincy 15-12.

Robin Silver led the Tigers' 15 hit attack with a four for five afternoon. Sophomore Wendy Rogers tripled and homered and drove in six runs. Shortstop Jackie Kinsella not only had a good day in the field for Newton North but went two for two at bat.

Coach Carolyn Harrington complimented the hard work of catcher Nuela Harkin. "She works very hard and does a good job handling our pitchers," said Harrington.

Newton North is now 2-1 in the league and 4-4 overall. The Tigers play again Friday at Waltham.

Watertown dropped a 29-5 loss to Reading at Victory Field.

Garry Keil of Newton

Newton's Keil enters Bentley Hall of Fame

WALTHAM — Garry Keil of Newton, a 1969 graduate of Bentley College, was one of six former athletes recently inducted into the college's Athletic Hall of Fame.

Inducted along with Keil were former women's basketball and field hockey star Judy Paratore ('79), all-time soccer leading scorer John Jackson ('76), track standout Tom Kelly ('76), hockey star James Mills ('70) and basketball captain Bob Walker ('67).

The six honorees bring the total number of Bentley Hall of Famers to 12. Sponsored by the college's Falcon Club, the Athletic Hall of Fame held its first induction in 1984.

Keil played just one year of varsity baseball for Bentley College, captaining the college's first team in 1969. He helped lead the Falcons to a 9-4 record, a veryimpressive mark considering Coach Bob DeFelice's squad did not have a home field.

As a pitcher, Keil won three of four decisions and compiled a school-record 1.02 ERA in 26.1 innings of work. When not pitching, Garry saw action in right field and at second base. He hit .216 with one homer, seven RBIs. seven sacrifices and a .408 on base percentage.

Since graduation, Keil has remained very active with Bentley athletics. He regularly throws batting practice for the current varsity (still coached by DeFelice) and was instrumental in founding the Diamond Club and the annual Alumni baseball game.

England tour planned

NEW YORK (UPI) — The U.S. national soccer team will play England in an exhibition game in Los Angeles June 16, it was announced Monday.

The game at the Los Angeles Memorial Coliseum marks the 35th anniversary of the United States' historic 1-0 decision over England in the 1950 World Cup, the greatest soccer victory for the Americans.

England and the United States are in the process of qualifying for the 1986 World Cup in Mexico.

The next qualifying game for the United States is against Trinidad & Tobago May 15 in St. Louis. Costa Rica is the other nation in the group. The winner of that group advances to the final qualifying round to determine the World Cup representative from North and Central America and the Caribbean.

Before meeting the United States, the English will take part in an early-June tournament in Mexico in which they will play exhibition games against Italy, Mexico and West Germany in the span of a week.

Rule Dr. Goldman completed marathon

WABAN - The BAA has ruled Dr. Robert Goldman of 118 Uplan Road was among the finishers in the Boston Marathon in a time of 3 hours and 43 minutes. Dr. Goldman's wife, Jane, said, "He was about a half hour off. The heat got to him, but he finished his 10th marathon anyway." The father of five children, Dr. Goldman has raced in about 39 long distance events.

Bernstein again N.E. net champ

WELLESLEY — Newton's Bobby Bernstein of Brandeis University won his second straight individual singles New England tennis championship over the weekend in a tournament held at Babson College.

Bernstein then teamed with fellow senior Marshall Fisher of Miami, Florida, to take the doubles championship. Bernstein and Fisher were finalists in last year's doubles championship.

Brandeis placed four on the all-New England team. In addition to Bernstein and Fisher, Brandeis freshmen Adam Feldman and David Bilgrei were selected for the honor.

As number one seed in the tournament and defending champion, Bernstein drew a bye in first round competition. In the second round against unseeded John Tavares of Southeastern Mass., Bernstein won 6-3, 3-6, 6-3 in what proved to be his toughest match.

Bernstein, who had beaten Tavares a couple of times in prior competitions, was a little unsettled by the stiff front put up by the SMU senior. Tavares was the only player to take a set from Bernstein.

"Bobby was a little ragged in the second set, but he calmly put it all together to win the set and match," said his coach Tom Foley.

Bernstein won his quarterfinal and semifinal matches in straight sets, 6-2, 6-1 over David Ledversis of Bryant College in the quarterfinal and 6-3, 6-0 in the semifinal over the University of Vermont's sixth-seeded John Fayroian.

"Against UVM's Fayroian, Bobby gave a tennis clinic," said Foley. "He just overwhelmed the other player. Bobby could have beaten anyone in that match. The key was that he was able to use all his weapons."

In the finals, Bernstein defeated John Kline from Hartford University 6-4, 6-2. Kline, the number three seed, earlier had defeated number two seed Paul Arciero to gain the spot against Bernstein.

"Bobby played a very intelligent match in the finals. He used the best tactics against Kline, to mix up speeds. He did not try to overpower him," said Foley.

In the doubles, Bernstein and Fisher marched through five opponents in straight sets, defeating the number 2 seeds, Paul Arciero and Chris Goddard, 6-1, 6-0.

"They dominated the doubles tournament. They were never in trouble at any time," Foley said.

Bernstein already has an invitation to the national collegiate championships to be held in the middle of May at Washington and Lee University in Lexington, Virginia. Foley was hopeful that the Bernstein-Fisher doubles combo would draw an invitation as well.

Sharpshooter

Newton's Cecelia Wilcox has scored 20 goals in leading the Tufts University women's lacrosse team to a 6-0 start. Wilcox, a sophomore, has scored at least one goal in every game (18) of her college career. The Jumbos are ranked third in the national small college polls.

Dalicandro leads North stickmen

The Newton North lacrosse squad, maybe looking ahead a bit to this week's important clash with Lincoln-Sudbury, found themselves behind, 3-2, after one quarter against Billerica Friday at the Newton North Field before storming back to win an 11-8 shootout.

Tigers' superstar Tommy Dalicandro continued his assault on rival goaltenders by putting four more in the net against Billerica.

"He's been doing just a great job both offensively and defensively. He's been the most consistent player on the field," said head coach Rick Clark.

The Tigers jumped into a 7-4 lead by halftime and moved to an 11-6 advantage after three quarters. Clark got all his players into the game in the final quarter.

Fran Yeradi (2 goals), John Flynn, Paul Haley, Charlie Albanese, Dan Nardone, and Kevin McGrath got the other Newton North goals.

This coming Friday the Tigers entertain Lincoln-Sudbury in a matchup that Clark bills as "the best in the east."

While Lincoln-Sudbury is undefeated and Newton North's record is an unimpressive 5-4, Clark feels the record could be deceiving.

"We've played tougher competition than they have," he said.

Clark hasn't seen Lincoln-Sudbury play so really has no idea what to expect. But, he says confidently, "When we play our game, we can beat anybody."

"I expect a very emotional, very intense game. We'll see how we stack up. I don't really know how good they are."

Lions even record

Newton South lacrosse evened its record at 3-3 Friday at Danvers with a 7-5 victory over St John's.

Dave Kowal and Neil Schwartz each had two goals for the Lions. Kowal also assisted on three other goals.

Matt Ranan, Chris Berwind, Garth Bloch, and Scott Passman had single goals as Newton South opened a 6-1 lead over the Eagles after three quarters of play.

Alex Levine went the distance in the Newton South goal.

Coach Paul Murphy emptied the Newton South bench in the final quarter. St John's scored 4 times to make the final score look closer than the game really was.

The Lions really put this one away in the first quarter with goals by Schwartz, who played a fine game, and Kowal and Passman.

"We played well," said Murphy. He also had special praise for Whitney Dorf who was a key contributor by winning 13 of 16 faceoffs for the Lions.

A's Rooney in Central 1-hitter

NEWTON — Brian Rooney tossed a one-hitter in opening-day action as the Athletics topped the Giants, 12-2, Sunday in the Newton Central Little League played at Leo Reilly Field.

Rooney, a righty, struck out 12 over six innings and also led the charge at the plate. He collected three hits in three tries, including two doubles, to knock in three runs. Jon Shocket added had two hits for the A's.

For the Giants, Billy Cowin and Jon Lesser split the duties atop the hill. On offense, Josh Borus singled to post the Giants' lone hit of the afternoon.

Ben Weisbuch may have walked 12, but he still tossed a no-hitter on Tuesday as the Yankees ripped the Athletics, 9-4, in Newton Central Little League action at Cabot Park. Weisbuch struck out nine.

Shortstop Jeff Abrams knocked home five runs with two doubles and a single to lead the offense. John Rouffe added a triple, single and three RBIs.

Newton East opens

Khary Brown led the charge from the mound while Liam Galbreth swung a heavy bat as the Red Sox dropped the Orioles, 14-5, in Newton East Little League opening day competition played at Jay Gordon Field on Saturday.

Brown, a righty, picked up the win for the Sox, hurling three innings of one-hit ball and striking out eight. At the plate, Galbreth connected for a pair of doubles and drove home four runs.

On Sunday, the Yankees disposed of the Dodgers, 15-2, on the strong pitching of P.J. Timmins, who whiffed 12 batters.

Jeremy Pozen was hot with the lumber for the Yanks, plating six runs on two triples and a double.

Brian White threw a one-hitter and struck out 15 to lead the Phillies over the Tigers, 7-2. John Churchill had two hits and a pair of RBI's for the Phillies.

9-year-old Jake Harney scores ace at Woodland

Just maybe the Woodland Golf Club in Auburndale has a candidate for the Guinness World Book of Records.

Where else in all of the universe is there a 9-year-old golfer who has scored a hole-in-one.? John "Jake" Harney, who reached that birth date just six weeks earlier, became an instant celebrity when the shot he hit on the 4th hole traveled about 135 yards and went into the cup.

Jake is the son of Joseph D. and Mari-Jo Harney, Woodland members for seven years. He is a third grader in Hopkinton. He was playing with his mother Sunday afternoon when the great event happened.

Te club the Harneys will treasure was a Chi Chi Rodriquez No. 2 wood acquired by Jake last season. This was his third time out in 1985. Last summer he acquired junior clubs and the game's fundamentals in a clinic conducted by Calire Nolan of Waltham, six-time women's champion at the club.

Witness to the ace was member Ed White of West Newton, who was standing on the 11th green and saw it all the way. Word spread rapidly through the clubhouse. The result was a gallery waiting for Jake and Mari-Jo as they came up to the 18th green, with Claire Nolan leading the apllause. The complete card for young Mr. Harney was 69-71-140.

International tryouts to begin

The Newton Parks and Recreation Department announced today its tryouts for the International League will begin in May. The league, in its 32nd year of existence, is designed for boys ages 13-15 and includes 12 teams.

League play starts during the first weekl of June and ends the first week in August. The tryouts are the first three Saturdays in May (with some Sunday tryouts), and the following times and places:

Upper Falls Tigers at Upper Falls, 9 a.m.-1 p.m.

Oakley Spa at Albemarle, 1-5 p.m.

Boys' Club at Albemarle, 9 a.m.-1 p.m.

St. Bernard's at W.N. Common, 1-5 p.m.

Elks Red Sox at Warren Jr., 9:30 a.m.-1 p.m.

Abruzzi at Highlands, 9 a.m.-1 p.m.

Auburndale Warriors at W.N. Common, 9 a.m.-1 p.m.

Troubadour Restaurant at Lincoln, 9 a.m.-noon.

Oak Hill Cubs at Newton South; Sundays, May 5, 12, 19 from 10 a.m.-noon.

Carson Post Legion at Weeks; Saturday, May 4; Sunday, May 12; Saturday, May 18, from 9 a.m.-noon.

Newton Bantams tourney finalists

Newton's Bantam A youth hockey team went to the finals of the Tri-Borough tournament recently before falling to Long Island, 4-3, in triple overtime.

The local team had already beaten Long Island, 2-1, earlier in the tourney.

After tying East Boston in the opener, 4-4, Newton belted Waltham, 8-1, then edged Long Island to gain a semifinal berth. Needham proved no obstacle in that round, as Newton took an 8-1 decision. The finals were a different story, as Long Island got even with Newton and won the title in the thriller.

The final game will be broadcast on Newton Cable's Channel 3 at a future date.

Police log

Gun thrust at woman through window

NEWTON CENTRE — A Boston woman sitting in a parked car on Beacon Street near the Newton Centre Post Office last week may have thought her life was coming to a violent end when a 16-year-old Newton High School student allegedly thrust a pistol into the window of the car, pointed it at her head and fired.

The gun turned out to be a starter's pistol, rather than a real one, and fired a blank instead of a bullet, police said. The woman was startled by the shot but was uninjured, according to police.

Police reportedly arrested the juvenile at 2:40 p.m. after witnesses chased him down. The 16-year-old was accompanied by another teenager who eluded capture, police said.

The pair approached the car, which was parked at 747 Beacon Street, shortly after 2:30 p.m. when the 16-year-old allegedly reached through the window and pulled the trigger once, police said.

Police said both teenagers ran from the car, which was parked near the intersection of Langley Road, but two witnesses chased them.

According to police, the Newton High student threw the pistol under another parked car as he fled. Witnesses held the mock gunman until police arrived and the pistol was recovered, police said.

Jewish center is damaged by fire

OAK HILL — The Jewish Community Center will have to do without its arts and crafts room temporarily following a fire last week at the 333 Nahanton Street building, according to Firefighter Mark Roche.

The fire began in the arts and crafts room on the fifth floor where a soldering iron, left plugged-in, ignited a wooden bench, Roche said.

Roche said an automatic fire alarm notified the fire department at 8:46 p.m. and activated the community center's sprinkler system.

Assistant Chief William Dwyer supervised the four engines and two ladders responding to the fire, which took just under two hours to extinguish completely, Roche reported.

The blaze forced none of the center's programs to be cancelled. They will be moved to another room, a secretary there said.

According to the fire department report, the fire caused an estimated $10,000 damage, with smoke damage to the fifth floor and water damage to the first four floors.

$500 toolbox and $115 in cash is stolen

NEWTON CENTRE — A theft at Wayside Cleaners last week netted tools and a toolbox worth $500 and more than $115 in cash, police said.

Sometime between 6:30 p.m. and 6:30 a.m., when the theft was reported, a door panel at the 980 Boylston Street business was smashed and the business entered. In addition to the tool box, $40 to $50 in quarters and $75 to $100 in cash was taken, according to the police report.

Changing radio stations causes crash

NEWTON — A Newton man changing the stations of his car radio early Sunday morning lost control and struck a tree by 1151 Commonwealth Avenue, resulting in an injury to a passenger in the car, police said.

According to the police report, Theresa Corrigan, 138 Charles Bank Road, was taken by ambulance to Newton-Wellesley Hospital for injuries resulting from the 3:35 a.m. accident. She was treated and released, a hospital spokesman said.

Mark G. McGonagle, 929 Commonwealth Avenue, drove his 1974 Oldsmobile Cutlass into a tree on the median strip, police reported.

Waban man injured in two-car accident

NEWTON UPPER FALLS — A 65-year-old Waban man was treated and released at Newton-Wellesley Hospital after the car he was driving Saturday afternoon struck a car owned by a Natick woman, police and hospital spokesmen reported.

Henry Kendall, 191 Winslow Road, was transported to the hospital by ambulance following the accident, which occurred at 1:30 p.m. at the intersection of Elliot Street and Carriage Street, police reported.

Pair of cars vandalized at high school

NEWTONVILLE — A pair of cars parked in the Newton North High School lot were broken into Saturday night, police said.

Police reported that a window was smashed and the dashboard damaged on a 1980 Jaguar owned by a Lexington man. Nothing was reported missing, according to police. The rear window of a Dorchester man's 1978 Volvo was also smashed, police said, and a wallet containing checks and credit cards was taken. The thefts were reported at 10:56 p.m. and 11:35 p.m. respectively.

Cash stolen from Walnut Street home

NEWTON — More than $500 in cash and change was reported stolen Saturday from a house on Walnut Street while the homeowner raked leaves outside, police said.

Police reported that a wallet holding $500 in cash and several credit cards, and two containers of change were stolen from a house on the 1200 block of Walnut Street. The theft occurred sometime between 11:45 a.m. and 12:15 p.m., according to police. Police said entrance was gained into the home through the back door, which was unlocked.

Tax evasion nipped

WALTHAM — A 41-year-old Newton Centre man must give 200 hours of community service after pleading guilty last week to 58 counts of failing to file and failing to pay over-meal taxes at his Boston sandwich shop, according to a state Department of Revenue spokesman.

Alan R. Sack, 261 Parker Street, was also sentenced to a six-month suspended sentence and three years of probation. In addition, Sack will have to pay back the $40,000 owed in taxes, interest and penalties.

Sack was president of Max Sax Inc., which operated Subs-n-Such at 660 Huntington Avenue, Boston. He was indicted in January, with eight other individuals and three businesses, for evading taxes between March 1980 and December 1982.

The indictment followed an investigation by the Revenue Department's Criminal Investigation Bureau.

John F. Callahan, who ran Callahan's in Newton, Wayland and Northboro was sentenced last week to six months at the Deer Island House of Correction in the stiffest penalty ever given in the Commonwealth.

Godino jailed for fraud

BOSTON — A Newton man who bilked people seeking mortgages at low rates pleaded guilty to five counts of mail fraud and was sentenced last week at U.S. District Court to six months imprisonment.

Manuel Paul Godino, 38, of 11 Woodhaven Road, was also ordered by Federal Judge Walter J. Skinner to a probationary term of five years. Godino was also ordered to pay restitution following his release from custody.

According to court documents, Godino pleaded guilty on March 27 to charges that he created a fictitious mortgage company in 1982 through which he advertised large mortgages at considerably below the prevailing interest rates.

Those who applied for the mortgages were required to forward advance fees to Godino "as protection against time consuming and frivilous applications," according to case files.

Bus company owner is jailed for evasion of security taxes

NEWTON — The owner of Commonwealth Bus Inc., the bus company that transports public school children in Newton, was convicted in Boston Municipal Court last week of 52 counts of failure to pay $860,000 in employment security taxes from 1978 to 1983.

Richard W. Zimmerman, 52, of Lexington, was ordered to serve six months in jail, but the sentence was stayed until Oct. 24 for review by the court. Zimmerman was also fined $26,000 and ordered to pay all of the back taxes.

Commonwealth Bus has held the main busing contract with the city's schools since 1979.

Spring into Spring

CAREER OPEN HOUSE

Thursday, May 2
9:00-11:00 a.m.
& 5:00-8:00 p.m.

Friday, May 3
8:30 a.m.-noon

April showers bring May flowers. And May flowers bring budding opportunities at the BayBanks Systems Spring Open House. Now you can flourish in any number of positions including:

- Field Service
- Warehouse Services
- Operations
- Customer Service
- Data Entry
- Statement Processing
- Bank Equipment
- Check Processing
- Office Support
- Distribution

And that's just a sampling. We have openings for people with experience or those new to the job market. And all our positions can be tailored to fit your particular needs. With three shifts to choose from, you'll find full- and part-time hours and job-sharing available, making BayBanks Systems the right place with the right hours for you.

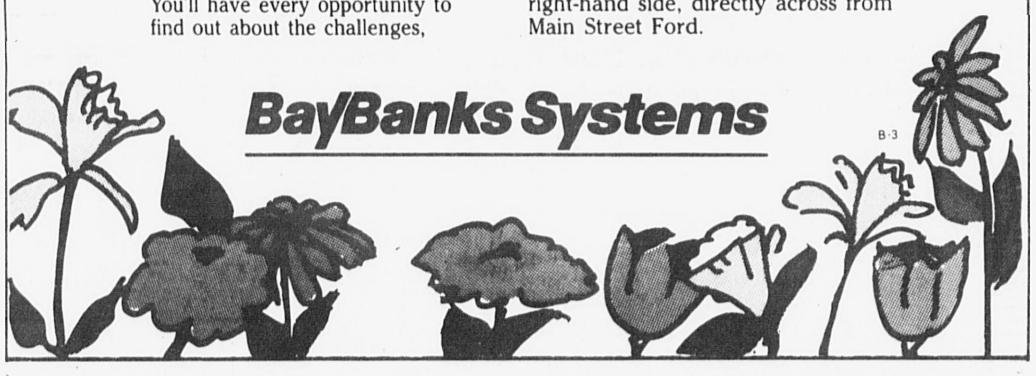

Even if you're not sure what area you're interested in, come speak with us about finding your niche. You'll have every opportunity to find out about the challenges, rewards and the potential for your advancement in the world of high-tech banking.

BayBanks Systems is the centralized data processing facility for the entire BayBanks organization, including the largest ATM network in the region. As such, we take on the challenge of processing the millions of transactions generated each month. To meet this challenge, we want to meet people ready for anything – even people who have never worked before.

Visit our Open House morning or evening. Refreshments will be served. If you cannot make it, just drop by our Personnel Office, weekdays between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m., or call us at 642-1435 for more information. We're located at 1025 Main Street, Waltham, MA 02154. An equal opportunity employer, M/F/H/V.

Newton filmmaker is first American to scale Everest twice

KATMANDU, Nepal (UPI) — Two Americans climbed Mount Everest and set records, one becoming the oldest to conquer the world's highest peak and the other was the first American to climb it twice, the Ministry of Tourism said today.

In the ascent yesterday, Dallas millionaire Dick Bass, 55, broke the age record set last autumn by 50-year-old Czechoslovakian Josef Psotka, who died of exhaustion after the climb, the ministry said.

Bass trudged up the Himalayan giant with the aid of filmmaker David Braeshears, 29, of Newton, who reached the 29,028-foot peak for the second time in his climbing career, the ministry said. His first conquest of Everest was in 1983.

Twenty-five Americans have climbed Everest, but only Braeshears has reached the summit twice. An Italian and a Japanese have also climbed it twice, and a handful of Sherpas has reached the summit three or more times.

Bass and Braeshears, accompanied by a native Sherpa guide Ang Phurba, 25, also set a record for the earliest U.S. ascent of the mountain in the climbing seasn, bettering by one day the first U.S. conquest of May 1, 1963, by Jim Whittaker.

For Bass, who attempted to reach the summit on three previous occasions, the feat also completed his "Seven Summits Odyssey," a pledge made in 1983 with Frank Wells, 53, to climb the highest mountains on seven continents.

The ascent Tuesday via the southeast ridge began in darkness at 2 a.m. from an assault camp just 2,850 feet s'ort of the top of the world. It was the highest of four intermediate camps established by a Norwegian expedition that organized the climb.

Ascending with the aid of oxygen tanks through the rarified air and sub-zero temperatures, the trio reached the summit at 12:15 p.m. after 10 hours and 15 minutes, the ministry said, and made radio contact with base camp.

The mountaineers hoisted flags of Nepal, the United States and of the "Seven Summits Odyssey" before heading down. The climbers returned to the assault camp after a total of more than 15 hours of climbing, the ministry said.

Mountaineers at base camp, worried when the party failed to reach the intermediate camp on time, sent Sherpa Ang Rita, 35, from a lower camp to help out. He climbed to a point more than 300 feet above the assault camp with food for the trio.

The concerns turned out to be unwarranted. The climbers were expected to spend Tuesday night at the assault camp and descend the mountain Wednesday.

The climb wound up the Norwegian expedition, which has put 17 people on summit in three groups over the last 12 days. The initial ascent gave Norway its first national conquest of Everest.

Bass, who owns interests in oil and ranching, obtained a place in the group by agreeing to pay for the cost of filming the adventure.

Tourists easy marks for purse snatchers

By Paula Butturini
United Press International

ROME — When Alessandro Bruni wants to slip behind the wheel of his new Peugeot, he unlocks the master burglar alarm, removes the padlock from the heavy steel chain hooking steering wheel to chassis, and inserts his portable tape deck into the gaping hole in his dashboard.

It's not that Bruni, a psychotherapist, is paranoid — it's that Rome's thieves are clever. And persistent.

Police blame most of the crime in Rome on petty thieves they say rarely get involved in violence.

Serious street crime — shootings, knifings, assault and battery, rape — is rare in Italy and even more unusual against random targets like tourists. The violent attacks that made world headlines during the terrorist-troubled 70s virtually have disappeared.

But the city's legions of purse snatchers, pickpockets and other petty criminals change life in small and big ways — both for residents and tourists.

Police officers near Piazza Venezia in the heart of the city look sympathetic but hardly surprised when a young American woman complains her purse has just been yanked from her shoulder on a city bus.

"Which bus?" one policeman asks in a voice indicating he's heard it all before. "The number 62 or the 64?"

Both ply the busy tourist route between the historic center of the city and the Vatican and are prey to gangs of experienced thieves.

More than 1,000 American tourists paid an unscheduled visit to the pink U.S. consulate building on Rome's posh Via Veneto last year to replace stolen passports, said Marilyn Povenmire, chief of consular services.

"Most of them come in pretty upset," Povenmire said. "But after a few hours they calm down, especially when they realize they can almost always get a new passport the same day or in an hour or less if there's an emergency and they have to catch a plane."

Rome's residents live armed against the petty thievery. Car radios and tape decks are routinely fitted out with a special mount so they can be removed, and the radios often come with a fold-up handle for easy carrying.

Pocketbooks tend to have unusually long straps so women can wear them slung bandolier style — around the neck and across the chest — to discourage easy snatches from passing cars or motorbikes.

Household locks look like they belong on the gold vaults at Fort Knox. The click of reinforced steel bolts falling into place with three to four turns of the key is as much a sound of Rome as the tinkle of water on stone in the city's hundreds of street fountains.

The consulate — used to coping with large numbers of tourists who show up having lost their cash, credit cards, travelers checks and plane tickets — has ready a detailed six-page handout explaining when, where and how to get help and which offices provide English-speaking employees.

Consular officials also hand out six major tips to victims — and urge them to pass the precautions on to family and friends.

— Leave all identity and social security cards, drivers licenses, letters, photos, keepsakes and anything else of little or no monetary value in one's hotel.

— Leave passports and valuables like jewelry, plane tickets, Eurail passes, credit cards and cash in a hotel safe.

— Make a list of travelers check serial numbers and NEVER carry it in the same purse, wallet or briefcase as the checks themselves. The receipt for the purchase of the checks, usually needed to obtain restitution, should be kept in yet another place.

— If passports are needed, carry them apart from one's wallet or purse. Stolen passports in Italy are usually dumped into the trash but replacements cost $40 and hours of lost time.

— Women carrying purses should carry them on the side away from the street. Sling shoulder bags over one's head and shoulder, then hold the bag itself under one's arm.

Philip Charles Willette, 45

News-Tribune night foreman

ROSLINDALE — Philip Charles Willette, a long-time employee of the News-Tribune, died at Massachusetts General Hospital last week after a five-month battle with cancer. He was 45.

A resident of Roslindale since 1980, he was a former resident of Malden. Mr. Willette was an employee of the News-Tribune, a Transcript Newspapers publication, for over 10 years. He was night foreman in the newspaper's composing room and Mr. Willette himself was a compositor by trade.

Prior to his employment with the News-Tribune, Mr. Willette worked for the Cambridge Chronicle and the Somerville Journal.

An avid runner and hiker, Mr. Willette's friends and family knew him to be a lover of the outdoors. In a newsletter published for Transcript employees in 1982, Mr. Willette explained that he climbed mountains for "the fresh air, beauty, peacefulness and serenity." He once trekked across the entire New Hampshire Presidential Range, covering 32 miles in four days.

He also liked photography and canoeing.

Mr. Willette was also known as a lover of antique cars, and was a member of Studebaker Drivers Club. He had owned, at different times, a 1949 Studebaker Commander and a 1953 Jaguar XK-120 Roadster, an Edsel and a Corvair.

Mr. Willette was also a member of the International Typographical Union, and had won awards for printing during the time it was still a hot metal trade.

He was the husband of Karen (Wilson) Willette, the son of Hortense (D'Auria) Willette of Arlington and the late Philip C. Willette. He was the brother of Richard Willette of Somerville, and Loretta Caponigro of Billerica. He was the father of Debra, Philip, Laura and Steven Willette of Malden and James Willette of Roslindale.

Funeral arrangements were arranged with the O'Brien Funeral Home in Arlington.

Donations may be made to the National Foundation for Cancer Research, 7315 Wisconsin Ave., Suite 332W, Bethesda, MD 20814.

'Sidewalk Sam'

Newton Corner resident Sam Guillemin displays one of his works.

'Pavement Picasso' star of Springfest '85

By David Weber, Staff Writer

NEWTON CORNER — Robert Guillemin, better known as "Sidewalk Sam," recently moved to a white frame house fronted by purple lilacs in Newton Corner and says, "I want to live here for the rest of my life and do Rockwell-like paintings full of love and cuteness."

Well-known for his sidewalk paintings and chalk drawings in Boston and throughout the world, the "Pavement Picasso" will be performing his art at this year's Springfest, taking place Sunday from noon until 5 p.m. on the grounds of City Hall.

Guillemin, who is "just settling in" at his new home after moving here from Brookline about five months ago, said he was "extremely happy" to be part of this year's Springfest.

"I'm looking forward to meeting my neighbors because some of the best people in the world live in Newton and I hope this donation will be a sign of my appreciation of their having me," he said Saturday at his home, as he prepared to celebrate his 46th birthday with a gathering of close friends.

He said he hadn't decided exactly what he will paint on Sunday, but said he will "pick an image that shows spring, festiveness and human rights. It will show people outdoors, confident, trusting each other, glad to be alive, with all their cultural and ethnic diversity intact."

A Cambridge native, Guillemin is a classically trained artist who studied

Building ban defeated

By David Weber
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Despite overwhelming agreement that city zoning ordinances are in need of revision, the Board of Aldermen Monday night turned back a bid for a city-wide moratorium on commercial development.

By a 12-9 vote, the board voted to accept the report by the Land Use Committee, which recommended denial of an 18-month building moratorium.

Instead the board voted to establish a 15-member special committee to review city zoning ordinances and recommend changes to the full board.

Thomas Paulini, president of the Newton Centre Neighborhood Association, which spearheaded the movement for the moratorium, said after the vote that his group's next step will be an effort to put the moratorium on the November ballot as a referendum question.

Paulini said he thought he would need about 4,000 petition signatures to place the question on the ballot.

Moratorium supporter Polly Bryson, a candidate for the aldermanic seat now held by Board President Carol Ann Shea, said of the vote, "It adds to the frustration and yet it's not surprising. People are tired of what's happening to the city and it's quite evident that we aren't being listened to."

Shea was unexpectedly absent from Monday night's meeting. Ward 8 Alderman-at-Large Cynthia Creem was out of town and also did not attend the meeting.

Susan Mirsky, co-chairperson of the Newton Neighborhood Network, which also supported the moratorium, said, "I was so disappointed to hear the aldermen talking in terms that make me feel they don't understand what's going on with the issue. That they are not capable of dealing with these issues may be a possibility."

The moratorium would have banned construction of commercial buildings and multi-family dwellings. Single- and two-family residences and subsidized housing would have been exempted.

Supporters of the building ban have maintained that increased commercial development is ruining the residential character of the city.

Special panel studies zoning

NEWTON — A nearly unanimous vote by the Board of Aldermen Monday night cleared the way for the creation of a special committee to recommend changes in the city's zoning ordinances.

Minutes after narrowly rejecting a citizens' petition asking for a two-year development moratorium here, the full board registered its discontent with the current zoning laws by voting 20-1 in favor of the unique, "in-house" review group.

It will now be up to Board President Carol Ann Shea to select the eight aldermanic members of the 15-person committee. The aldermanic Land Use Committee will accept applications up until next Wednesday from those residents interested in filling the seven remaining slots.

Vietnam memorial

A labor of love

NONANTUM — The recent glut of "Vietnam — Ten Years After" stories are all very nice. At least they indicate that the nation's press is not hesitant to dwell on one of the darkest moments of modern American history.

But that's not enough for Charles "Buddy" Cerone or any of the other Vietnam vets who have pooled their resources to create a lasting memorial to their brothers from Newton who paid the ultimate price for their country's involvement in Southeast Asia.

War reflections survive

NEWTON — It is perhaps the memory of the 57,939 American dead in Vietnam that triggered much of the recent torrent of jungle war recollections commemorating the 10th anniversary of the fall of Saigon.

This is the story of just one of the missing. A dead Marine who would have been 38 years old this year. An average high school student with above average intelligence went to war and grew up quickly, discovering God in Quang tri Province and poetry as a means to explain the carnage he witnessed.

Nannies are back

By Lauren McFalls, Assistant News Editor

What's a working parent to do when faced with full-time job and child-rearing responsibilities? Well, until recently, mom or dad could leave the child(ren) with a babysitter, at a day care center, with a relative, or, heaven forbid, alone.

But now another, albeit more expensive, alternative is coming into vogue. And that is, hiring a nanny.

That's right. Nannies — like those pram-pushing and uniform-clad, English ladies from the olden days — are in demand across the nation. To meet the need, nanny-training and placement organizations are springing up everywhere.

The Boston area is no exception, says Anne Merchant, director of one such company — Primary Nursing, Inc., of Wellesley.

"There's a definite trend that will continue (towards hiring nannies)," she says. According to her market research, eight million working mothers in the country have children under the age of six. These women "want to have it all," she says, and "we're trying to create a situation whereby their lives are made easier."

Nannies are particularly helpful when children are sick, which is something day care centers are unable to handle, Merchant explains. "Mothers won't get promoted if they keep going home (to take care of their children)," Merchant says, so "we think we have a good alternative to day care."

For $1000, families can hire a trained nanny from the company for a year or longer. That, however, does not include a $6 hourly wage to the nanny, herself.

This and other nanny-placement agencies also hire out interim nannies, who work for a day or a week to care for sick children or to help a mother with a new-born baby. Merchant says that some families will even share a nanny and split the cost.

Mann confirms his re-election bid

By Edward Cafasso, Staff Writer

NEWTON — Mayor Theodore D. Mann confirmed last week that he will announce his re-election campaign on May 13 during a bash being held to celebrate his 63rd birthday.

Any remaining speculation about whether the city's chief executive for the last 13 years would seek another four-year term ended when he accepted 500 blank nomination papers for the post from Alan W. Licarie, executive secretary of the Election Commission.

He now has until July 9 to collect the 400 certified signatures needed to officially place his name on the ballot.

During his weekly press conference, Mann refused to officially commit himself to a re-election run out of deference to supporters planning his birthday/campaign kick-off party.

"My official decision will be made in a couple of weeks, but people generally don't take nomination papers out unless they have some intentions," he said.

The mayor's private birthday celebration will be held at Valle's Steak House at 300 Boylston St.

Licarie, who must order the printing of the papers ahead of time, said he had asked Mann

McGrath contemplating possible mayoral run

By Edward Cafasso
Staff Writer

NEWTON — For a decade or more, Ward 4 Alderman-at-Large Richard J. McGrath has been rumored as an aspirant for the seat occupied by Mayor Theodore D. Mann.

And for years, election time has come and gone and the rumors have remained just rumors — at least until now.

Last week, for the first time in his highly visible political career, McGrath took out the nomination papers that could make him an official mayoral candidate.

For the outspoken alderman of 13 years, who also took out papers for his current slot in Ward 4 "just to cover all the bases," the emphasis is on the word "could."

"It really aggravates me that there is no one running against the mayor. I think what I want to do is keep my options open because I do know that there is a deep dissatisfaction with his performance," the 49-year-old West Newton resident said.

The top vote-getter in the 1983 aldermanic election said whether he decides to run or not "depends on the reaction of the community."

"If I find a favorable response that would allow me to catch up for the time that has been lost — if I find legitimate support — I will continue on with it," he said.

However, McGrath readily admitted that the most

Special committee for zoning revamp

Alderman Robert L. Tennant's lone vote in opposition to the special committee proposal raised an issue that apparently eluded some of his colleagues last night.

"It's a duplication of effort. This new group is going to need some professional advice that will cost money, but the taxpayers of this city are already paying for an independent, professional study of zoning," Tennant said in reference to the city's plan to launch a "village study."

One of the ultimate goals of that analysis, which is likely to cost over $200,000 and take more than a year to complete, is to come up with long-term changes in zoning ordinances. A firm to conduct the study has not yet been selected.

The rest of the aldermen, however, are apparently not willing to wait for the village study before moving to revise the ordinances. Most of the city's zoning laws have remained relatively unaltered since the early 1970's — long before the current concern about the ravages of unchecked commercial development surfaced.

It remains to be seen, however, how long it will take the new group of aldermen and citizens to come up with definitive suggestions for the Land Use Committee's consideration.

Alderman Richard J. McGrath, who sponsored the creation of the special committee along with Land Use members, began debate by noting that the success of the group's effort depends heavily on the people picked to serve on it.

"The membership of that committee is extremely important ... In order for it be effective it has to have credibility, especially in the eyes of citizens," he said, later adding, "It's up to Carol Ann Shea to create a credible committee."

Alderman W. Arthur Reilly called the new group "an appropriate solution" to the concerns expressed by moratorium supporters and said the committee will eventually require "professional, outside" advice.

Alderman Matthew Jefferson "endorsed" the special committee and suggested it focus on establishing tighter zoning controls in the areas surrounding the city's business and manufacturing districts.

Alderman Edward L. Richmond asked that the new group direct its efforts toward the specific language of the ordinances and leave any changes in the actual configuration of zones to the village study and the city's fledgling Economic Development Commission (EDC).

He then proposed that Planning Director Barry Canner serve as a non-voting, advisory member of the committee and that Planning Department workers provide staff assistance.

Alderman Verne Vance called that idea "unrealistic," arguing that the department does not have enough personnel to carry out a "principle staffing" role.

Despite Vance's contention and the fact that city planners already provide staff assistance to the EDC, the full board voted 15-6 in favor of Richmond's proposal.

After a brief wrangle, aldermen decided the new group would be designated as "a special committee" of the board, rather than a sub-committee of Land Use.

Most of the criticism is focused on construction "as a matter of right," which under current zoning ordinances, automatically allows construction of four-story buildings in business zones and six-story buildings in manufacturing zones.

Ward 1 Alderman Ronald Marini spoke of such a development, a six-story office building slated to be built by Michael Iodice on Crafts Street on the site of the old Edwards Lumber Yard.

Residents abutting the site "who plant gardens won't even be able to have any sun in their yards," he said.

Ward 6 Alderman George Mansfield also said there is a need for the building ban. He said he knew of four sites in Newton Centre where building permits have already been issued or the sites are being prepared for construction.

"I don't think that's coincidental. I think development has increased because of all the talk about zoning revision. We should suspend business as usual while we look at the zoning," said Mansfield.

"We're talking about rather major surgery to our zoning ordinances. When undergoing major surgery, a patient has to be taken out of his regular activity patterns. If you don't do that, the patient suffers a major catastrophe," he said.

Ward 4 Alderman-at-Large Richard J. McGrath said that when the original public hearing on the moratorium was held, many persons from the building trades testified against it on the grounds that it would mean a loss of jobs.

"But almost everyone who came to the microphone that night prefaced their remarks by saying that something was wrong with the zoning ordinances," said McGrath, who voted for the building ban. "Now, before things get worse, let's slow down a little bit, correct the problem, and then proceed with construction.

"I would ask that the moratorium be supported for the period of time it takes for the aldermen to review the ordinances," he said, suggesting a timetable of three months for completion of the review.

Ward 6 Alderman-at-Large Rodney Barker, who cast the lone supporting vote for the moratorium on the Land Use Committee two weeks ago, then suggested a nine-month ban, which he felt was a more realistic amount of time for completion of the zoning review.

Ward 3 Alderman-at-Large Verne Vance said he did not think a moratorium was justified by "specific instances where buildings are unacceptable or not liked." He said the last city census indicated that 45 percent of the residents "are not aware of how zoning ordinances work and a substantial amount of the rest are satisfied with them."

Aldermen Robert Tennant and Carol Robinson argued that a moratorium would drive businesses and jobs away from the city and Alderman James Regan said he believed higher property taxes would result in the vacuum of the increased tax base commercial development brings.

Those voting against moratorium were: Aldermen Daley, Gentile, Irwin, Jefferson, Regan, Reilly, Richmond, Robinson, Schick, Taglienti, Tennant and Vance.

Those voting in favor of the moratorium were: Aldermen Barker, Bauckman, Bullwinkle, Carmichael, Coletti, Malec, Mansfield, Marini, and McGrath.

Board President Shea and Alderman Creem were absent and one aldermanic seat is currently vacant since the death of Robert L. Shuman.

Laid back Lautrec

a classically trained artist who studied for two years at the Ecole des Beaux Arts in France and worked as a certified copiest of the masters at the Louvre in Paris.

After returning to the United States, he directed the art department at the Elma Lewis School in Roxbury and later taught in several area prep schools. He also taught a course called Sociology of Art at Boston College, which he attended before going to Europe, and says he expects to finish a book on the subject soon.

Guillemin briefly explained his topic, saying, "It is about art being a responsible reflection of the issues alive in culture today."

His works have been exhibited in museums and galleries, but he now prefers to take his art to the streets.

His sidewalk art has appeared in London, Paris, Munich, Athens, New York, Los Angeles, Dallas, Chicago, Seattle, Minneapolis, Atlanta and may other cities besides Boston.

He says art should not be enjoyed only by the idle rich, so he tries to "take art and put in the middle of culture, have it reflect the glory of our culture and be a small part of the day of those who walk by it."

He said he enjoys spreading his blanket on the sidewalk "like a picnic table" and bantering with his audience as he works for about 12 hours on a painting.

Part of the interview with Guillemin was conducted in his sister's car as we rode to a rental shop to return a post hole digger and a lawnmower. At a stoplight, we pulled up behind a car bearing a sticker that read, "Easy Does It."

"Look at that sticker. Do you know what that means?" asked Guillemin. "That means that person is involved with Alcoholics Anonymous. There's a proud person, who's winning, driving that car. There's nothing you'd want to do more than meet a proud, confident person who is winning at life."

When we returned to his home, friends and family were already pulling into his driveway, emerging from their cars with cases of beer to be added to a waiting plastic garbage can full of ice.

Guillemin greeted them with hugs, kisses and smiles. The rain and wind of the previous day had vanished and the sun showed up to match the warmth already present at Guillemin's birthday party.

He later summed up his philosophy of life, saying, "All one needs is family, a few friends and the unctuous wealth of others around us, to be enjoyed like rare wines and fat cheesburgers."

Together, we can change things.

The Newton Community Development Program is recommending a transfer of $20,000 from the FY84 Thompsonville Sq. Urban Systems Amenities Project to the FY83 Urban Systems Design Phase II Project. This transfer will allow the City to supplement the design budget of the Urban Systems Amenities project. The current estimate of cost to complete the design, both of the traffic improvements and of the landscaping improvements, have increased substantially since the original phase II budget estimate of $22,500 was received nearly 5 years ago. These increases were not nown until recently when phase II contract negotiations were initiated after conclusion of phase I. In addition, changes in the Community Development Block Grant statutes preclude the inclusion of additional funds not already budgeted into the projects not meeting current statutory provisions for benefit to low and moderate income persons. The Thompsonville Sq. project is a phased project originating at a time when the Thompsonville neighborhood qualified as a low/moderate income area. The supplemental funding will make it possible to proceed with the design thus ensuring matching Urban Systems construction funds of approximately $2000,000 while providing the opportunity to seek funding sources for completion of the Veterans Park landscaping work.

ADDITION OF NEW FY85 PROGRAMS:

1) Telecommunication Devise for the Deaf (TDD) - $680

The Newton Human Services Department is requesting $680.00 to purchase two telecommunication Devises for the Deaf (TDD). The TDD will allow the deaf to communicate by telephone with the Newton City Hall and the Newton School Department. This project will be funded with FY85 Human Services Assistance Program Contingency funds.

2) St. Jeans Elderly/Family Housing Site Improvements - $118,000

The Housing Development Support Division of the Newton Community Development Program is requesting $118,000.00 to fund construction costs including site work, landscaping, clearing, utilities, fences, demolition and excavation related to the St. Jean's Family/Elderly Housing Development. This project will be funded with the FY85 Housing Development Support Pool. Other construction costs associated with this project will be provided by a grant from the State 667 Elderly/705 Family Housing Program.

3) Cooperative Living of Newton, Inc. - Housing Needs Study - $15,000

The Cooperative Living of Newton, Inc. is requesting approximately $15,000 to fund a study of housing needs of Newton elders. The study will result in a comprehensive data base outling housing alternatives for the elderly. This project will be funded under the Housing Development Support Pool.

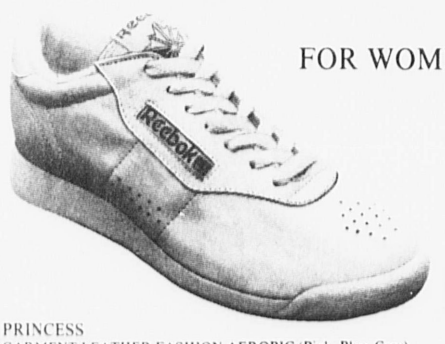

The Newton Community Development Program's Citizen Participation Plan requires that when changes to the Newton Community Development Program are proposed which include adding or deleting of projects, the Planning and Development Board must hold a public hearing prior to making recommendations concerning the proposed changes.

Comments may be submitted until 1 June 1985 to the Community Development Program, City Hall, 1000 Commonwealth Ave., Newton Centre, Newton, MA 02159. More information is available by calling Elisabeth Ruben, 552-7135.

Braeshears tops Everest 2nd time

David Braeshears

KATMANDU, Nepal (UPI)– Two Americans, including Newton filmmaker David Braeshears, climbed Mount Everest and set records, one becoming the oldest to conquer the world's highest peak and the other the first American to climb it twice, the Ministry of Tourism said.

Braeshears, 29, reached the 29,028-foot peak for the second time in his climbing career, the ministry said. His first conquest of Everest was in 1983.

Twenty-five Americans have climbed Everest, but only Braeshears has reached the summit twice. An Italian and a Japenese have also climed it twice, and a handful of Sherpas have reached the summit three or more times.

Bass and Braeshears, accompanied by a native Sherpa guide Ang Phurba, 25, also set a record for the earliest U.S. ascent of the mountain in the climbing season, bettering by one day the first U.S. conquest of May 1, 1963, by Jim Whittaker.

The ascent via the southeast ridge began in darkness at 2 a.m. from an assualt camp just 2,850 feet short of the top of the world. It was the highest of four intermediate camps established by a Norwegian expedition that organized the climb.

Decision on synagogue postponed

NEWTON — The Board of Aldermen Monday night postponed a decision on whether to grant a special permit that would allow a synagogue to be built on the corner of Morton Street and Commonwealth Avenue.

The full board voted 13-7 to allow the delay, at the request of attorney Jason A. Rosenberg, representing Congregation Shaarei Tefillah.

The Land Use Committee has recommended denial of a special permit to waive the city's on-site parking standards for places of assembly. Those standards would require about 100 on-site parking spaces. The congregation's current proposal for the 9,000 square-foot site includes nine spaces.

Rosenberg asked for the delay for two reasons. In an open letter to the full board, he said several aldermen and city officials have suggested the congregation look at several alternative sites, one of which is owned by the city. He said the congregation needed more time to investigate the feasibility of these sites.

The other reason for the delay request was that Ward 8 Alderman-at-Large Cynthia Creem was out of town and could not attend last night's meeting. Creem has been the chief proponent of the congregation's attempts to reach a compromise that would allow the synagogue to be built at at its current proposed site at 841 Commonwealth Avenue.

Bryson takes aim at Ward 4 job

Polly Bryson

AUBURNDALE — Polly Bryson, the leader of the city's oldest neighborhood organization, will oppose Ward 4 Alderman and Board President Carol Ann Shea in this November's municipal election.

Bryson, 50, of 11 Acorn Drive, Auburndale, took out nomination papers for Shea's seat last Friday and met with Shea that afternoon to ask for her support.

The president of the Auburndale Community Association (ACA) for the last four years said that community discontent with Shea's representation prompted her bid to unseat the veteran alderman.

"There is a widespread feeling among people in this ward and in Auburndale, particularly, that they are not being properly respresented. Many people have called me to offer their wholehearted support over the last few years. They, in their dissatisfaction, have strongly requested that I run," she said.

"I grew up in Auburndale and have lived here since I was four. This is my church, my home and my village. I would truly like to represent the people in this ward and in this vicinity," she said.

Because she and Shea had worked together in the past as executive members of the ACA, Bryson said she decided to break the news to her "personally."

"I asked for her endorsement and support if she decided not to run. She said that, at this point, she was going to run," according to Bryson, who said Shea was "not surprised" by the move because she had heard rumors of the challenge.

Special Celtics celebrate success

NEWTON — Six months ago, Rick Cass considered himself lucky to find two Needham Street businessmen to donate uniforms to the special needs basketball team he was coaching.

Never in his wildest dreams did Cass expect that first kind gesture to snowball into the outpouring of generosity he witnessed Friday night at the Troubador Restaurant on Elm Street in West Newton.

The special needs director for the Newton Parks and Recreation Department watched with pride as his Newton Celtics, most of them Garden City youths, revelled in a celebration marking their successful first season as an active unit.

The First Annual Newton Celtics Banquet featured an unexpected appearance by former Boston Red Sox great Rico Petrocelli and a series of donations that left the 10 Newton Celtic players and their parents wondering if Christmas had somehow arrived early this year.

Each of the developmentally disabled young men popped happily out of their seats to receive gold basketball trophies, official satin Celtic jackets, basketballs and practice jerseys — all made possible by local supporters who deeply admired the determination of Cass and his crew.

The banquet represented a fitting end to a whirlwind season that saw the Celtics vault from relative obscurity during fall practices at local gymnasiums to an inspirational, standing-room-only exhibition performance on the Boston Garden's famed parquet floor in early February.

The weekend festivities began after the players and their parents had enjoyed a home-cooked meal of lasagna.

Petrocelli, who will live forever in hearts of Red Sox fans for his role in the team's 1967 World Series victory, handed out trophies to each of the Celtics and later took time out to sign autographs for his admirers.

Assistant Coach Josh Sklare, 24, of 12 Nathan Road, Newton Centre, also received a special award for his efforts in support of Cass' brainchild.

Cass then handed out the satin Celtic jackets, which were donated by long-time backer Gerald Fineberg, of 27 Tudor Road. "It's my pleasure," said Fineberg, whose 19-year-old son, Adam, has been participating in the city's special needs program since its inception in 1978.

Mary and Lorraine Flynn, sisters of Celtic Chuck Flynn, 25, of Omar Terrace, and team booster Virginia Cheung then stepped in to donate the green and yellow practice jerseys and basketballs.

Cass returned the favor by awarding the three women plaques of appreciation. Commissioner Russel Halloran, Fineberg and Recreation Supervisor Joe Connors, who arranged Petrocelli's appearance, also received plaques for their efforts.

The team members showed their appreciation for Cass by presenting him with a "Coach of the Year" Celtics T-shirt and a gift certificate to the Bay Tower Room.

Charlie Dunlap and Frank Luz, the co-owners of Kwik-Kopy on Needham Street who threw their initial support behind the team, also garnered awards, but preferred to stay out of the limelight.

"We didn't get involved for the recognition," said Dunlap. "It's thanks enough to be a part of it. It's nice to deal with nice people and Rick Cass is a nice person."

Everyone in the room credited Cass with making big things happen for the Celtics.

"I think that this has got a lot to do with Rick and his personality," said Connors. "He devoted 20 and 30 hours a week to work on basketball with these guys. That's a big commitment."

He also expressed concern about the future success of the program when Cass switches from a full to part-time role in the city's special needs division on July 1.

"Whoever comes in is going to have to have a lot of energy to keep up with the pace he set. They're going to have a big set of shoes to fill," Connors said.

The change in responsibilities has left Cass undaunted. The 25-year-old Needham resident is already planning the creation of a special needs floor hockey team to complement the Celtics squad this fall.

"I don't like sitting behind a desk when I can be working with the kids," said Cass, who will go back to his old job as a special needs teacher at Kennedy Memorial Hospital in Brighton.

Auburndale resident Andrew Carten said Cass' idea to create a basketball team has gone a long way toward "image-building" for his 15-year-old son Paul.

"It's such a feeling of accomplishment for the boys. Our son feels much better about himself because he was given a chance to compete and achieve. Now they try where before they would give up without trying," said Carten.

The other parents on-hand for the banquet echoed those sentiments.

"It gave them new friends to associate with. That's opportunity they don't always have," according to Judy Ross, of Fellsmere Road, whose 21-year-old son, Stuart, is a proud member of the Celtics.

A comment by Fineberg proved that the players were not the only ones to benefit from the team's first season of organized play.

"I've always been a Boston Celtics fan. Now, I'm a Newton Celtics fan, too," he said with a wide smile.

Goldman did finish

NEWTON — BAA Marathon officials have corrected their records which now show Dr. Robert Goldman finished the Patriots' Day Marathon in a little more than three and a half hours.

This is the 11th time Dr. Goldman has finished the Boston Marathon. "It was a little hot and it took a little longer this year," the Upland Road resident was quoted as saying.

Dr. Goldman runs with many at the Newton YMCA and with such people as Alderman Paul Daley, who also ran in this year's marathon.

New machinery now on Beacon Hill

Despite the recent buzz over George Keverian's decision to conduct Democratic caucus business behind closed doors, it looks like the new Legislature is a different animal from the monolith of the Tommy McGee era.

Over the strong objections of Gov. Michael S. Dukakis and the House Democratic leadership, representatives approved across-the-board bonuses for teachers.

Republicans proposed that pay hike.

Normally, the tiny minority of GOP representatives flails against the Democratic majority with Quixotic charm, pressing the conservative viewpoint, calling for fiscal restraint.

Yet they led a stampede for massive new spending, taking with them large numbers of Democratic defectors.

Some observers called the teacher-bonus amendment a big victory for the Republicans, or a devastating defeat for the new House Democratic leader George Keverian. Others billed it as a victory for the Massachusetts Teachers Association, which has lobbied for the reform bill and which supported Dukakis' campaign for governor when he beat Edward King.

The amendment would have given all Massachusetts teachers bonuses of $600, $1,200 and $1,800 in the first three years of enactment, with the state paying the bill.

Dukakis and House Speaker George Keverian, along with Education Committee Chairman George Paleologos, were taken aback. They said the bonuses would cost too much, adding $133 million to the governor's $521 million proposal.

The governor was in a very uncomfortable position. Suddenly, he was fighting the very educators he hoped to please when he proposed the sweeping reform package last year, with its $18,000 minimum salary for starting teachers.

Literally overnight, the governor and leadership concocted a compromise. It would keep the local option for an $18,000 starting teacher salary, and add a $29 million bonus package, also at local option.

With a lobbying blitz, Dukakis and Keverian managed to switch 34 votes. By the next day's floor session, the $29 million compromise had carried the House.

When McGee was Speaker, such a scramble would have been unneccessary. He dictated the course of all bills from filing to engrossment.

But Keverian promised more power to individual lawmakers, and they took the new speaker up on that promise with the Monday amendment.

There is a lesson for lobbyists to learn from this week's seeming disarray: Those who want to influence the House — the governor included — will have to press their case with the rank and file legislators, not just the leadership.

Ed King, man on the run

By Jerry Berger

Former Gov. Edward J. King sounds very much like a man preparing for battle, but still undecided on the color of his uniform.

King was the center of attention last week during a prayer breakfast hosted by his predecessor, successor and political arch-rival, Gov. Michael S. Dukakis.

The reason? His "exploratory" talks with Republican leaders about switching sides and carrying the GOP banner in 1986.

"It is true that I have been approached by prominent Republicans and did attend a meeting," says King. "The talks were exploratory and no decision to change has been made."

King lost a bitter 1982 primary battle to Dukakis, four years after snatching the party nomination in what Dukakis repeatedly calls a "painful" defeat.

While King steadfastly refuses to commit himself — "I have to get over the first hurdle, that is whether I will or will not run" — he and his staff sound very much like they are launching a first strike.

"Whatever the decision, my positions on the overriding issues such as abortion, crime, death penalty, economic development, governmental growth, human dignity and taxation will not change," he said in a statement distributed throughout the Statehouse. "The hundreds of thousands of voters — Democrat, independent and Republican — who supported me will find no change in my stance on these issues."

That litany of issues King is identified with makes the idea of hopping to the conservative GOP likely. But a King aide takes pains to leave plenty of room for a Democratic primary challenge.

Noting party rules require ballot hopefuls to garner support from 15 percent of the delegates to the statewide convention, aide Gary Sullivan says "I don't think there is any question he can make the 15 percent. There wasn't a big effort last time and he made it."

Sullivan also zeroed in on the King issues and what some feel is Dukakis efforts to move closer to them.

"He feels no governor is stronger that he is" on issues such as abortion, capital punishment and crime," says Sullivan. "He thinks the regular people concerned about his type of issues are certainly out there."

And in a none-to-veiled reference to recent gubernatorial pardons, Sullivan says "You wouldn't see Edward King commuting the sentences of cold-blood murderers like other governors have."

While King is reportedly the choice of two-time GOP Senate candidate Raymond Shamie — one of the the party's leading lights — there could one major sticking point in a King conversion.

That is his reported request the GOP "clear the field" of primary challengers, something that has not set well with potential candidates or party leaders.

King denies making the request.

"I really don't know" (who brought it up), he says. "I for one have always said anyone who wants to run, should run."

Mike Hannahan, executive director of the state GOP, agrees King cannot be guaranteed a clear field.

"The days when a political party nnoints a gubernatorial candidate are gone. We're not 'king-makers,' We don't call the shots."

But he dismisses as "ridiculous" suggestions Republicans are turning to King because of a failure to attract topnotch candidates.

"When Franklin Roosevelt was elected, Republicans were in the majority," he says. "I don't think the Democrats built a majority coalition without asking some Republicans to join them."

Hannahan admits "your speculations are as good as mine" on whether King will actually jump ship. "He certainly would feel more at home in the Republican Party."

That's a view shared by Dukakis, who is trying to keep election speculation on the backburner.

"I think that it would make sense for the former governor to become a Republican, in that he seems to be more comfortable with the philosophy and personalities of the Republican Party," says Dukakis spokesman James R. Dorsey. "An indication of that was the former governor's campaigning for President Reagan here in Boston during the last campaign."

Whatever the decision, King will have to make his mind up soon.

State law requires potential 1986 candidates declare a party affiliation by June 4. While the deadline for an independent candidacy is next March, observers believe a non-party bid would splinter the opposition and give Dukakis a handy win.

As for Dukakis' plans, Dorsey said "the governor's feeling is that it is an awfully long way to the election, and Massachusetts is in very good shape fiscally and economically. Yet much remains to be done, and he's going to concentrate as long as he can on being governor."

Is the 'open door' easing closed?

By William G. Robinson

The 'rules reformers' held out for four months before going back to business as usual.

BEACON HILL — A funny thing happened on the way to a more "open" legislative process.

The Democratic leadership of the House, along with most of the rank and file Democratic members, voted to close its caucuses to the public and the press, ending the so-called "open speakership" after only several months in power.

One of the dissenting votes came from the former speaker, who said he had never completely shut the public out of caucuses during his reign. My reaction to all this? "I told you so." The majority party will continue to do things their way, no matter who is in charge.

But far worse than the end of open Democratic caucuses was the end of meaningful debate and the rules reform that so many of us fought for over the years in the House. Through a process of anti-rules reform tactics, the House Democratic leadership shut off all parliamentary avenues through which anyone could offer alternatives to the tax cut bill that the governor handed down. This was never even done by their predecessors in power!

Originally, the governor announced his $64 million tax cut. That piece of legislation went to the House Ways and Means Committee, where it underwent transformation that was so repugnant to house Democrats that they rallied behind a prearranged amendment to make it more palatable.

During the debate on the House floor, the chair ruled that only amendments within the narrowly defined parameters of the legislation before the house would be considered. (Of course they had no intention of ever adopting any of those either.) That meant: argue anything that is in the bill, but don't even consider making the tax cut permanent, repealing the Dukakis surtax, instituting a mortgage interest deduction or tax breaks for the elderly.

In other words, take it or leave it! Well, someone once said that, when there is no hope of further debate, there is no such thing as a bad tax cut. So Republicans supported it.

I guess we should be thankful that at least we got something — a tax cut, nickel and dime though it may be.

However, the procedural aspects of how this legislation went through the House are significant. Pass the bill or don't pass the bill. but don't tinker with it! What then is the reason for even having a legislature? Why doesn't the governor just submit his bill. ask the legislature to say yes or no with no room for changes and then be done with it? (Of course they will say yes since the majority party rules.) That is exactly what happened with this tax cut.

The "rules reformers" held out four months before going back to business as usual. Unfortunately, it is worse than business as usual. The effect of this new precedent threatens meaningful debate and exchange of ideas in the future. I would only hope that the House Democratic leadership changes its ways during the budget debate.

(William G. Robinson is House Republican leader on Beacon Hill.)

Newspaper accounts 'fogged over' serious zoning questions

To the editor:

Once again, we readers have been subjected to the threats and protests of "Jaffee versus the City of Newton." As one who helped lodge a formal complaint against the number of single people leasing a tiney W. Newton home, I resent the space so chronically allocated to this one landlord, without benefit of opposing points of view.

The "poor us" wils that emanate from the Jaffees grate on all who watch these verbal business people rant about discrimination and being "picked on," amidst similar violators in the city.

Isn't it simply that the Jaffees have swooped down on available properties, begun immediate conversions and not taken the time to scout around for neighborhood approval or dissent. Surely they have successfully struck some Newton areas where "dissent is a no-no," unlike the negative neighborhood responses they received in Arlington, as well as in two of Newton's neighborhoods.

Here on Winthrop street, they were certainly warned about forthcoming complaints, even before their tenants came on to the scene. Their cheerful retort was, "You will get used to this change. Other neighborhoods have."

Now we all see that they are "crying over spilt milk," having been warned about this possibility. Instead of cleaning up the mess, they are spreading it further by using their tenants to raise the banner of "discrimination against singles in Newton." They are additionally engaging in time-consuming, troublesome defamation of character law suits.

The issue is quite clear, though often fogged over by newspaper interviews. These people are furious because they have been caught in the act, while similar violators are still at-large. Would such people plead the case for emptying our prisons and eliminating the fine system for legal infractions because ALL criminal and civil offenders have not been apprehended?

How do we answer the kids?

To the Editor:

"The decisive question is why so many people remained apathetic, did not listen and closed their eyes to the realities of an inhuman program, first discussed in the back rooms and then openly propagated in the streets."

Chancellor Kohl raises a question for our time too. Today people are closing their eyes to the genocide of the whole human species which nuclear weapons directly threatenh. As was the cas with the German poople, reality can be too much to bear, but that does not absolve us from the burden of responding to it honestly.

President Reagan's moral insensitivity to the depths of Nazi depravity has properly outraged many. It should also alarm us that the future of mankind could be in the hands of such a blind and shallow man and that we have sanctioned a system which concentrates the power of life and death over all species for all times in the hands of a few fallible people and many fallible machines.

I like to think that people in another era will look back on this time with the same horrified incredulity with which we look back on the madness of the Nazi period. Was it possible that two great peoples had wired this planet for destruction in the name of national security, the Final Solution to the "problem" of co-existence?

I like to think that reason and the ability of ordinary people to gradually confront the military monsters we have created will turn the tide for humanity. I like to think that I'll have grandchildren and that I won't shrink from their question: What did you do to stop the madness?

Secretary of State objects

To the Editor:

I am writing to you to express my strong objection to an article written by J.J. Smith, which ran in the Newton Graphic on March 27.

I have already spoken with Mr. Smith personally about his column and I don't want to get into specifics with you other than to say I feel the article was a personal attack against Secretary of State Michael Connolly and was totally uncalled for.

What I do want to alert you, the editor, to is a series of startling similarities I found between J.J. Smith's article and previous articles written by Howie Carr and Jim Simson, an Associated Press reporter. I am sending these along, simply for you own information.

As a press sceretary working for a major Massachusetts officeholder, a being a former news writer myself, If find it appalling that J.J. Smith would use other reporters' words to tell his own story. Furthermore, he has taken some of Howie Carr's fictitious quotes and used them in his column as factual quotes.

Any reporter should confirm quotes before printing them. J.J. Smith was not even present at any of the events Howie Carr refers to in his column. How is it that one columnist's personal viewpoint becomes the alleged factual basis for another's entire commentary?

I am disheartened that you chose to print such a negative and fallacious column in your newspaper.

Do's and don't for seniors

1. Don't talk about age. Do talk about activities: mental, social, political,. spiritual activities have never been more exciting or more challenging.

2. Don't talk about aches and pains. Do talk about practical goals and plans. Talk about therapies that work, nutrition that helps and positive thinking.

3. Don't dwell on self pity. Do concentrate on your reserve and resouces and take command of your situation. Counting your blessings is the best way to use your calculator.

4. Don't cop out. Do get into a health and exercise program.

5. Don't lose the light touch. No one loves a grouch.

6. Don't slouch or slump. Do walk straight and keep your shoulders back.

7. Don't get so involved in activist programs or any cause or commitment that you lose touch with your inner self.

8. Don't look back unless the backward look helps you in going forward.

9. Don't underestimate the power and potential of your mind. Its creativity is unlimited. Its will to serve is phenomenal. To do its best work, it must be nourished by a healthy body, a spirit of freedom and an uninhibited honesty of thought.

10. Don't ever get old, no matter what your age. The term "venerable old age" can never match the designation "young at heart."

Race, gender are irrelevant

To the editor:

I find it absolutely incredulous that in 1985, a newspaper of your calibre could succumb to such blatant implied racism as that which appeared in the "Police, Court, Fires" column (pg. 22, Apr. 17). I refer to the report of a certain burglary, where the suspects were specifically referred to as "two black girls, believed to be students of Newton North High School."

Is the race of the suspects of significance? Do you imply a greater liklihood of guilt, simply because the suspects are not white? For that matter, is the gender of the suspects at all important? I suggest that "two juveniles" would have provided ample description of the incident.

I for one could not care less about the race or gender of the suspects. Shame on you for irresponsible journalism!

MIA's and Mother's Day

As Mother's Day approaches, I feel fortunate to know that my two sons and my son-in-law, all veterans of the Vietnam War, are healthy and happy. My heart goes out to those mothers and wives who have been waiting for over a decade to find out what happened to their sons and husbands as a result of the war.

The war in Vietnam was a tragic page in the history of our country. There was so much controversy surrounding that war; yet my sons went to serve their country.

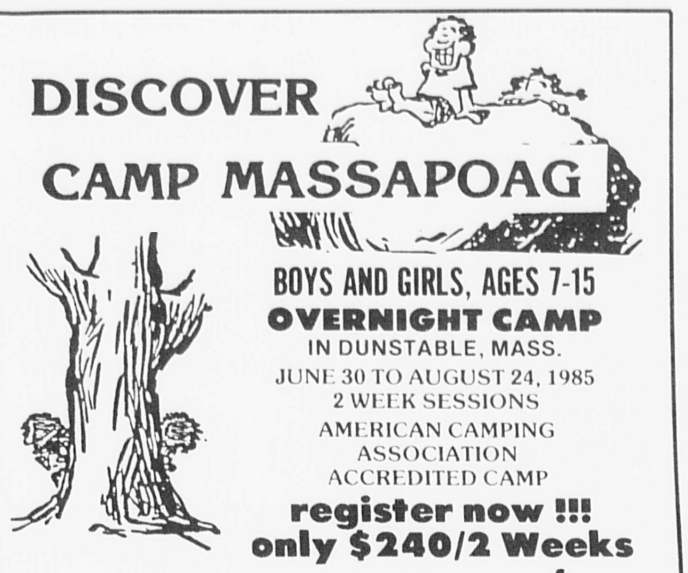

All mothers know that when their sons go off to war, there is a chance that they may be wounded or killed in battle. Many people in this country are not aware that nearly 2,500 Americans are still missing in Southeast Asia. Hundreds of refugee reports indicate that some may still be alive in captivity. Credible intelligence data reveals that the remains of over 400 American servicemen and civilians are held by Hanoi. Information that would put so many Americans at peace is being withheld by the government of Vietnam.

I find this situation terribly disturbing. I have been working for the return of our men. To date, only about five percent have been accounted for. How much longer must these families live with such uncertainty, not knowing if their sons are dead of alive?

Miles, smiles for hunger

By Howard Altman, Correspondent

NEWTON — They came by bicycle, skateboard, rollerskate and stroller, but mostly they came by foot. Thousands of participants in Project Bread's 16th annual Greater Boston Walk for Hunger set upon the lawn of the Eliot Church in Newton Corner Sunday to rest weary feet and grab a quick snack and a drink.

The church, midway between the 20-mile walk's start and finish on the Boston Common, looked like a crowded Cape Cod beach on the Fourth of July as people sprawled on the lawn to catch their breath.

Although it was the kind of day that typifies New England's fickle weather — dishwater-grey with scattered showers — 9,642 people registered for the walk, according to spokeswoman Georgia Mattison.

Mattison said about 4,500 more people participated in the march than last year, adding that a preliminary count of pledges totalled $1,069,462.

Gov. Michael S. Dukakis, Archbishop Bernard Law and Boston Mayor Ray Flynn led the walkers at the start of the march at Boston Common.

Walk officials said the walk was backed by more than 100,000 supporters.

"I feel good," 10-year-old April Rasala of Newton said enthusiastically, "because we want to raise money to help the hungry."

Rasala, who walked with her mother Sue and eight-year-old sister Kathryn, said she worked hard to get sponsors.

"I typed out a letter on my dad's McIntosh telling people what I was doing and asked them to sponsor me so I could raise money for the hungry," she said shyly. "I handed the letter to the kids in my class at the Newton Presbyterian Church and asked them to donate money for every mile I walked."

Rasala added that although her calculator "went a little bonkers, I guess I raised over $75."

The Rasalas were part of the early trickle of people heading for the church. By noon, that trickle turned into a torrent as the main body of walkers came down Centre Street in waves.

Two of the early arrivers, Frank Griffin of Everett and Sister Margaret Ellen of New York City, sat on the cement steps that lead to the main entrance of the church, gathering strength for the miles ahead.

"I think it's wonderful," said Griffin, a 55-year-old Middlesex County Sheriff. "The camaraderie among the walkers is excellent. There's a great spirit of caring here."

"It's a very important cause," Sister Margaret said. "Not only are we raising money for the hungry, but I think we're raising people's consciousness along the way. People have stopped me and asked me what we were doing. Being out here lets people know there is a real hunger problem — not only in Africa, but here in this country as well."

Griffin, with shoes off to cool his "burning" feet, he had already become good friends with his walking companion.

"It's like we're out on a date," Griffin joked.

One of the more interesting features of the walk was the number of young children taking part. One group of five and six-year-olds, from the First Parish Unitarian Church in Watertown, trudged the first 10 miles with few complaints.

Judy Kamm, mother of one of the children in the group, explained that her church cancelled Sunday School so the kids could join the procession.

"I think this is great, because the kids are getting an understanding of the problem of the hungry," Kamm said. "Our church ran a program last week called 'Hunger Breakfast.' The kids drew tickets to see what they would eat. Most of the tickets were for a rice breakfast and they had to sit on the floor. This way, the kids learned that most of the people in the world don't have enough to eat."

"That's why we're out here," Kamm's five-year-old daughter Meredith chimed in, "to help the hungry people."

The rest station at the Eliot Church proved to be very popular with the walkers.

No-coin pay phones

NEWTON — Pay telephones in Newton have been modified so customers can make emergency and operated-assisted long distance calls without depositing a coin.

With the changes, New England Telephone's 850 coin-operated telephones in the Newton exchange are equipped to provide "dial tone first" (DFT) service.

NET Public Relations Manager Roberta Clement said that receiving a dial tone right away will enable customers to contact an operator for emergency assistance without depositing coins. Other calls placed by operators such as credit calls and directory assistance calls can also be made without coins. Local calls, however, will be completed by depositing the necessary coins before the number is dialed.

NTA Ward 8 debate, May 21

OAK HILL — The Newton Taxpayers Association will sponsor a debate between the four candidates for the Ward 8 Alderman's seat on Tuesday, May 21, 7:45 p.m., at the Memorial-Spaulding School on Brookline Street.

Sam Robbins, a member of the board of the NTA, will act as moderator for the event. He has promised that the form of the debate, including questions from the audience and a period in which each candidate will take turns as moderator, is designed to encourage lively, if not heated, discussion.

More trophies for local chess champs

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Four local chess buffs have brought trophies back to the Garden City from last weekend's National Elementary School Chess Championships.

Ross Eldridge, 10, a 5th grader at the Horace Mann School, Newtonville, tied for 4th in the country with a score of six wins and one loss. Eldridge, the reigning State Elementary Chess Champ, was ranked 11th in the nation going into the competition.

Robert Seltzer, 9, of West Roxbury, and Matthew Tom of Hanover, both members of Harry Goober's Chess Club at the Newtonville YMCA, also brought home trophies.

Another Goober protege, Elliot Lum, a 3rd grader at the Ward School, Chestnut Hill, scored five wins and two losses to place 14th in his division.

Jewels & Gems

BY CAROL
THE GOLD LADY

THE GOLD STANDARD

The choice of many different alloys, each with its own characteristics, allows modern jewelry designers to combine gold with gems in many attractive ways. This has been the impetus to an art that was undreamed of by early craftsmen. Another innovation in gold jewelry is the wide range of exciting finishes and textures that have been developed through improved technology. They make gold jewelry even more attractive. In addition to mirror bright finishes, gold can be worked with florentine, brush matte and other polished finishes that bring out the warm glow of the metal. With the use of textures, including moss, bark, bamboo, mink and diamond, it is possible to create a look of bulk combined with lightness. This is the look that ancient goldsmiths sought to achieve.

Because of the different materials available to jewelers it makes it so much easier to create custom designed pieces. And custom designed means especially made for you. It also means that each piece is unique bearing a quality all its own. You'll be able to obtain such pieces at CAROL "THE GOLD LADY", 109 Dalby St., Newton. We are known for our quality workmanship and excellent selection. Don't forget Mom on her day. NNN celebrates its first birthday

By Kevin C. Kennedy
News Editor

AUBURNDALE — Usually, when the song "Happy Birthday" is played, partygoers turn their attention to the guest of honor. Last weekend, when Nancy Wallace played the traditional piece in the hall of the United Parish of Auburndale, the guest of honor was nowhere to be seen, so they all looked at each other.

It was fitting, for they were the members of the Newton Neighborhood Network, a coalition of more than two dozen of the city's neighborhood organizations, and they were celebrating the fledgling organization's first birthday. They, the members of the network, were all guests of honor at the celebration.

Organized by Polly Bryson of the Auburndale Community Association and Susan Mirsky of the Highlands Area Council, the celebration was an occasion to marvel at the growth of the NNN after only one year of existence. If the network had been a little boy attending the party, many present undoubtedly would have tossled his hair and told him, "My, how you've grown!"

The party was attended by a large number of city officials that must have made the creators of NNN proud. Alderpersons Sondra Shick, Rodney Barker, Richard McGrath, Dominic Taglienti and Matthew Jefferson were there. Superintendent of Schools John Strand was there, along with Rev. William Lowe and Licensing Board member Martina Jackson.

Louise Taglienti, John Webber, John Rogers, Teresa Walsh and Tom Paulini joined with other neighborhood activists who have made the network what it is.

Bryson's penchant for purple showed up in the decor of the parish hall. A large cake with purple trim bore the names of every neighborhood organization that belongs to the network.

Just before the cake was cut, Mirsky addressed the crowd, saying the network's rapid growth and the cooperative spirit of all who had lent it their support were "quite marvelous. We found that issues each of us had were common concerns. As we shared them, we all grew."

Bryson, in turn, praised the network for its providing an effective line of communication with "the doers" in neighborhoods across the city. She encouraged those present to apply for membership in a coalition that will scrutinize the city's complex of zoning ordinances with an eye toward a revamp of them — a product, in part, of the network's push for a moratorium on commercial construction in the city.

Mirsky also pointed with pride to some new candidacies that have sprung from the network, notably Bryson's bid for the Ward 4 alderman's seat and Walsh's race in Ward 8.

Granted, there were politics a'plenty at the gathering. But, for a moment, while Nancy Wallace played the traditional tune and everybody sang "Happy Birthday, dear NNN," it was a birthday party with few precedents.

Local vets won't forget fallen brothers small park on Washington Street, across from Our Lady's Church and the Jackson Homestead. Five feet wide and three feet high, the stone, to be dedicated in the midst of Nonantum's Memorial Day Parade on May 26, will bear the names of all 23 fallen sons of the Garden City.

The present arrangement, with the names of our Vietnam dead spread throughout the city on bridges, parks and other memorials, did not satisfy Cerone or his friends. "I don't think these 23 kids from Vietnam should be separated," Cerone said during an emotional interview. "I believe their names should be in granite forever, in a quiet place. People will see it ... and now they're all together."

Cerone spoke of the determination he and several friends gained during a trip to see the Vietnam War Memorial in Washington. Overcome with emotion, the four friends came back home to do what they could in their own neighborhood.

"Like I said, we were the warriors, but the real heroes were the parents ... because they suffered the most, you know? ... the mothers," Cerone said. "We wanted the parents to know they were the true heroes."

It was not an easy task the local vets set for themselves, but the measure their own commitment was a starting point that determined their ultimate success. "Vietnam vets are never going to let this go. If these kids died for nothing .... The Vietnam vet will never be forgotten in the City of Newton. That's a promise.

"The government is not taking care of them, but we will take care of our brothers who have fallen, because no one else is going to. The government's certainly not. They'd like to sweep this thing under the rug anyway.

"We take care of our own. We'll always take care of our own." Cerone promised.

The very manner in which this country treated its returning vets from Vietnam has contributed to local vets' belief that, if they wanted something done, they would have to do it themselves. Cerone depicted the Vietnam vet's plight as one of conflicts and contradictions:

"The country asked you to do something, and you thought you'd do what's right. You had to go into the service, so everyone did. We all knew chances were we'd go to Nam. We went over there to fight a war the older generation thought was right and the younger generation thought was wrong ... and we were in the middle.

"Naturally, you did what you thought was right.

"You did your time. You saw the waste. You saw the blind, the lame and you saw the dead. Some suffered more than others. Some suffered the ultimate.

"Then there was the guilt ....

"The Vietnam vet served his country. He suffered and died, and he's still dying today of Agent Orange. But we were told by the older generation we were nothing but crybabies, longhairs and drug addicts. And the younger generation called us 'baby killers.' I remember being spit on," Cerone added in a tone that revealed he still does not understand why things went the way they did.

The dedication of the memorial on the 26th will mark the end of a long push for Cerone and his mates. "So many times, I said, 'I'll be glad when this is over.' But, if I had to do it all over again, I wouldn't hesitate," he commented, adding that credit had to be shared with his fellow committee members: John Magni, Richie Lerner, Mark Antonellis, Scott Bolio, Franni Dalicandro and Eileen Adams, who volunteered her considerable office skills to act as secretary of the committee.

Starting with a bank account of $35, Cerone and his fellow vets sold t-shirts, put jars out in neighborhood businesses and pushed for contributions face-to-face. But it was not until Adams sent letters out to all the city's veterans' organizations and other groups that the fund really started to grow. "Every one of them came across and donated as much as they possibly could," Cerone said. "People in this city are very generous. They'll give everything if they believe in something. Obviously they believe in this, because money has been no problem."

Responses from veterans groups and organizations like the Nonantum Children's Christmas Party Association, the Newton Police Association and the Newton Firefighters all included encouragement to "keep up the good work."

Cerone also lavished praise on one particular lady "with a big heart" who helped the project along in a substantial way. Mary Bradley of Newton Memorial Arts, according to Cerone, gave his group the break it needed finally to secure a fitting monument. "She's a true friend of the Vietnam vet. She really helped us a lot," he said.

The stone is waiting in Vermont for the final draft of names, according to Cerone. He and his mates have been very meticulous with the details, making sure that what is carved in granite for all time is perfect. Regarding the compulsion for perfection he brought to the project, Cerone said simply, "We might as well do it right. It's never going to be done again."

Included in the memorial's roll of honor will be Spec. 5 Richard W. Cardinali; Lance Cpl. Rupert S. Carven, III; Sgt. Warren Dixon; Pfc. Paul H. Dunne, Jr.; Warrant Officer Robert C. Ferris; Sgt. Nannies are back

At Merchant's firm, all prospective nannies are required to complete a training program that includes lessons in child psychology, childbirth, child safety, nutrition, and physical development in infancy and the pre-school years.

This may sound impressive, but Eve Rook, a Newton resident who nannied for two families over a total of 20 years in her native country, England, and in Massachusetts, attended a year-long college program to prepare for her duties as a nanny in the early 1930s.

"There's an awful lot to do if you're going to (take care of children) properly," she says. Trained, full-time nannies "take complete control of the children."

Not only did Rook learn such basic child-care skills as cooking and bathing, she even learned to handwash clothing and diapers because, in those days, were no washing machines.

As is the case with the Primary Nursing program, Rook was required to gain some on-the-job experience before graduating and securing her first nanny position.

"We actually had children (at the school) — babies and toddlers," she explains. "We first spent time in the classroom learning, then spent time in a nursery with toddlers," putting them down for naps, taking them out for walks in big prams and push carriages, and out to play in a garden or park.

Upon completion of the course, some nannies would accept positions with wealthy families who had top-floor nurseries. Rook never accepted such positions, she says, because the nanny would be sequestered with her charges. Maids would deliver meals to the children and nanny, and parents would only see the children for a short time.

Things have changed, she notes. "The girls now are more like mother's helpers. Parents now have much more to do with their childrens' lives. I don't think it's the same at all," she says.

One of the differences between the prototype English nanny and those now available in America may be the age. Of the women who completed Primary Nursing's first training program, most were young women "just out of high school," and a few were older women, who have grown children.

Another difference is the pay. Rook was awarded only a stipend and room and board for her efforts in England. Whereas, now, "the money is pretty good," according to one nanny who completed the Wellesley company's program. A former day care worker, this woman decided to become a nanny partly for the higher pay, but also to escape the stresses of working with a lot of children.

A further change in the nanny business is that many of them do not live with families. Indeed, says Merchant, many families prefer nannies who will commute to their home daily. The reason for this, she guesses, is that their houses are too small to handle an extra person.

This commuting-nanny approach may be just as well. Rook found that "You lead a different life when living inside someone else's house. You don't meet people as easily," she says, because of the limited number of free hours.

Nevertheless, then and now, nannies serve an important function in a household. She asserts, "Children should know someone is looking after them. I don't agree with all these kids coming home to empty houses. When mothers are out all day working, they are inclined to let kids have their own way. I think kids get into more trouble.

"I do believe in a certain amount of discipline," she states. "Children are better if they know there are ground rules. Having someone else there is not the same as having the parents (there)." But it's better than a baby sitter, she says, because the nanny knows the children better.

In fact, to her former employers and their children, Rook is still known only as "Nanny." Once, she recalls, someone close to one of the families turned to her, perplexed, and asked "I've only known you as 'Nanny,' what's you're real name?"

Rook says she feels she is part of both families for whom she worked — here and in England. She visits with her family in Chestnut Hill on a regular basis, and sees the other family in England when she returns home for a visit. The children there are now all musicians. And, recently, Rook traveled to New York City to watch one conduct at the Met.

In a thoughtful tone, she states, "It's so fascinating to see them grow up."

9 teachers axed

NEWTON — Nine tenured teachers — serving six city schools and four disciplines — will be notified this week their contracts have not been renewed.

By a unanimous vote, the School Committee agreed to notify staff members that declining enrollments will prompt a reduction-in-force (RIF). The teachers' contract stipulates the school system inform staff members of their dismissal by May 15.

"When we were last informed by the School Department we thought the number would come in at nine," said Teachers Association President Anthony Croce, who added he was contacted by one teacher who had already received her notification.

Asked if RIF letters had been sent prior to the vote, member Robert Ricles said he did not think the letters had been mailed.

"The teacher may have been informed by her principal," Ricles said.

The Day Junior High School faculty members include Deborah L. Schnorr (English), Beatrice Maier (Music), Jennifer King (Guidance and Counseling) and Sharon Milinsky (Guidance and Counseling).

War poems will live on

where the Staten Island Ferry docks in New York City, the Rice family of Newton will attend the unveiling of a Vietnam memorial that includes 83 excerpts from wartime letters culled from material submitted from across the country.

Etched in indestructible glass are words from a letter Jim wrote three days before he was killed.

Dear Folks: Fourteen days left in the field and then I should be headed home. I can't write too long, we are going out in about an hour for an ambush. Here is a $159 check plus my W-2. I'll tell you — it's a hard way to make $1,206.

Waltham Police Off. Peter McGann knew Jim Rice back when they went to high school together at St. Mary's. Both of them ended up in Vietnam in the Marines. Rice was assigned to the Third Battalion, Third Marines and McGann was in Chu Lai, First Battalion, Seventh Marines.

"He looked me up," said McGann of those distant years. "We had a few beers one night together and we talked about old times.

"We were homesick — both of us — and we did a lot of soul searching."

In a letter written home in February of 1967, shortly after Jim arrived in Vietnam, he wrote: "I have a lot of time over here to think. At night we just guard the perimeter and look at the sky, but all you can do is think about a million things."

Eight months later, he wrote: "'There are no atheists in foxholes' is one of the truest statements ever written. I think every Marine, especially up North here has said at night during action, "Please God." Last February when I saw my first Marine killed . . . It is a funny world and being closely involved in a war I want to stay as close as possible to God. Well, it is now 1:50 a.m. and I have to get up at 5 a.m."

John P. Rice always wondered just how his son died. A chance encounter on a bus in Washington D.C. during the Vietnam War Memorial dedication got him the answer.

Riding into Washington from Arlington National Cemetery, Rice asked if anyone on the bus was on the demilitarized zone, (DMZ) at the time his son was there.

Within earshot was William W. Clough, the ex-soldier who turned around some 14 years back to see that the man he had just been talking to — Pfc. James J. Rice — had been killed instantly.

On that day, the young Marine's unit had been ambushed by North Vietnamese regulars. "Nearly all of the Marines in his squad became casualties," read one of the citations for valor awarded Jim. The citation goes on to state Rice crawled out into automatic weapons fire to drag back wounded comrades and spot enemy positions.

He was awarded the Bronze Star with a V for valor, the Cross of Gallantry and Meritorious Bravery Award.

"He really matured overnight in the Marine Corp, especially after he went to Vietnam," said the senior Rice.

Jim was, "sort of groping, he wasn't exactly sure what he wanted to do," before going into the service," his father said.

His son wrote: "One year ago today I arrived in this green land — I have learned an awful lot. I have matured under fire and I cannot wait to get back into college. Yes, I definitely will take on any college professor who starts lecturing about the waste and our wrongness being in Vietnam. Folks in the United States take so much for granted. Over here in battle we do not live a day at a time — many times we live an hour at a time."

Applying verse to the world around him, Jim wrote:

War comes and goes
And delivers its dreadful blow
Upon the ground
Lie the lifeless souls.

As war leaves its mark
The blood will flow
But it will soon be over,
The killer will go.

People shout, people cry,
While others sit and wonder why
What it had to be.

Maybe to make us realize
That some people live
But too many die.

Mann's campaign confirmed

"about a month ago" how many of the documents he would need.

"He said, 'The same as before,'" according to Licarie, who noted that Mann has requested 500 nomination papers at the start of prior campaigns.

If Mann wins the November 5 municipal election, he will become the longest consecutively-serving mayor in the city's 112-year history, edging out Edwin O. Childs, who served 15 straight years from 1914 to 1929.

Asked if he was looking forward to this prospect, Mann replied, "I'm looking forward to being the best mayor the city has ever had."

When it was pointed out that many believe he has already achieved that distinction, the mayor jokingly praised the "exceptional judgement" of those admirers.

He said the money currently in his campaign coffers represents "a healthy start," but added that the amount is "not sufficient to run" a full-scale campaign.

"It's never been a problem for me to raise funds," Mann added.

Election Commission records show the standing political action committee formed in Mann's name boasting a fund totalling $15,297.65 as of Jan. 1, 1985, but the mayor said some of that money has already been spent.

The next Campaign Finance Reports for this year's race must be filed on September 2, eight days before the city's tentatively scheduled preliminary election. A run-off for the mayoral slot will not be needed unless three or more candidates are vying for the job.

Mann, who lives with his wife, Florence, at 21 Littlefield Road in Oak Hill, has previously served eight years an an alderman and four terms as one of the Garden City's state representatives. He and his wife have five children and three grandchildren.

A veteran of World War II, Mann holds seven battle stars and a naval unit citation from his tour in the Pacific Theater. He was educated in Boston public schools and holds an honorary degree in Public Administration from the New England School of Law.

Competition may be McGrath

advantageous time for him to have launched a campaign against Mann would have been "a year ago."

He said he has two main reasons for considering a mayoral bid.

"One is for the pure reason of democracy. I don't think any office should go uncontested. It has nothing to do with Teddy Mann personally. I think you should have opponents in order to make the system work better and to force candidates to respond to their constituents," he said.

The other reason, according to McGrath, is Mann's performance.

"He really hasn't done that good a job. The sentiment in the community at-large is that maybe he's been the best candidate that's been offered, but there probably hasn't been another choice for many people," he said.

Looming in the background, however, is the chance that an all-out mayoral bid would force McGrath to sacrifice the at-Large role at which many political observers believe he is most effective.

"I would run to win. If I didn't think I could win, I wouldn't run. I believe I could beat Ted Mann today with the proper campaign and proper effort," he said, speculating that a surge of community support would help him "bridge the gap" and mount a successful, if extraordinarily late-starting, mayoral campaign.

Write your own fortune

By Susan Schneck
In focus Editor

Why leave your fate in the hands of unknown forces when you could chart your own future?

At the Lucky Duck Fortune Cookie company in Newton, all it takes is 25 cents to determine your destiny. For a quarter, customers can create their own fortunes — or dream up messages for friends, employees and other dining companions.

Personalized fortune cookies cost 25 cents each for an order of 50, 10 cents each for an order of 1,000 and five cents each for 15,000. There are no restrictions on content as long as it's "tasteful," according to the Lieus of Newton, who own the company.

Topics of personalized messages range from Doug Flutie to college exams to love. One man, "Tim," ordered a batch with the message, "If you love Tim, marry him."

He then went out to dinner with his potential fiancee and secretly handed two cookies with that message to his waiter, thereby ensuring his date would get the message.

Other made-to-order messages include: "Doug Flutie worshippers make better lovers;" "Over 30 and never been better;" "There is life after exams;" and "You are a hard habit to break. I'm glad I'm not trying."

In Taiwan, where the Lieus were born, people do not end their meal with fortune cookies. In fact, they would be incredulous to watch Americans finish their dinners in Chinese restuarants, break open their fortune cookies, read the messages inside, then discard the cookies.

"They wouldn't believe it; they'd call it an unnecessary waste of good food," says Leo Lieu, who moved to America with his wife in 1966 when they were 27 and 26 respectively. "They'd say a farmer grows the wheat for that, you're wasting good food."

Further, Lieu notes that most Chinese are lucky just to get dinner, much less desert.

But this is America, where crazy notions like messages inside crunchy carbohydrates are the stuff of profitable business schemes. Lucky Duck is flourishing.

"The fortune cookie is like pop literature," explains Mrs. Lieu, who composes fortunes for the thousands of mass-produced cookies her company sells to restaurants and stores throughout New England. "People can think of whatever they want to say and they can see it in print right away."

Mrs. Lieu, who does not wish to reveal her first name, takes the fortune writing business very seriously. She often prints the company phone number on the backs of messages, asking readers for reactions.

A student of astrology, she write messages that coincide with the positions of the planets. But she only selects celestial relationships that remain for long time periods, to ensure messages will not become dated.

Once, she discarded a batch of fortunes after a customer called to complain about a message stating that circumstances would remain the same for about a year, then would change.

"A lady called and she was really upset, she said she felt like putting her head in an oven if she had to wait a year for a change," Mrs. Lieu recalls. "I was shocked — she was so impatient.

"I have to be very careful when I write these fortunes because some have such an impact on people."

Mr. Lieu also takes the business very seriously, having spent close to a year perfecting his cookie before opening the business. He adjusted the recipe repeatedly, making sure it tasted good, was thick enough to hold shape but not too thick to bite, and had a smooth texture.

The Lieus charge more than competing companies, claiming their product is "superior.

"When they hear my price, they say 'No.' But they change their minds when they see that my cookies don't break and they're of better quality," says Mr. Lieu, who personally oversees the production of thousands of fortune cookies each day.

He says his loving care extends from the batter, which he mixes in small amounts to ensure proper disbursement of the ingredients, to the $40,000 machine used to make the cookie, to the care spent composing the messages and the careful packing, done to prevent breakage.

He picks up one of his golden masterpieces and holds it up for admiration. "See how smooth it is," he exclaims, smiling like a proud father. "See how the sides don't wilt and how good the texture looks."

This morning, inside Lieu's main cookie plant, an employee is carefully mixing a batch of flour, sugar, water, vanilla and eggs and feeds it into a machine, specifically designed to produce fortune cookies.

Small amounts of batter drop onto circular metal surfaces which slowly rotate on a conveyor belt. The batter drops are heated, changing them into round, flat shapes resembling silver dollar pancakes.

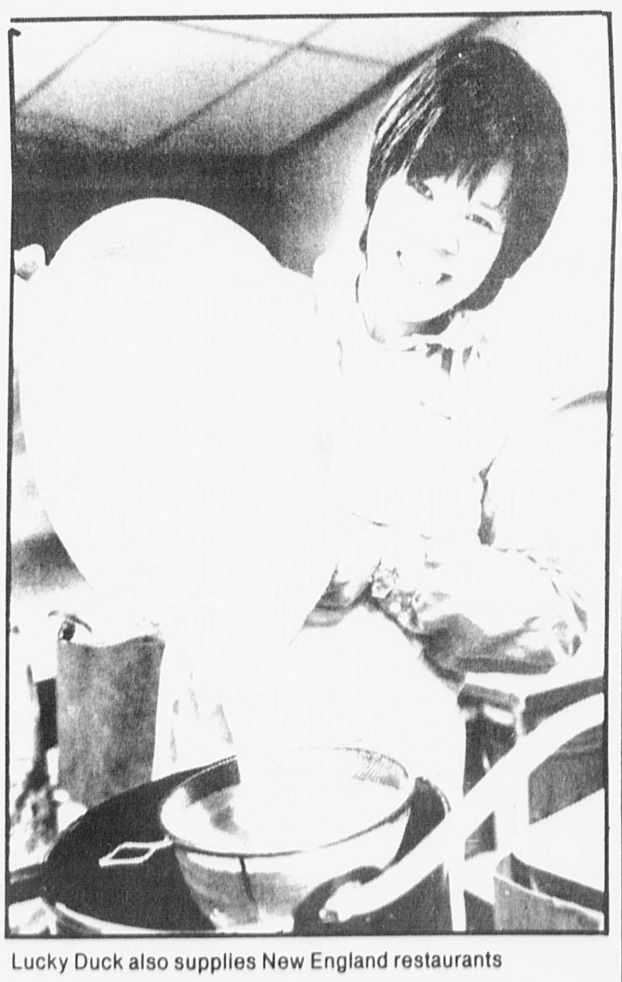

The machine then sticks a paper fortune on top of each "pancake," folds the cooked dough around the message and blasts cool air on the cookie, hardening it instantly.

Before opening his Lucky Duck Fortune Cookie company, Mr. Lieu was a biochemist, worked in research for close to 20 years. And before moving to America, the Lieus worked as teachers in Taiwan. They moved to this country because "it's the land of opportunity," explains Mrs. Lieu, a former English teacher.

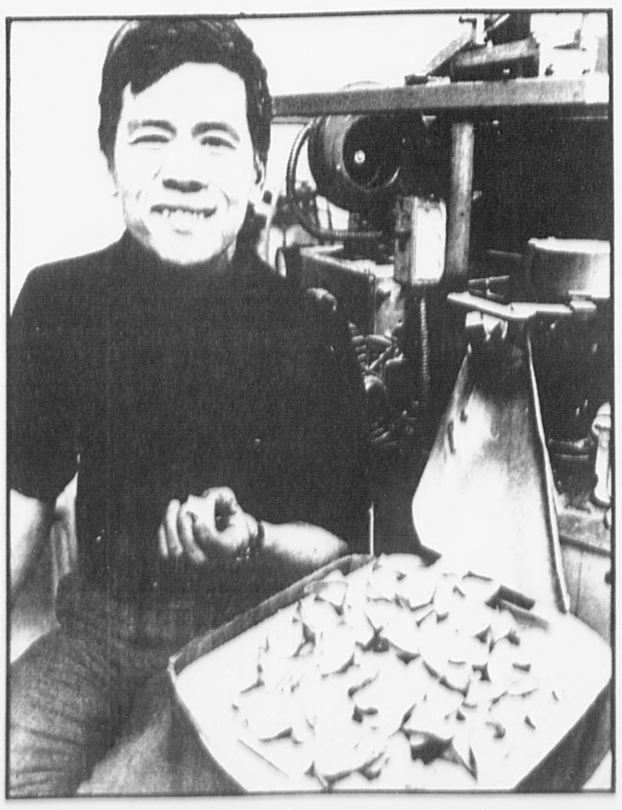

But Mr. Lieu was not fully satisfied with his career in research. He wanted to be his own boss and he grew weary of the pay and the pace of his work.

"You could spend your whole life researching one thing and you might not find the answer," he explains. "Here, (in business) if I get an idea, I try it out and if it doesn't work I try a new one the next day."

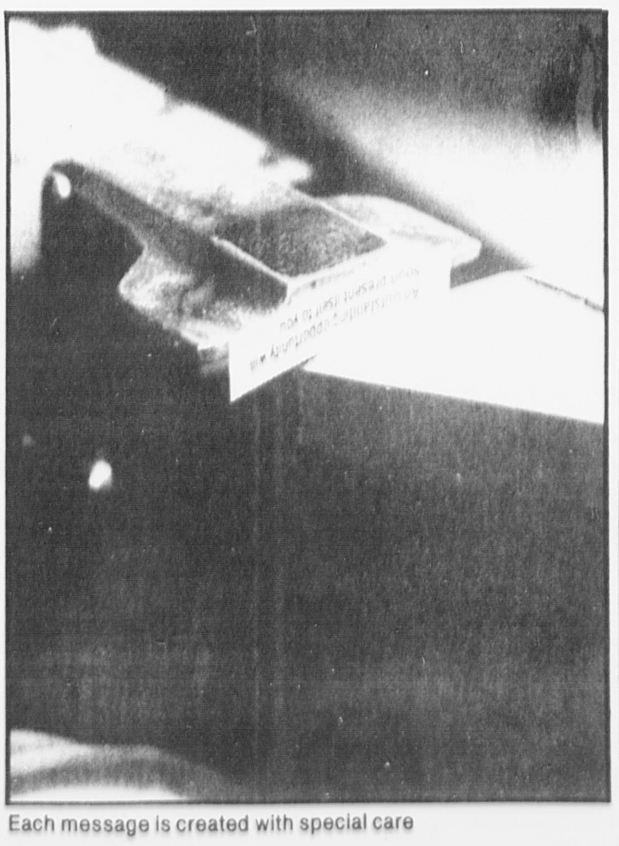

His own future seems to hold even more financial success in store for him as Mr. Lieu plans to begin selling different-flavored fortune cookies. "I'm always thinking of something," he says with a grin.

League picks delegates for the biennial convention

NEWTON — Fourteen members of the League of Women Voters members will be delegates to the League's state biennial convention to be held at Bentley College in Waltham, May 10, 11 and 12. The Newton delegates include Sharalyn Arntz, Mary Adelstein, Anita Capeless, David Danielson, Cathy Fitch, Ann Grantham, Anne Hayden, Judy Jaffe, Priscilla Leith, Kristen Lundbert, Linda Morrison, Enid Paul, Florence Rubin, and Ethel Sheehan.

Newton representatives on the state League 1984-85 board are Sandy Butzel, director for social policy, and Ann Harner, women's issues specialist. In addition, Mary Addelstein has served as referendum specialist and will continue in this position for 1985-86. Recently nominated Newton representatives for the 1985-86 state League board include Judy Jaffe, relations director, and Ethel Sheehan, national security director.

Newton League delegates will join others from over 100 local chapters throughout Massachusetts. One of the main tasks before the delegates will be to decide on the program of League work that will be adopted for state action in the next biennium. League members will also vote on the 1985-86 budget, attend workshops and caucuses on a variety of issues, review the latest League publications and video publications, and give awards to certain Leagues for excellence in a number of areas.

Pamela Ann Daley marries William Gerard Whelton

Mr. and Mrs. John F. Daley, Jr. of East Weymouth, announce the marriage of their daughter, Pamela Ann, to William Gerard Whelton of Newton, son of Mr. and Mrs. William J. Whelton.

They were married Oct. 13, 1984 at 6:15 p.m. in St. Albert's the Great, Weymouth. A nupital mass ceremony was performed by Monsignor Eugene P. McNamara.

The bride wore a Priscilla ivory, tissue tafetta gown trimmed with silken Venise lace and long modified Lego mutton sleeves. She had a chapel train with scalloped lace at the hem line and wore a picture hat. The bride carried 12 long-stemmed white roses.

A friend of the bride, Margaret M. Goggins, of Weymouth, was maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Dianne and Amy Daley of Weymouth, who are sisters of the bride, Paula Whelton of Newton, sister of the groom, and Judith Hondo-Grimes of Walpole, a friend of the bride.

The best man was Thomas D. Sbordone, of Newton. Ushers were Peter and John Daley of Weymouth, who are brothers of the bride, John Brady Jr. of Weymouth, cousin of the bride, and Shawn Conboy of Newton, friend of the groom.

The reception was held in the ballroom of the Sheraton Tara, Braintree. The couple took a wedding trip to the Hawaiian Islands. Their future residence was to be Hanover.

The bride recieved her B.A. from the University of Massachusetts, Amherst. She is a candidate for a master's degree in business administration at Northeastern University, Boston. She currently works as a utility analyst with the Department of Public Utilities.

The bridegroom received a B.S. from Northeastern University, Boston and is a candidate for a master's degree in business administration at Suffolk University, Boston. He is currently an assistant credit manager for Colonial Gas Company.

Area families announce births

Stephen B. and Karen (Fitzsimmons) Kromer of Newton announce the birth of their daughter, Kristina Gisele, on March 7 at 9:34 a.m. at the Mt. Auburn Hospital, Cambridge. Both parents are former Waltham residents.

Charles J. and Jacqueline M. (Rando) Casavant of West Newton announce the birth of their daughter, Ivy Elizabeth, born April 13 at Newton-Wellesley Hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. David A. Rose (Paula Vatalaro) of Tewksbury are pleased to announce the birth of their son, Steven Anthony, on April 15, at Mount Auburn Hospital, Cambridge. Mrs. Rose is a former resident of Newton.

Donor dinner set at Sisterhood Temple Reyim

Sisterhood Temple Reyim of Newton will hold its annual Donor Dinner on Wednesday evening, May 15, in the Ordis Social Hall. The two honorees of the evening are Attorney Paula Gold, Secretary of Consumer Affairs and Business Regulation for the Commonwealth of Massachusetts and Sophie Weinfeld, for the Light of Torah Award, 1985.

Husbands and guests are invited to attend. For information on tickets, call 527-2410.

May 18 is garden club plant sale

The Auburndale Garden Club will hold its 4th Annual Plant Sale on Saturday, May 18, 1985 from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. at the Auburndale Public Library Park, 375 Auburn St., Auburndale, rain or shine.

Proceeds from the sale will benefit the Garden Club's environmental improvement and beautification projects. Library Park, an area for which the club has won awards, is maintained and planted with flowers seasonally by members. Islands on Hancock and Grove streets and window boxes outside the Auburndale Post Office are also tended by the club.

Jeffrey Elman and Karen Nyman

Karen Nyman will marry Jeffrey Elman of Newton

Mr. and Mrs. Philip Nyman of Weston announce the engagement of their daughter, Karen Beth Nyman, to Jeffrey Mark Elman, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley L. Elman of Newton and Falmouth.

Miss Nyman graduated from Weston High School in 1979 and the University of Pennsylvania in 1983. She is currently employed by the United States Trust Company as a branch manager. She was recently appointed an officer of the bank.

Mr. Elman graduated from Newton South High School in 1979. He attended the University of Miami and is completing his bachelor of science degree in management at Bentley College. He recently joined the firm of Green & Freedman Baking Company, Inc. of South Boston.

An October wedding is planned.

Miriam Samick, above, will be made president of the Brandeis University National Women's Committee (BUNWC) at the group's May 29 meeting. For information, call 332-5095.

The Perfect Choice for Mother's Day
The Carnation
At the turn of the century when a special day was set aside to honor all mothers, the search began for the official Mother's Day flower.
Long beloved for its beauty, spicy scent, clove-like flavor and sturdiness, the carnation was chosen. The White Carnation. Its sweetness, purity, nurturing and enduring qualities made it the perfect floral emblem for motherhood.

Cory's

Campus briefs

Kim Crawford of Boston recently appeared on WBZ-TV's Today! show to promote Newton's Little People's/Learning Prep School's Jump for Heart Marathon. The marathon was coordinated by the school's adaptive physical education instructor Debbie Hoffman of Haverhill. Under her guidance, the students and staff raised $1,114.15 for the American Heart Association.

Rich Sorota has been named to the 1985 edition of Who's Who Among Students in Colleges and Universities. Sorota is the son of Max and Barbara Sorota of West Newton. He is a senior in the college of Arts and Sciences at the University of Vermont. A 1981 graduate of Newton North High School, he is majoring in economics and political science.

Deborah C. Levy of Newton is a cast member in the Bryant College drama club's production of "Pippin." Levy is also a choreographer for the Roger Hirson and Stephen Schwartz musical comedy.

Jessica Burrows of Newton, a 5-year-old skater who attends Memorial-Spaulding School, appeared last week in the 73rd annual production of Ice Chips, the oldest amateur ice show in the United States. She skated in one number as a Cabbage Patch Kid and in a space number as ET. The show was held at Boston University's Walter Brown Rink.

John Vitti, son of Mrs. Marion Vitti of West Newton and an Ithaca College student, recently won an award in the 22nd Annual Student Production Awards competition, sponsored by Alpha Epsilon Rho, the national broadcasting society. Vitti, a philosophy/religion major at the New York school, won the prize in the category "Video Entertainment — Comedy" for an entry entitled, "The Nothing Special Comedy Shows #3." A 1982 graduate of Newton North High School, Vitti worked on the project with four other Ithaca College juniors.

A number Newton residents who attend Catholic Memorial High School in West Roxbury have been named to the third marking period honor roll. Among them are: Keith Harrington, grade 9, first honors; Stephen Perruzzi, grade 9, second honors; Todd Barrett, James Marshall, Robert Nealon and Yassir Shanshiry, grade 10, second honors; Greg Harrington, grade 11, second honors; and Thomas Conboy, Michael Donnelly and Norman Farrar, grade 12, second honors.

Newton Catholic High School recently participated in the Continental Mathematics League Awards Contest. The following freshmen were awarded certificates: Newton resident Joan DeRubeis, first place; Newton resident Mike Lewis, second place; Robert Corolla of Brighton, third place; and Richard Sheehy of Newtonville and Alicia Gage of Waltham, who tied for fourth place.

Glenn Manning, Domenic A. Antonellis, William G. Pearson, and Leonard Lochiatto, all of Newton, are enrolled in a special Massachusetts Electrical Code Licensing preparation course at the Coyne Electrical Department of Chamberlayne Junior College in Boston.

Jeffrey Liebman, son of Carol and Lance Liebman, 86 Sargent St., is one of 500 outstanding young American students named as a finalist in the U.S. Scholars Program. Some 1,500 students were identified for participation in this program from among nearly three million graduating seniors nationwide. Jeff is a graduating senior at Newton North High School.

From the 500 finalists, the selection of 141 Presidential Scholars will be made in early May by the members of the Commission on Presidential Scholars. This program identifies annually the most distinguished and accomplished graduating high school seniors in the nation.

Linda Amicangioli and Michael Lewis, both of Newton, won awards at the Newton Catholic annual science fair. There were over 50 entries which covered a variety of categories including astronomy, biology, drugs, energy, meteriology, psycholgy and physiology. Amicangioli won second place for "Investigations of Hypnosis," and Lewis won third place for "Nuclear and Thermonuclear Weaponry."

Also noted for exceptional detail was Joseph Di Ducca of Newton for "Development and Destruction of the Hurricaine" and Rebecca Counihan of Newton for "Diabetes;" exceptional display was Pompeo De Rubeis of Newton for "The Frog: The Ultimate Biological Specimen;" exceptional creativity was Joan De Rubeis of Newton for "The Hazards of Smoking;" exceptional knowledge was awarded to Paul Lyden of Newton for "The Moon" and Jeannette Deffely of Newtonville for "Penguins Evolution;" and exceptional clarity Susan Prendergast of West Roxbury for "Drugs" and Joan Sheehan of Hyde Park for "Drugs."

Stacy A. Shechter of Chestnut Hill and Dr. Ralph R. Lobene of Newton recently took part in the traditional capping and pinning ceremony of Forsyth School for Dental Hygienists in Northeastern University's Alumni Auditorium in Boston. Students received the hygienists' pin and were administered the dental hygienists' oath. Dr. Lobene, dean of the school, was a speaker at the ceremony.

Mark Del Grosso of Newton and Kurt Shlager of Waban were recently listed on the dean's list at Southeastern Massachusetts University for the fall semester of 1984.

Kathleen Owen of Newton was recently inducted into the newly chartered chapter of the University of Lowell national engineering honor society, Tau Bets Lambda.

Kevin Connell of Newtonville has been named to the Ohio Wesleyan University Dean's List for the fall semester, 1984. This means a semester average of 3.50 or better was achieved in at least three unit courses.

A junior, Connell is a graduate of Newton South High School. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William F. Connell of 367 Albemarle Rd.

Ms. Sabrina Rossi of Newton Centre has been awarded a scholarship to attend Katharine Gibbs School in September 1985.

Ms. Rossi is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sabin Rossi and will graduate in June from Newton North High School.

Berklee College of Music senior Edwin D. Hurwitz, son of Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Hurwitz of 202 Homer St., Newton, was featured bassist in "Contraband!," a critically acclaimed concert of original and contemporary funk and pop music held before a standing-room-only audience recently in the Berklee Recital Hall.

Judy Lim and Yen Yu, both of Newton, sophomores majoring in Medical Assisting at Mount Ida College, Newton Centre, received their Medical Assisting Pins on Sunday, April 28, at a ceremony held in Alumnae Auditorium at Mount Ida College. The pinning is a rite of passage signifying the professional acceptance into the role of the Medical Assistant-Allied Health Professional.

Cynthia Anne Fine of Newton Centre was recently awarded a bachelor of science in business administration, cum laude, and Jayne Ramsey-Parker of Waban was awarded a master in business administration from Suffolk University, President Daniel H. Perlman announced.

James S. Kohn, of Chestnut Hill, was nominated for membership of the national honor fraternity, Phi Beta Kappa, at Bowdoin College. Kohn, one of eight students to be nominated, was chosen for his "sustained superior intellectual performance." Kohn is a graduate of Brookline High School and Phillips Academy in Andover, Mass.

Tenants also have rights

Good, clear contract is crucial in buying a home

By Ellis E. COnklin
UPI Feature Writer

In an era of scrupulously detailed sales contracts and sly real estate lawyers, an old caveat for a prospective homeowner, "let the buyer beware," is as much a vestige of the past as a $25,000 beach-front house.

The adage, however, applies somewhat more sparingly to people who rent. Members of the real estate community say renters must beware of the landlord who knowingly or unwittingly takes advantage of his monthly clientele.

Compared to the apartment dweller, a new homeowner can expect a great deal more certainty in what he can expect from the person selling the dream home. The key to a successful, stress-free transaction is a good, clear contract.

A home, for example, consists of the property and the things attached to it, said Tom Griffin, president of Coldwell Banker Residential Real Estate Service of Southern California, one of the largest real estate firms in the nation.

The seller may yank out the upstairs bedroom window air conditioner, but not the central air conditioning system. The bathroom towel racks can come down, but not if stripping them from the walls causes any damage to the house, Griffin said.

"It all just depends what's in the contract," Griffin said. "If the seller specifies in the contract that he gets the washer and dryer, then he gets the washer and dryer .... The biggest problem is a lack of clarity in the contract."

But there are some gray areas such as whether the draperies are included in the purchase price. Griffin said there's usually more haggling about that then anything else.

The owner of the home has the obligation to disclose any facts about his property that the buyer would likely think twice about before putting his name on the dotted line, said Mick O'Brand, a legal expert with Coldwell Banker.

"If the seller knows about a leaky roof or that the property is on unstable, shifting ground and doesn't disclose that to the buyer, he could be liable for fraud," O'Brand said.

"When in doubt, spell it out on the contract," said James Wright, an Irvine, Calif., real estate agent.

"A buyer needs to watch out for these kind of things," Griffin said. "But the days of the buyer beware are really over."

The fundamental right new homeowners are entitled to is simply to get the house they paid for — to get what's laid out in black and white.

It's not exactly the same with renters.

Although a landlord cannot by law discriminate on the basis of race, sex, religion or age in entering into a rental agreement, the burden of proof usually rests on the renter.

The same goes with the landlord who evicts the tenant because the renter has repeatedly demanded that his leaky toilet be fixed. Or with the renter who gets the heave-ho for supposedly creating a nuisance so the landlord can finally get her brother-in-law's best friend the eighth-floor apartment, the one with the kingly view of the city skyline.

Blanche Rosloff has heard the complaints, seen the trickery, and witnessed the unresolvable tenant-landlord squabbling for the past decade as executive director of the Westside Fairhousing Council in Santa Monica, Calif.

UPI photo.

Blanche Rosloff has heard the complaints, seen the trickery, and witnessed the unresolvable tenant-landlord squabbling for the past decade as executive director of the Westside Fairhousing Council in Santa Monica, Calif.

The council was organized in 1968, chiefly to monitor rental properties in the Los Angeles area and inform renters of their rights. And renters do have rights, Rosloff said. More than they think.

First of all, in rent-controlled Los Angeles, renters cannot be charged more than a 7 percent increase in their rent each year. In Santa Monica, it's 4 percent.

Renters also have the legal right to a "habitable" dwelling, Rosloff said. That means no vermin, a toilet that works when flushed, safe electrical wiring, a healthy water supply, and proper heating and ventilation.

If a problem does arise — the oven breaks or the roof leaks — the renter must notify the landlord in writing of the trouble, Rosloff said. The landlord then has 30 days to make the repair.

If the landlord does not, the renter can deduct the cost of the repair from his rent, but the repair cannot exceed one month's rent.

Withholding the rent entirely is also permissable, but the apartment dweller must stash the rent in an escrow fund.

Police log

Youths shoot house windows

NONANTUM — A pair of 10-year-old boys shot out windows at two North Street homes Sunday with a BB guns and then fled through the Calvary Cemetery, police said. The youths shot one window at each house at 7:20 p.m., according to police.

Lawn mower taken from home

NEWTON CENTRE — A man wearing a red baseball hat and blue jeans on Sunday reportedly rode off on a Craftsman lawn mower worth $1,200, according to police. The mower, which belonged to a Parker Street resident, was last seen on Stearns Street, with the suspect behind the wheel, police said. The theft was reported at 8:30 p.m.

Student sentenced for larceny

NEWTON — An 18-year-old Newton North High School student was sentenced to 30 days in prison last week in Newton District Court after admitting sufficient facts to warrant guilty findings on charges that included breaking and entering and larceny.

Judge Monte G. Basbas sentenced Anthony P. Kamerman, 50 Winchester Road, Newtonville, to a one-year sentence at the Billerica House of Correction for larceny of property worth less than $100. The sentence was suspended to 30 days, according to court records.

In addition, he received suspended six-month terms for another count of larceny of property worth less than $100, each of the two counts of breaking and entering during the daytime with intent to commit a misdemeanor, and each of the two counts of disorderly conduct.

Judge Basbas suspended all of these sentences to 30 days and ordered all six, 30-day prison terms to be served concurrently.

Kamerman admitted sufficient facts to warrant guilty findings on all six charges, according to court records.

Court records show that the Newtonville youth also received two years of probation.

Kamerman was arraigned on April 4.

Innocent plea for lewdness

NEWTON — A not guilty plea was entered last week in Newton District Court for a 21-year-old, West Newton man who is charged with two counts of open and gross lewdness. Police arrested Clifton A. Kangas, 160 Chestnut Street, for allegedly exposing himself in front of a woman on April 1 and again on April 28. In the latest incident, he was accused of indecently exposing himself to a Newton North High School student jogging at the intersection of Lowell Avenue and Highland Street, according to police.

Stolen vehicle case dismissed

NEWTON — Newton District Court Judge Monte G. Basbas last week dismissed the case against a West Newton man charged with receiving a stolen motor vehicle. Michael Bottigieri, 19, of 7 Cottage Place, was charged in September of last year.

Man doctors-up a restaurant

NEWTON HIGHLANDS — When a Heartland Drug pharmicist checked last week on a call from a man claiming to be a doctor, he discovered that the "doctor's" office was the lobby of a Friendly's Restaurant in Arlington.

Police said the phony physician telephoned the 916 Walnut Street drugstore at 4 p.m. asking for two drugs: Doriden, which requires a prescription, and Elavil, which does not.

According to Newton police, the man said he wanted the drugs for a patient living in Waban and said the patient would be over to pick up the drugs.

The pharmicist filled the order for Elavil but did not fill the one for Doriden, classified by police as a controlled substance.

Police said an Arlington Police detective was notified to check on the local extension and tried the number: a woman answered the pay phone saying it was the doctor's office.

The detective then checked the number and found it was the lobby of the Friendly's in Arlington.

Radio, tapes, detector stolen

CHESTNUT HILL — A $245 radar detector, $350 AM/FM radio and cassette tapes were reported stolen last week from a 1981 Audi parked on Lee Road, police said. Entrance was gained into the car by breaking the driver's side door lock, according to police. Police said the theft took place between 11 a.m. and 6 p.m. on Tuesday.

Sentenced for house break

NEWTON — A 29-year-old West Newton man was sentenced to 30 days in the Billerica House of Correction after admitting sufficient facts to warrant a guilty finding on breaking and entering in the nighttime with intent to commit a felony, according to court records.

James A. Bowe, 20 Noble Street, was also assessed $25 for the Victim-Witness Fund and placed on probation for two years. In addition, he was given a concurrent 30-day sentence after admitting sufficient facts to warrant a guilty finding for larceny of property worth more than $100.

Court records show that Bowe appealed both verdicts and sentences.

Car collision causes injuries

NEWTON UPPER FALLS — A 29-year-old Garden City woman was treated and released at Newton-Wellesley Hospital last week following a two-car collision on Chestnut Street just before the Route 9 on ramp.

Christine A. Sullivan, 29, suffered "minor injuries" when she drove her 1984 Buick two-door into the back of a 1984 Ford van driven by Andrew J. McAuliffe, 406 Wolcott Street, West Newton, according to the accident report.

McAuliffe had stopped for traffic shortly after 7 a.m. when Sullivan struck her, police said. Police gave no citations in the accident.

NEWTON — An Oak Hill man accused of assault and battery by means of a dangerous weapon had his case continued last week without a finding in Waltham District Court.

Court records show that Ronald P. Klayman, 19, of 210 Brookline Street, was ordered to pay a $250 fine and $25 to the Victim-Witness fee for allegedly using the replica of a hand gun in Weston on March 27.

Afgan conceals stolen goods

WABAN — An afghan was used last week to conceal a video cassette recorder, personal computer and jewelry as they were taken from a Temple Street home, police said.

Police said the items were taken under the cloak between 11 a.m. and 4:05 p.m. after the rear window was broken and deadbolts on the back door unlocked.

The first floor den and second floor bedroom were ransacked, according to police. The afghan was found on Sewell Road, behind the home, police said.

Man claims run off the road

NEWTONVILLE — A Newton Centre man injured last week when his car struck a telephone pole on Centre Street told police he was run off the road.

Timothy Neves, 30, of 246 Dudley Street, was treated and released at Newton-Wellesley Hospital following the 12:50 a.m. accident, according to a hospital spokesman.

Police said Neves drove his 1979 BMW into the telephone pole 75 feet from Newtonville Avenue. The car sustained extensive front end and frame damage, police reported.

House break nets gun, jewelry

NEWTON CENTRE — A .38 handgun and jewelry were reported stolen last week in a house break on Countryside Road, police said. According to police, entrance was gained into the home by breaking through a first floor bathroom window. In addition to the gun and jewelry, sterling silver and cash were also stolen, police said.

Stereo taken from car at mall

CHESTNUT HILL — A $900 Blaupunkt cassette radio was stolen last week from a car parked at the Chestnut Hill Mall, police reported. Police said the stereo was taken sometime during the night from the 1982 BMW after a lock on the driver's was forced. The theft was reported at 9 a.m.

Waban resident's silver stolen

WABAN — Three sets of sterling silver were stolen from a Bonnybrook Drive home last week, according to police. The house was entered after a rock was thrown through the sliding kitchen glass door. Police said each of the sets had 12 place settings.

Crime prevention van's May stops

NEWTON — Police Chief William F. Quinn has said that the site of the Newton Police Crime Prevention Van travelling throughout Newton neighborhoods has become as much an indication of spring as May flowers.

Each year, with the onset of warmer weather, the van schedules several stops weekly around the city to allow citizens to take advantage of its resources — in much the same fashion as bookmobiles of the past.,

The van, manned by Newton Auxiliary Police, under the director of Jay Moskow, provides printed information on such security issues as neighborhood watch, operation identification, home locking devices and auto security.

In addition, and perhaps more important, the van also carries the equipment necessary for finger printing. Any parent wishing to have their child printed may do so, free of charge, at a location convenient to their home.

Following is the schedule of stops which the van will be making in May, weather permitting. The van meets from 7:15 to 9:15 p.m.

Wednesday, May 8, Star Market, Auburndale

Sunday, May 12, Springfest, City Hall (10 a.m. to 4 p.m.)

Monday, May 13, Purity Supreme, Rt. 9

Tuesday, May 14, Filenes, Chestnut Hill

Wednesday, May 15, Star Market, Chestnut Hill

Monday, May 20, Purity Supreme, Newtonville

Tuesday, May 21, Heartland Drug, Four Corners

Wednesday, May 22, Legal Seafood, Boylston St.

Tuesday, May 28, Star Market, Newtonville

Wednesday, May 29, Stop & Shop, Rt. 9

A mammogram can detect a cancer no larger than this dot. And when it's found that early, it's easy to treat and cure. It doesn't have to become a large problem, one that kills 37,000 women a year.
The American Cancer Society recommends that women between the ages of 35 and 39 – younger if there's a family history of breast cancer – have a baseline mammogram, and women 40 to 49 should have a mammogram every year or two. Once a woman reaches age 50, she should have one every year.
Consult your doctor, and then come to Precheck/The Mammography Center. We provide information and a comfortable, supportive atmosphere for a simple, safe mammogram. It's a small test that can make a big difference.

Center offers dental screening

NEWTON — Dr. Hilde Tillman, associate professor at Tufts University School of Dental Medicine, will conduct a dental screening program at the Newton Corner Drop-In Center on Thursday, May 9, at 9 a.m. This program is presented under the auspices of the Tufts Clinical Gerontology Program. Please call the Drop-In Center and make an appointment.

Faye Johnson will be conducting a sing-a-long program at the Drop-In Center, began May 7.

Service to the therapeutic value that singing has for those who participate in this activity, Faye has consented to conduct this program at the Center.

Faye, who is no stranger to those at the Center, also teaches the Oil Painting Class and the Calligraphy Class. The Center is now looking for singers to engage in this new activity.

The Newton Corner Drop-In Center is operated by the Department of Human Services in cooperation with the Newton Council On Aging. Funding for the center is provided by the Community Development Block Grant Program.

The center is located at 191 Pearl St., in the Lincoln-Eliot School corner of Jackson Road, Newton Corner, 969-8030.

Senior lunch menu

NEWTON — West Suburban Elder Services, Inc. in cooperation with local Councils on Aging administers nutrition sites for persons 60 and older in both Newton and Waltham. Meals are served around noontime and there is no charge. A 75¢ donation per meal is requested and persons should feel free to adjust this amount upward or downward within their means.

Persons wishing to participate should make a reservation at least 24 hours in advance by calling the nutrition site of their choice. In Newton, call the Newton Senior Center, 552-6770, the Newton Corner Senior Drop-In Center, 969-8030, Nonantum Multi-Service Center, 965-6390, and the Kosher site at Temple Beth-El, 244-7233.

Also, the Newton Senior Center offers a light Thursday evening supper. Transportation to the Newton nutrition sites is provided by Centre Transportation, Inc. and reservations are necessary. Call 969-1418.

All menus are subject to change. This week's menu is as follows:

Thursday, May 9: Grated cheese, macaroni and cheese, vegetable, wheat bread, chilled fruit, three-bean salad.

Friday, May 10: Cream of broccoli soup, crackers, seafood salad, lettuce, tomatoes, American cheese, hamburg roll, cookie.

Monday, May 13: Salisbury steak/onion gravy, mashed potatoes, diced beats, cracked wheat bread, chilled fruit.

Tuesday, May 14: Baked chicken/gravy, O'Brien potato, vegetable, rye bread, pudding.

Wednesday, May 15: Lasagna, meat sauce, tossed salad/Italian dressing, sourdough bread, fresh fruit, grated cheese.

Walking tours to begin

NEWTON — Every Monday, Wednesday and Friday the Newton Senior Center will conduct a walking group at 9:30 a.m. for excursions through areas around Newton.

These walks will include the historical walking tours of Newtonville, Auburndale, Newton Lower Falls and Newton Highlands, and the life courses in Cold Springs and Weir's Cove Parks.

The group will car pool to locations of interest and take field trips to such areas as the Arnold Arboretum, Walden Pond and the Freedom Trail in Boston.

Walking is an aerobic exercise that can condition the heart and lungs if performed at the proper intensity for 20 to 30 minutes at a time, at least three times a week. Conditioning increases the oxygen available to the body and enables the heart to use oxygen more efficiently.

Besides the cardiovascular benefits, regular exercise such as walking can: relieve tension, resulting in relaxation and more sleep; increase energy levels and resistance to fatigue; improve self image, tone muscles and increase stamina.

The Newton Senior Center, located at 345 Walnut St. in the Newtonville Branch Library, is sponsored by the Newton Department of Human Services in cooperation with the Council on Aging. For more information contact Walter Wells or Laurie Walker, the center coordinators, at 552-7178.

Stress management class at Holiday Inn

NEWTON — An introductory class on how to deal with stress and understand your hunches will be given on Thursday, May 9 at the Holiday Inn on Grove Street.

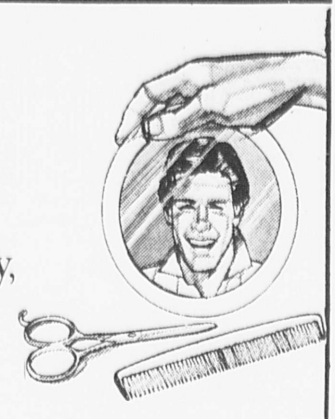

A talk will be presented at 7:30 p.m. by Maria Vistica, a local representative of the Inner Peace Movement, a non-profit educational organization. The one-hour talk will be followed by an optional energy workshop.

Lecture is $3; workshop $6. All are welcome. For information call 643-9105.

Newsmakers

Pamela Waterman of Newton shared a $1,000 initiative award from The MITRE Corp of Bedford with eight other employees. The company also awarded a total of $12,000 to employees for articles on scientific subjects published in 1984. The purpose of the program is to encourage technical staff members to publish significant research in peer-reviewed journals which reflect MITRE's technical excellence. Waterman, however, has since left the company.

Andrea Shirley of the Newton Free Library, has been appointed by the Massachusetts Board of Library Commissioners to its Network Advisory Committee (NAC). The committee will assist the board in implementing an automated resource sharing plan for Massachusetts, allowing all state libraries to share resources in an organized network by using computers. Shirley was appointed to represent the Newton Free Library and is the chairperson of the NAC Standards Subcommittee.

Rick Friend received the prestigious Spurgeon Award for outstanding contributions to the Exploring and Boy Scout Division of the Norumbega Council at the 10th Annual Explorer Banquet held Jan. 27 at the Newton Marriott.

Newton Corner parcel set for bid

Turnpike is ripe location for buildings

By David Weber
Staff Writer

NEWTON — The next area over the turnpike likely to be developed, known to builders as Parcel 13, lies between the Howard Johnson's Motor Lodge and the Washington Street bridge in Newton Corner, according to Glenn Morris, chairman of a group beginning a study of what controls should be placed on turnpike development.

"It is my understanding that Parcel 13 is to go out to public bid soon," said Morris. The air rights over the turnpike are owned by the Massachusetts Turnpike Authority, which he said has been actively soliciting development proposals.

Morris said J.F. White, who built the adjacent Gateway Center, may still have an option on the air rights to Parcel 13. That matter would have to be settled before the parcel went out for bid.

Morris, who is in charge of putting together the Turnpike Corridor Urban Design Study for the city, said the prospect of imminent development underscores the need for urban design guidelines for the turnpike.

"Right now, Newton Corner is the most viable spot for development and the most in need of guidelines," he said. He also said there is "discussion going on" between the turnpike authority and a developer for an eight-story office building over the highway in Newtonville.

Last night the Newton Urban Design and Beautification Commission held the second of its bi-monthly meetings designed to bring public input into the turnpike study. Five residents attended last night, one more than attended the first meeting.

Morris, who is an architect and developer, is seeking "wish lists or non-wish lists" from residents and neighborhood groups, "specifically looking at how to restrict air rights development."

He said the guidelines should not be "pro-development or anti-development," but would instead provide controls that zoning laws cannot provide.

"With urban design controls you can require mixed use, open space and access to sun and you can specify types of colors and materials that should be used," said Morris. "Anyone who has been in Newton Corner would probably not want to see another gray concrete building across the turnpike."

He said there is some question as to whether city zoning ordinances would apply to turnpike development because the area over the turnpike is not zoned. However, he said the turnpike authority agreed to allow the zoning ordinances in the Newton Corner to apply to the Gateway Center development.

He said that when the city finally does draw up its turnpike development guidelines, they would not have to be accepted by the turnpike authority. But he said that would not be "practical or politically smart," since the city could fight a time-consuming battle in court which would delay the authority from making profits from development.

Healey gives Tigers OT win

NEWTON — Senior Co-Captain Paul Healey capped a hard-fought battle with previously unbeaten Lincoln-Sudbury Saturday, bouncing home the winning goal 15 seconds into overtime to lift Newton North to an 11-10 win at home.

North's face-off expert, junior Pat Poon, created the winning situation, winning the opening face off in OT and snapping the ball to Healey. Healey streaked down the center and bounced a shot into the top corner from 20-feet out to win the game on the spot.

Lincoln-Sudbury, now 7-1, held the lead throughout the game but it was North's excellent conditioning that coach Rick Clark said kept the Tigers in the match.

"The difference in the game was the amount of competition that we have faced," Clark said. The Tigers have indeed faced the iron so far this season, making a swing through central Massachusetts to play the best, and even New York to try their luck. "Lincoln-Sudbury got a few goals off mental mistakes by us, mistakes we can't be making. Our goals were more opportunistic, they were a result of better ball movement."

North never had the lead but tied the game twice, the last tie coming with 2:50 remaining in regulation. The Tigers stacked the offense to one side, isolating their top offensive threat, Fran Yeradi (5 goals), against L-S' weakest defenseman. Yeradi got the ball and took his man out, losing him on a one-on-one and firing the ball between the goalie and the pipe.

"They (Lincoln-Sudbury) had been up by three goals at one point," Clark said. "We had been fighting and coming back and I know that goal took the wind out of their sails."

The visitors rebounded though, and threatened with eight seconds left. North threw the ball away and L-S took possession, firing a high shot on North goalie Matt Keegan.

North entered the fourth quarter down, 9-7, and cut the lead to one-goal with a score to open the final stanza. L-S came back with a goal to make it 10-8 before North looked to Yeradi for support. The senior attacker came through, scoring his fourth goal of the game to bring the Tigers within one again, then sent the game into OT with 2:50 left.

A mighty check by North's Rich Claflin late in the fourth quarter sparked the Tigers. Lincoln-Sudbury was holding on to a one-goal lead with three minutes left, trying to slow the play down, when Claflin unleashed a terrific check along the sideline. Forty-five seconds later, Yeradi scored the tyer.

Junior Scott Lancilotti was the defensive standout, setting the tone for Newton North. He shadowed Lincoln's top scorer, Brian Stenberg, and held him to a goal and an assist.

Clark also praised the defense of Poon, who won a total of 13 faceoffs including an important one to open the overtime period. Poon also trailed Lincoln's quickest player, David Taylor.

Yeradi had five goals, Healey scored two, and senior Charlie Albanese also scored two. Senior Co-Captain Dan Nardone scored one goal.

South romps

Seniors Matt Ranen and Paul Murphy each scored a pair of goals and assisted on two others to lead visiting Newton South to a 7-2 stomping of Bedford on Tuesday.

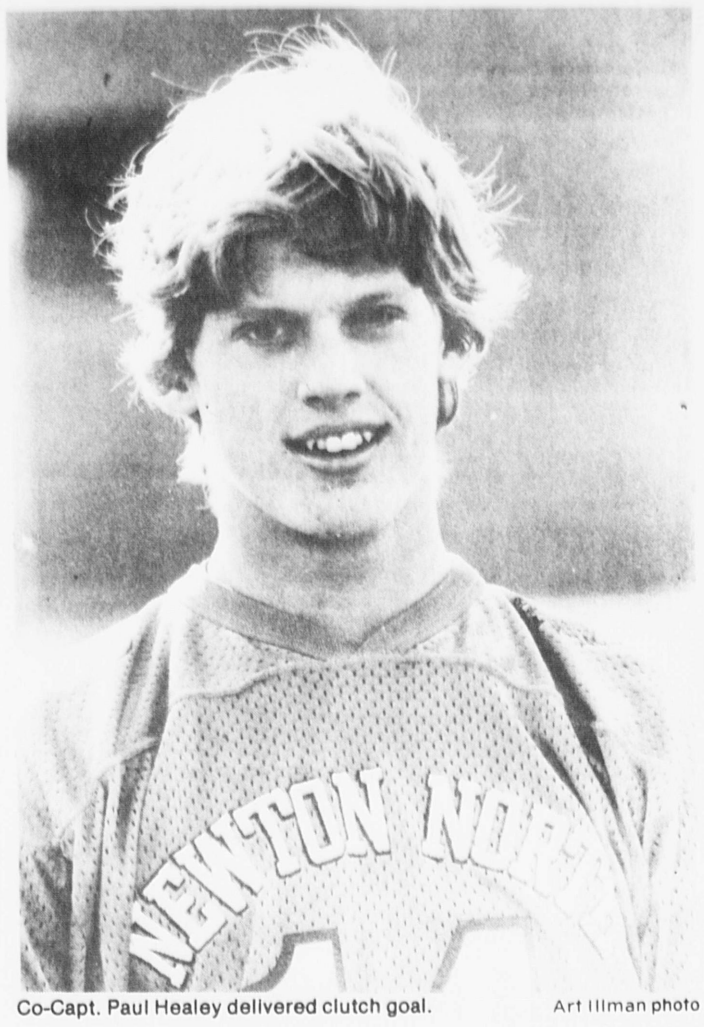

South had a comfortable four-goal lead with three minutes gone in the second quarter before Bedford whistled home two goals to cut the lead in half. Newton secured the game with a solo score in the third period and added a pair of fourth-quarter goals for good measure.

Senior Darth Bloch had given South the lead in the first quarter off a fast-break pass from Steve Alter and Ranen scored his first to put the Lions up 2-0.

Goals by Scott Passnan, who also had two assists in the game, and Murphy upped the lead to 4-0 before Bedford answered with a pair to close out the half.

Murphy scored his second 2:45 into the third quarter to put the game on ice. Ranen and Whitney Dorf both scored from Murphy in the fourth.

In goal for South, junior Alex Levine had 12 saves to post the win.

Adams qualifies for Games

Leonard "Chipp" Adams of Chestnut Hill has qualified for the squash team that will represent the United Sates in the 12th World Maccabiah Games in Israel, July 15-25, 1985, announced Robert E. Spivak, U.S. Maccabiah Committee General Chairman and Alan Sherman, All Sports Chairman.

Adams, who plays his squash at the University Club of Boston and the Newton Squash and Tennis Club in Newton, is currently ranked third in Massachusetts and eighth in the United States in the 35 and older division.

The World Maccabiah Games, which are held every four years in the year immediately following the Olympic year, pit Jewish athletes from all over the world in competition similar to that of the Olympics. More than 4,000 world-class athletes from 38 countries, including 500 from the U.S., will participate in the upcoming Maccabiah Games. They will vie for medals in some 31 sports, ranging from basketball to swimming.

Lion netmen nose out Acton

ACTON — Newton South boys' tennis coach, Ed Jackson, went with a new lineup in Wednesday's match against Acton-Boxboro and the Lions responded with a 3-2 victory.

"The new lineup worked fairly well. It got us on the path we want to be on, one that will lead to the playoffs," said Jackson.

His last year's tennis squad failed to make the playoffs for the first time in several years.

"We have a better team now. Our people are better than they were because they have more experience," said Jackson.

Newton South captured the number one singles match and both doubles matches to squeeze past the Colonials.

The Lions' most experienced player, number one singles player Matt Strayman, who's ranked in New England and has played in tournaments all over the six-state region, handily downed Sonjit Korde 6-0, 6-2, to get the match started right for Newton South.

Number two singles player, freshman Rich Attenberg, won his first set against an older opponent but could not hold off junior Rich Andelman's closing rush.

"He tired some, but he's going to be a very good tennis player," said Jackson of Attenberg. Jackson is also high on another freshman, Jason Teuscher, his top reserve. "He'll probably play in our next match."

Senior Jim Gruber, third singles player, lost a tough match to Acton-Boxboro, winning the second set, 6-0, but dropping the first and third sets.

Newton South swept the doubles competition. Both the first doubles team of John Jacobs and Phil Leibovich and the second doubles team of Glenn Roberts and Mark Albert gained straight-set victories.

Singles

Strayman (NS) defeated Korde, 6-0, 6-2; Andelman (A-B) defeated Attenberg, 6-2, 0-6, 5-7; (A-B) defeated Gruber, 1-6, 6-0, 2-6.

Doubles

Jacobs and Leibovich (NS) defeated Hoppe and Maxwell, 6-3, 6-2; Roberts and Albert (NS) defeated Wilson and Milatte.

Fruhan hurls, bats Phils to LLB win

Southpaw Bill Fruhan pitched and batted the Newton Central Phillies over the West Orioles, 6-1, Sunday at Cabot Park in a Little League inter-league clash.

Fruhan, a 12-year-old, scattered three hits, walked three, and struck out nine of the Orioles' hitters. At bat, the lefty had a double and single.

Lancer girls cop 4th behind Foley

Newton Catholic triumphed over St. Columbkille's, 13-3, Wednesday for their fourth win of the season versus three losses.

The Lancers scored four times in the fourth inning and five times in the fifth to break a tight 2-1 game wide open.

In the Lancers' fourth inning, Theresa Foley reached on a fielder's choice and the next three Newton Catholic batters walked to force home Foley. Susan Williams shot a single up the middle to score Angela Canty and Cheryl Chagnon. A walk to Judy Jackson and a walk to Kerry MacDougall forced home Didi Airosus with the fourth run.

St. Columbkille's came back with two runs in its half of the fourth, but the Lancers put the game out of reach with five more runs in the fifth. Foley opened the inning with a single and moved to second on a single by Canty. Chagnon's infield hit then loaded the bases for Newton Catholic.

A walk to Airosus forced Foley in, and a single by Williams scored Canty and Chagnon. When the Columbkille infield booted a Judy Jackson grounder, Airosus scored. Anne Cling drove in the final run in the inning when her single scored Williams.

The win jumped sophomore Theresa Foley's record to 4-2 with an excellent 4.25 earned run average.

The summary:

NEWTON CATHOLIC(13)-Williams 5-2, Jackson 4-1, MacDougall 3-1, Kling 4-2, Abruzzi 4-3, Foley 4-1, Canty 1-1, Chagnon 3-2, Airosus 2-0. Tot. 30-13.

Glick 'saves' win for South nine

Senior Jon Glick saved the day for Newton South, coming in relief and putting out the fire in a 10-7 victory over Boston Latin Saturday at the Newton South Field.

With one out and the tying run at the plate, Glick took the mound for starter Tom McGary and got South out of a hot and heavy jam. Shortstop Mark Miaocco made a nifty backhand catch of a bloop fly to shallow left field to get the second out, then watched as Glick sat the final batter down with three strikes.

South had taken a 3-0 lead compliments of a big third inning, but Latin came up in the fourth and quickly tied the score. A four-run fifth inning for Newton South buried the Latin nine.

Pillan Thirumalaisamy singled and advanced one-out later on a Steve Stoller fielder's choice. Judd Cohen then tripled to drive the runner home and score himself on a throwing error by the shortstop.

South added three insurance runs in the sixth off five walks and a single.

McGary earned the win while Glick recorded the save for South. McGary hurled 6 1/3, allowing six runs off nine hits. South is 4-2 in the DCL and 4-3 overall.

Spengler homers

Spengler took a full-count pitch downtown Wednesday, smashing his first home run of the season but Newton South bowed to undefeated Acton-Boxboro, 6-3.

Spengler's shot to left field in the bottom of the seventh was not quite enough to boost South to victory. The Lions had slipped out to a 1-0 lead after one inning, but Acton slowly chipped away. The visitors tied the score in the third, then racked-up five straight runs over the next three innings to win the game.

Kevin Houlihan started the game on the mound for South, going five innings and allowing three earned runs on three hits while striking out four and walking six. The loss knocks Houlihan from the undefeated ranks at 2-1 but the senior still has a respectable 2.29 earned-run average.

Houlihan's trouble began in the fourth inning when Acton struck him for a pair of runs on no hits. Houlihan hit pitcher Bill Knox with a pitch for the second time in the game, then walked three straight to force in the go-ahead run. A sacrafice forced-in A-B's insurance run before the pitcher got out of the jam.

A single-run in the fifth and two scores in the sixth put Acton-Boxboro up, 6-2. South got one run back in the last of the sixth when Mark Miaocco drove a sacrafice fly to deep left to score a run.

Steve Altman had two hits in four tries and Maiocca added a hit to boost his team-leading average to .421.

The summary:

NEWTON SOUTH(10)-Huffman 3-1, Miaocca 4-0, Altman 4-2, Spengler 2-1, Thirumalaisamy 2-2, Manthei 2-0, Stoller 3-0, Cohen 2-1, Doren 0-0, Doherty 0-0, Rogers 2-0. Tot. 24-7.

Coaching honors to Bentley's Sullivan

WALTHAM — Bentley College basketball coach Frank Sullivan, who guided his team to a 24-3 regular season record in his first season at the helm, has been selected by "Basketball Times" as its Division II Coach of the Year.

The honor is the fourth that Sullivan, a West Newton resident, has received for his coaching efforts during the 1984-85 season. Previously, he had been named New England Coach of the Year by both the New England Basketball Coaches Association and the National Association of Basketball Coaches and was also chosen as Northeast-8 Conference Coach of the Year.

An assistant at Seton Hall University until September when he was named to succeed Brian Hammel (now an assistant at Iowa) as Bentley's coach, Sullivan, 34, took a team picked to finish fourth in its conference to the NCAA Division II tournament. The NCAA appearance was the first for the Falcons since 1979.

Overall, Bentley finished with a 25-6 record under Sullivan. Ranked in the top ten nationally (Division II) for much of the second half of the season, the Falcons were regular season co-champions in the Northeast-8, winning 13 of 14 league games.

A native of Lexington and a 1973 graduate of Westfield State College, Sullivan had 10 years of Division I coaching experience prior to coming to Bentley. He began his collegiate coaching at Villanova, serving as an assistant to Rollie Massimino (his high school coach) from 1974-77. He then spent five years at Lehigh and two at Seton Hall before returning to his native state.

Theresa Foley

T. Foley MVP of In-town all-star tilt

Recently named co-Most Valuable Player of the Catholic 2 South Conference, Foley participated in the league's In-town Classic All-Star Game and was awarded MVP honors for the Catholic North and South squad. It was her second year playing as an All-Star for the In-town Classic, which is chosen by league coaches.

Foley averaged more than 20 points a game to begin South Conference league action. For the season, she finished with a 19.8 mark per game, scoring 218 points with 103 field goals and 12 free throws.Sharing co-MVP honors with Foley in the Catholic 2 South Conference was Colleen Hopkins of Hudson Catholic.

Hudson Catholic and Mt. Alvernia each placed three players on the team. Joining Hopkins were teammates Sheila Collins and Erin O'Hara. Cathy Walsh, Marlene Kelly and Paula Sullivan made the squad from Mt. Alvernia.

Hochberger has 3 firsts in loss

Benjie Hochberger won three first places but it was not enough as the Newton South boy tracksters fell to Wayland, 94-51, Thursday in a Dual County League meet at Wayland High School.

Hochberger placed first in the hurdles in 16.3, won the 200-yard dash in 24.8, and ruled the high jump with a leap of 5-8.

"I was very please with that performance," said South coach Chris Omeltchenko.

Sophomore Russ Kane placed second in the 200, second in the triple jump, and was third in the long jump. Bob Hsiung was second in the 100-yard dash and in the long jump, and third in the high jump. Senior Eric Benovitz captured first in 100-yard dash in 12.7 and finished third in the 200.

Omeltchenko had praise for all three boys, adding that Wayland was too strong for Newton South in the field events.

Robertson sparks Central A's

NEWTON — Mike Robertson struck out eight and went three-for-three from the plate to lead the A's over the Phillies, 8-2, Tuesday night in the Newton Central Little League played at Cabot Park.

Robertson, a 12-year old righty, improved his record to 2-0 on the young season, pitching six innings of four-hit ball and walking only one.

At the plate, Robertson hit a double and a triple, plating two runs. Also for the A's, Tommy Burke collected a pair of hits in two tries and scored two runs. Brian Rooney plated two runs with a double and a sacrafice fly.

For the Phillies, Matt Fruhan took the loss, pitching three innings before being relieved by Josh Meadow in the fourth.

Clint Donovan cracked a solo-homer in the third inning for the Phillies.

The A's, 3-1, play the Pirates of the Newton West Little League on Sunday while the winless Phillies will try their luck against the Orioles, also of the Newton West League. Both games will be played at Cabot Park.

Artist projects wit, insight into works

By Candy Kosow
Correspondent

"A woman in a blue Buick pulled into a one way street the wrong way, blocking several cars, stopped and waited. This act was mystifying until it turned out to be the first leg of a heroic three-point turn across four lanes of rush hour traffic." To hear Bert Snow, the 27-year-old native of Maine, one would think this story would end with a multi-car collision. But, listening to Snow, the artist, talk about this incident, you begin to understand the sources of inspiration he draws upon while concocting some of the most outrageous, oversized puppets ever to be created.

These animated wonders, along with Snow's other art work, are all on display at the Chapel Gallery on Highland Street in West Newton. With it's high beam ceilings and light streaming in through it's many picture-frame windows, the Chapel Gallery is a perfect place for Snow to showcase his mammoth masterpieces. For the record, The Chapel Gallery won Boston Magazine's Best Suburban Gallery Award in 1984.

The lady in the blue Buick is made out of wire, painted cardboard and wood, swatches of cloth and there are even two flashlights attached to the back of the vehicle that work as break lights. The structure is suspended from a big, black wooden cross. There are pulleys made out of rope that fall from the side of the cross, that when yanked up and down, cause the various parts of the car and the lady to move in different directions. This giant marionette is nine feet high and 12 feet long. Her name is "Myrna."

Snow claims that it takes him a month or two to complete each puppet. About six months ago, Snow had to put the pedal to the metal to have a few of these pieces ready on time for Boston's First Night celebration, in which he participated. Snow did have some of his works on display at the Berkshire Museum in 1981 while he was a student at Williams College, but for the most part, the display at Chapel Gallery is his first public show.

And then there is the "Meter Man." He is 11 feet tall, dressed in a jacket and tie, putting money into a parking meter. Another is entitled, "Vertical Hold." Snow refers to this one as a "Superman" structure. A long, lanky gentleman is suspended from pieces of cloth, upside-down. He appears to be flying into an empty television screen. Although Snow says he's not anti-television, he admits there is a negativism about that medium being expressed in this piece. My suspicions are later confirmed when Snow divulges that he does not own a television set.

There is only one small-scale suspended structure. It is a little bus carrying a load of passengers. Although the piece is no longer than a yard stick, it displays the same amount of humor and originality that is apart of the larger scale sculptures.

The suspended animation is clearly the focal point of Snow's work, but the walls of the gallery are covered with Snow's paintings, drawings and painted stencils. There again, Snow's ability to make "humor and mystery coexist" works wonderfully.

Some of his pieces are three-dimensional. They resemble large jigsaw puzzle pieces that simply jut out from the wall. No matting and framing for these designs. The most complicated of these works is called "Surroundings Change Tough Hides." It features the use of several different materials. My favorite was a small, simply painted piece called "Small Flat, Home Bodies." Snow uses perspective to it's fullest by showing people sitting in an apartment while a car drives around on the crowded street below. We appear to be looking down on this sight from some front row seat in the skies above. Other titles include, "She vacuums, He mows," "Drive Through Fast Food" and "Proper Hygiene, Probable Success."

Snow states one work has caused some controversy. It depicts three houses on a street that look almost identical. The same manicured lawns, the same walkways leading to the houses, the same style homes. He calls it, "Five Spruce Terrace, Child Abuse."

The most striking thing about Snow is the wit and insight he projects into his work. A quiet, somewhat introverted man, Snow's personality comes alive while he is creating. Snow's work perpetuates a childlike quality, which is one reason he would like to have his work exhibited at Boston's Children's Museum. As for other plans, Snow wants to remain in his studio apartment on Newbury Street, but someday, he hopes to start showing in New York.

Snow says when he was a youngster, he wanted to be a "cartoonist or an inventor." He'll let us know when he finally makes up his mind. In the meantime, Snow's suspended animations will be on display through May 19.

Israel Bond to honor Linsey

CHESTNUT HILL — Prominent community leader Joseph M. Linsey, formerly of Chestnut Hill, will be recipient of the prestigious David Ben-Gurion Award on Tuesday evening, May 14 at a testimonial dinner at The Westin Hotel, under the auspices of the Greater Boston Israel Bond Organization.

The keynote speaker will be Dr. Joseph Burg, Minister of Religious Affairs, who was a colleague of David Ben-Gurion, Israel's first Prime Minister, when Dr. Burg served as Deputy Speaker of Israel's first Knesset.

Linsey has served the Greater Boston Israel Bond Organization as a member of the Board of Governors since its founding and as a member of the Campaign Cabinet and Prime Minister's Club.

The Israel Bond Organization, since its establishment in 1951, has been the principal source of development capital for the State of Israel.

In Greater Boston, Linsey has been a generous supporter and key official in such institutions as Brandeis University where he has been a Trustee since the creation of the university; member of the Board of Trustees' Committee on University Development; Chairman of the Advisory Board for Athletics; Honorary Life Director of the Greater Boston Brandeis Club; and National Co-Chairman of the "Covenant with the Generations" fundraising program.

In 1966, the Joseph M. Linsey Sports Center was dedicated at Brandeis University in special recognition of one of his major benefactions.

He has been awarded an Honorary Doctorate of Humane Letters from Brandeis University and Honorary Doctorate of Commercial Science from Suffolk University, as well as numerous other honors from important civic and communal institutions and agencies, here and abroad.

He was first president of the American Greyhound Track Operators Association and was twice reelected to that office. Linsey is past president and treasurer of Wine & Spirits Wholesalers of Massachusetts; past member of the Convention Bureau and Tourist Committee of the Boston Chamber of Commerce; and served as Chairman of the Wholesale Beverage Divisions of the Cancer Society, Jimmy Fund, Infantile Paralysis Foundation, National Mental Health Association, Red Cross, Red Feather and Community Fund.

Shaevel and Passman to stay in Ward 8 race

By Edward Cafasso
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Two of the four candidates embroiled in the special election race for the vacant Ward 8 alderman's seat will commit themselves to another run for the post this fall.

William H. Shaevel, of 881 Dedham St., and Howard U. Passman, of 89 Dorcar Road, took out nomination papers last week that could put them in the running for the "second" Ward 8 race scheduled for November 5.

The two men, along with Teresa F. Walsh, of 33 Wallace St., and Robert B. Katz, of 35 Marvin Lane, are already aspirants in the June 4 special election to complete the unexpired term of the late Robert L. Shuman.

A decision by either Walsh or Katz to join their foes in a fall campaign would force a preliminary run-off on September 10 to narrow the field down to two contestants.

But Katz has already stated that he will not run again if he fails in the June special election. "Should I lose this election, in which I am trying to stimulate voter interest, I see no reason to have to re-educate the voter about my past accomplishments again in November," Katz stated.

Questioned about a possible run in November, Walsh stated, "If elected, I will definitely run again. I have not made any decision beyond that."

Shaevel, whose campaign slogan touts him as "A Neighbor With Experience," is prepared to take his bid to replace Shuman to the limit.

"I'm going to go all the way," he said last night.

Oak Hill voters participating in the June 4 contest will use paper ballots to pick their favorites.

During a recent drawing held in the Election Commission's office at city hall, Shaevel grabbed the top spot on the ballot with the names of Passman, Katz and Walsh, respectively, coming in below the treasurer of the Democratic City Committee.

However, Alan W. Licarie, executive secretary of the Election Commission, said ballot placement will not mean any significant advantage to Shaevel's candidacy.

"The voters will only be dealing with one contest and the vast majority of people will know who they are going to vote for when they get a ballot," he said.

Licarie has already sent postcards to each Oak Hill resident informing them of the upcoming special election. There were 5,964 registered voters in the ward as of April 1.

Unregistered Ward 8 residents have until 10 p.m. next Wednesday to become eligible to participate in the contest. A special voter registration session will be held from noon until 8 p.m. this Saturday at city hall.

Three-alarm fire guts Claflin Pl. house

By David S. Martin
Staff Writer

NEWTONVILLE — April Edwards planned to move out of her 17 Claflin Place apartment at 10 a.m. Monday but was forced to leave an hour early when a three-alarm blaze broke out in the two-and-a-half story home.

A total of eight engines and three ladders — every piece of equipment the city owns — battled the fire from 9 a.m. until shortly after 2 p.m., the fire department reported.

Chief Edward B. Reilly estimated the damage to the home at more than $50,000. The back of the second floor was completely blackened and gutted. The fire also burned holes in the roof.

Both the cause and origin of the blaze are under investigation, Lt. William F. Carvelli said.

Three firefighters suffered minor injuries, Carvelli said.

Fire Lt. Thomas Madden hurt his wrist, firefighter John Marrazo suffered an eye injury and firefighter Thomas Farrell injured his knee. All were treated and released at Newton-Wellesley hospital, Carvelli reported.

Chief Reilly supervised efforts to quell the blaze. He called the second alarm at 9:09, nine minutes after the department received word of the fire, and rang the third alarm at 9:20.

Firefighters from Boston, Brookline, Watertown, Waltham, Wellesley and Weston covered the six Newton stations.

Edwards, who had lived there for three months, saw smoke pouring under the door of her top floor apartment and called the fire department from a telephone on the first floor of the home, she said.

"I heard what I thought was lightning and it started smoking on the third floor under my door," said Edwards, 26, business manager for Mortgage Report Magazine.

The only other one of the 12 tenants home Monday morning was Steve Nestle, who also lived on the top floor.

"I looked out the window after I heard a shingle fall on the roof of a car and I saw smoke," said Nestle, 26.

Both Edwards and Nestle reported hearing an explosion on the second floor 15 minutes after the fire broke out.

"They haven't got a cause (of the explosion) yet," Carvelli said. "The back of the house broke out into the backyard."

Other tenants rushed to the scene from work after receiving telephone calls from friends.

"It wasn't a nice phone call to get," said John Scira, who had lived on the second floor for three years.

Owners of the home, San and Kang Lien, 105 Oldham Road, West Newton, watched helplessly as flames leaped from the roof and out of the second floor and attic windows.

"It was such a nice house," Kang Lien exclaimed. Her husband stood on the porch of an abutting house. "I don't know how this happened," he said.

Firefighters battled a three-alarm blaze for five hours Monday at 17 Claflin Place. Damage to the 2½-story home was estimated at $50,000.

Firefighters sprayed the home from the roof of a neighboring garage, over a fence behind the house and from the road in front.

Smoking slate shingles slid from the ceiling and crashed to the ground as more than 100 bystanders watched firefighters enter the second floor from ladders.

Mayor Theodore D. Mann arrived at the fire around 10 a.m. and spoke with the victims.

"I get advised of all fires," Mann said.

Police closed off Walnut Street on either side of Claflin Place as the road was strewn with fire hoses from the engines and ladders ringed the wood-frame structure.

Unlike Edwards, who was planning to move out, the fire forced an unexpected exodus on the 11 other tenants.

"Do you realize we're destroyed?" Nestle asked a fellow tenant. Nestle stood in the rain wearing only a polo shirt with a blanket draped over his shoulders. All his possessions were in the burning building.

Tenants said they planned to live with friends until they could resettle. Those interviewed said they were uninsured and had lost everything in the blaze.

"I just got a bunch of spring clothes. I've just got to start all over again." Nestle said.

Nestle, an account executive for PC Weekly, has apparently decided not to take the disaster passively.

"I've got to sell like crazy today," he said.

Paramedic makes special delivery

By David S. Martin
Staff Writer

NEWTON CORNER — Colleagues of paramedic Steve Lheureux may begin calling him "Doc" someday soon.

The 24-year-old supervisor delivered his fifth baby Monday afternoon, bringing a seven-pound boy into the world on Grassmere Street.

Both the baby and his mother, whose name is confidential, were admitted to the labor and delivery room at Brigham and Women's Hospital in Boston, he said.

"She felt contractions and called 911," Lheureux said. "She had a few contractions and the baby came right out." Time of birth was 2:05 p.m.

Emergency medical technicians Scott Steeves and Brad Smith were the first rescue personnel on the scene. Steeves and Smith, delivering their baby, cut and tied the woman's umbilical cord.

Lheureux said he then cleared the baby's airways, delivered the placenta and as a precaution gave the woman intravenous fluid.

Assisting was paramedic Larry Lavasseur, involved in his second delivery, and police Patrolman Henry Berube.

"The mother does all the work," Lheureux, a Natick resident, said. "We don't do anything. All we do is coach the mother and check for complications."

There were no complications Monday, according to Lheureux. "This was the best delivery I've seen," he said.

Lheureux said paramedics receive more than 1,000 hours of training in emergency medicine, which includes acting playing obstetrician. The training, he said, tells paramedics everything they need to know.

Has Lheureux become nonchalant about delivering babies?

"I don't jump as high but it's still very exciting," said Lheureux, who plans to have children someday with his wife Linda. His wife is an emergency medical technician at Newton-Wellesley Hospital.

The 'boys of summer' rode the rails

By Fred Down
UPI Sports Writer

NEW YORK (UPI) — Long before expansion, travel across three time zones, 26 teams, the Major League Players Association and Peter Ueberroth, baseball prospered in a world bounded by Boston in the Northeast and St. Louis in the West.

It wasn't until after World War II that night baseball, expansion and plane travel brought sweeping changes to baseball. St. Louis was no longer the game's Western outpost.

In 1957, the New York Giants and Brooklyn Dodgers jumped across the continent to San Francisco and Los Angeles, respectively, and America perhaps coincidently, crowned a world champion, the transplanted Milwaukee Braves, in its heartland.

"There's no stopping the future," as Yogi Berra says and baseball is bigger and better than it was in the Toonerville Trolley days of 16 teams playing mostly day games and travelin' the trains.

Travelin' the trains. Can anyone brought up on modern baseball understand the meaning of those words? Can players and newspapermen who zip from city to city in jet planes comprehend the difference in the eras? Have they ever wondered why baseball has a greater collection of human interest anecdotes, by far, than any other sport? Where, one asks, did the newspapermen get them?

They got them travelin' the trains. They got them by living with the players. By sleeping in the same Pullman cars, eating together in the dining cars, playing cards, popping bofferoos, sitting up all night in the parlor car, making the 32-hour trips from Boston to St. Louis, constantly talking and arguing baseball and getting to know their subjects in a way no other newspapermen or women have been able to do in any other sport before or since.

Little flaps among the players and newspapermen were easily resolved. Players resentful of something that had been written often found themselves having breakfast with the author the next morning. Potential feuds usually ended by the time coffee was served. The players and reporters saw themselves in a way their modern counterparts cannot.

Some may argue that the newspapermen became too much a part of the team. There's some truth to that but the point can be overdone. The newspapermen kept confidences. There were personal things they didn't write about stars. Is it really news some hanky pank will occur when 30 virile young men are away from home for two weeks?

Sleeping arrangements were the same with every club. The last three cars, one a dining car, were reserved for the club. Regulars and starting pitchers were assigned lower berths and subs, relief pitchers and news reporters upper berths. The manager was entitled to the drawing room and no case of a refusal has ever been recorded.

There were always two or three guys who couldn't sleep on the trains — just as today there are guys who hate to fly. They sat up all night talking and who knows how much of the lore of the game was produced during these nocturnal seances as the train sped through darkness?

At least the trains were air-conditioned. Some of the hotels were only beginning to install air conditioning in the late 1940s and summer temperatures in Washington, D.C., Cincinnati and St. Louis were stifling. Lou Gehrig, for example, used to order buckets of ice cubes, soak his bed sheets in them and then wrap the sheets around him. Some wonder if the practice didn't contribute to the disease that killed him.

Getaway day presented unusual problems for the reporters. The guys who worked for morning sheets filed their stories via Western Union from the ball parks. But then, as now, clubs fled cities like bagmen, sometimes as little as an hour after a game. The afternoon paper reporters didn't have time to write and file their stories before the train was scheduled to take them to the next town.

The solution for this problem required consultation with the club's road secretary, whose authority approximated that of Caesar. The trick was to find a station at which the train was scheduled to stop for 15 minutes and wire ahead to Western Union to have a messenger meet the train for a dropoff of the reporters' copy. Often such a dropoff could be made only at 1 or 2 a.m.

It was the job of the designated reporter to stay sober and-or awake so he could make the dropoff. Today's reporters use portable video display terminals which put them, when plugged in, in the newspaper's city rooms. In the old days, the flower of American baseball literature often was delivered to a nondescript Western Union messenger at some deserted station in Middle America at a time when honest men and women were sleeping. These were "the good old days?"

Black driver aiming at Indy's color barrier

CHICAGO (UPI) — Willy T. Ribbs, a road racing veteran who drove his first race car at age 9, will try next month to become the first black driver to crack the Indianapolis 500 starting field, he announced Wednesday.

Ribbs, 29, San Jose, Calif., will drive a Ford Cosworth-powered March car owned by Indy veteran Sherman Armstrong and boxing promoter Don King. George Bignotti, who has directed seven 500 winners' crews, will handle Ribbs' effort.

The team is sponsored by Miller High Life beer.

"I'm ready for Indy," Ribbs said. "I'm not making any predictions but I think with the car working well and Bignotti and I getting down to it, we should do pretty well."

Ribbs said he has compiled the best winning percentage of any driver competing in a major professional American motorsport series. He has been racing in Trans-Am, Formula Ford, Formula Atlantic and Sports 2000 events and has won at such major tracks as Watkins Glen, Daytona and Brands Hatch.

He said he plans to be at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway later this week to begin preparations for his rookie orientation and qualifying, which opens May 11. He said he feels his transition to oval racing will be no problem.

"Indy's almost like a road course with four fast corners," he said. "Real fast, though."

Armstrong said his only fear about Ribbs' passing his rookie tests is that he might drive through the speed limit USAC imposes on rookies.

"It's a serious concern," Armstrong said, characterizing Ribbs' driving style as "aggressive."

Ribbs said he feels Indy cars are becoming too fast but said he doesn't have problems handling speed in a sound car.

"What you must feel for is the car, not numbers," he said. "When the car feels good, you feel like you're going slow. When the car feels bad, you're in trouble."

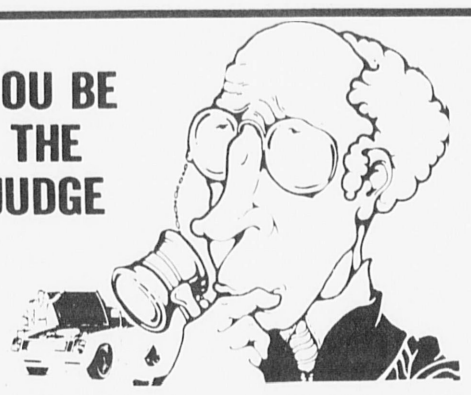

Ribbs and Armstrong said they are confident the two new March cars they will have available will be competitive.

Ribbs grew up in San Jose, where he watched his father participate in auto racing. He said he was hooked on the sport by the time he was 3.

Ford mulls recall of 1.1M autos

By Frank T. Csongos
United Press International

WASHINGTON — Ford Motor Co. is considering whether to obey a government request to recall 1.1 million 1982 to 1984 Ford Escort and Mercury Lynx cars to correct problems with rear seat belts that fail to restrain passengers.

The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, an arm of the Transportation Department, disclosed Tuesday it has asked the No. 2 automaker to fix the belts.

There were no immediate reports of injuries or fatalities stemming from the alleged safety problem.

"We have asked Ford to fix the seat belts in question," a NHTSA spokesman told United Press International. "There has been no official response yet."

Ford has not yet decided whether to comply with the recall request, said Charles Snearly, of Ford's Parts and Service Division in Dearborn, Mich.

"We are reviewing the models in conjunction with the NHTSA. If we determine there is a problem, we will go after it and correct it," said Snearly.

Dan Howell, an official of the Center for Auto Safety, said the private consumer group has recdived several complaints of the seat belt problem.

"When the twisting and binding happens, the rear seat belt won't go back and won't retain you," Howell said in an interview. "It becomes unusable. Also, replacement belts are not commonly available&"

Critics sour on 'lemon law'

By Thomas Ferraro
United Press International

WASHINGTON — The Federal Trade Commission's used car rule will soon take effect, with backers and foes still debating if it adequately protects consumers against "lemons," and some saying most of its bite has been ...lled.

The FTC, which called a news conference today to promote the measure, maintains the regulation will provide potential buyers with needed and useful information — such as a required written statement on warranty terms.

But critics, led by many of the nation's largest consumer groups in a decade of debate, complain the rule was made toothless when the FTC eliminated a provision to require dealers to disclose known defects.

"This is consumer protection with a whimper instead of a bang," complained Clarence Ditlow, executive director of the Ralph Nader-founded Center for Auto Safety.

The known-defect provision — that would have forced car dealers po list a used car's known defects — was shelved by a divided FTC last fall on staff recommendation.

The claim was that the provision would be difficult to enforce, create confusion and possibly give consumers a false sense of security.

Performance a thing of the past?

DETROIT (UPI) — This may be your last chance to buy a sporty four-door sedan from Ford that has a good dose of raw power and gutsy V-8 performance.

Scheduled to be replaced next year by Ford's front-drive Sable and Taurus intermediates, the rear-drive LTD LX will become history after being offered for only two years as an option in the LTD line.

Ford has an LTD for everyone, offering it as a conservative, unassuming four-door family sedan, a plushly appointed luxury sedan complete with a fake convertible top, or as the LTD LX, a performance version that embraces the no-chrome European look, powerful engine and a road-holding suspension.

The LX costs about $2,620 more than the base LTD, which starts at $9,066. Two optional packages on the LX are offered. The one for $1,385 includes four-speed automatic transmission with overdrive, air conditioning, a 3.27 traction-lock axle, AM-FM stereo, high performance P205-75R14 blackwall tires, cruise control, rear defogger and a tilt steering wheel.

The $2,045 package includes the above plus power windows and door locks, cornering lamps and a premium sound system, bringing the sticker to $13,740.

Available in black, white, or charcoal metallic, the LX is set apart from less powerful LTDs with a body-colored grille, blacked-out chrome, and wider tires on styled road wheels.

Inside, a console divides the front seats, which are available in a gray and black checked cloth only. The front seats have a hand pump which inflates a lumbar cushion for added support.

Although it has a well designed tachometer and speedometer, the LX sadly lacks any other gauges. Vital functions such as temperature and voltage are monitored only with idiot lights.

The console-mounted light and electic mirror switches are subject to dirt and spilled food or drink, and a fuse box nestled behind the dash panel makes servicing tough unless one carries a screwdriver at all times.

Mann seeks 5th mandate

By John Moroney, Correspondent

CHESTNUT HILL — The city's mayoral race is heating up, literally.

About 200 persons Monday night gathered in the banquet room of Valle's Steak House, which lost its air-conditioning only two hours before, to hear Mayor Theodore D. Mann announce his plans to seek a fifth consecutive term.

The crowd, with most of the men stripped down to their shirtsleeves in the heat, also wished the 63-year-old mayor a happy birthday.

Mayor Mann gives a "high five" at Countryside

'My father thrives on being mayor of Newton. By re-electing my father, you give him eternal youth.'

Richard Mann

"My father thrives on being the mayor of Newton," said the mayor's son, Richard. "By re-electing my father, you give him eternal youth."

With the chance for a new lease on life, the one-time Newton alderman, one-time state representative and four-term mayor announced his candidacy.

"I am running on my administration's record, which clearly attests to my commitment to good government," Mann said. "During the time I have been in office, our city has been widely recognized as a leader in virtually every area of municipal concern, from financial management to public safety, from human services to quality education."

The room exploded in a roar of approval as many of the guests rolled up their sleeves and fluttered programs about their faces, hoping to catch a cool breeze.

"It just seems like he belongs there," Laurel Karp of Newton Centre said, referring to the mayor's decision to seek another term.

"I find it difficult to imagine someone else doing the job," Karp's husband, Alan, injected.

Alan Karp believes the biggest issue the mayor will face in his next term is the proposed, city-wide moritorium.

Sanctuary plan debated

By David Weber, Staff Writer

NEWTON — Ward 2 Alderman-at-Large Louis Irwin has proposed a resolution before the Board of Aldermen supporting a bill at the State House that would authorize the state Attorney General to represent illegal aliens seeking political asylum during deportation proceedings.

The board is likely to act on the resolution at its meeting on the May 20.

The bill was filed by State Sen. Jack Backman (D-Newton, Brookline) with the intention of providing assistance to political refugees from Central America, particularly El Salvador and Guatemala, who fear persecution if they return to their homelands.

"The thing that's incensed me is that there is clear discrimination by the Department of Immigration and Naturalization against Central American refugees," Backman said in a telephone interview.

Backman said that in fiscal year 1983, the United States granted asylum to 78 percent of those who applied from the Soviet Union and 53 percent from Afghanistan. During that same year, he said, only three percent of the applicants from El Salvador and two percent from Guatemala were permitted to remain in this country.

Rick Schwartz, an aide to Backman said, "We now have a very discriminatatory deportation policy. If you're escaping from a left-wing country, you almost always get asylum. But if you're escaping from a right wing country, you can't."

Irwin said he proposed the resolution supporting Backman's bill because "we perceive the traditional policy of America to embrace immigrants fleeing persecution, and the way they're being denied apparently is to agree with foreign policy objectives of the Reagan administration.

"We think it's wrong to deport aliens, be they from left or right-wing governments, if they have a reasonable fear of persecution," he said.

Both Backman and Irwin cited a United Nations contract, signed by the United States, which said in part, "No contacting party shall expel or forcibly return a refugee... to a territory where his life or freedom would be threatened on account of his race, religion, nationality, membership of party, social group or political opinion."

Pigeons are perilous at City Hall

By Edward Cafasso, Staff Writer

NEWTON — There are many ways to repel a pigeon.

Just ask Joseph Barile, technical director for Certified Pest Control, (CPC) Inc., of Dedham.

Up until two years ago, the city paid CPC $2,000 annually to remove pigeon debris and nests from city hall and another $450 to make sure the drab, but gentle birds did not make the building their permanent roost and litter box.

Within the next few months, the city intends to solicit competitive bids for the right to renew its battle with fiesty fowl.

Barile says there are "two basic methods to bird control here in Massachusetts" — physical repellents and chemical repellents, both of which have been employed by the Garden City.

The first option, which has two components, is the most popular among area municipalities seeking to protect the bastions of their community from the pigeon problem, according to Barile.

One component involves "a tactile repellent," which he described as "a sort of sticky, goopy type of material known as poly-butulane." The substance is applied with a caulking gun to the favorite landing areas of the birds and is clearly visible on several sections of city hall's roof.

"It's not pleasant for the birds. It sticks to their claws and legs. After one or two encounters with it, they avoid the area," Barile says.

The tactile repellant, which loses its effectiveness after about six months, is non-toxic to all birds and only serves to annoy other creatures, like squirrels, that might be climbing around city hall, he added.

The less popular, but more permanent form of bird repellent for municipal buildings is a thin strand of wire known as "nix-a-lite," Barile says.

"It's basically a barbed wire for pigeons. It's essentially a long strand of wire made with spikes that are set closely together. It discourages the birds from landing, but the problem with it is one of aesthetics. People see this barbed wire up on their city buildings and it draws attention to the community's bird problems," he noted.

Nix-a-lite is used to keep birds from nesting in the main cupola at the apex of the city hall building, a spot so far removed that it is barely visible from surrounding streets.

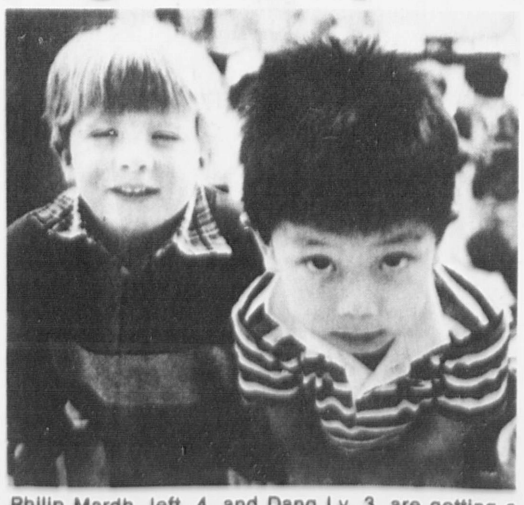

The second phase of the war against pigeons here is the most risky — chemical weapons.

"Inove, DeRusha, Kapsides, Isoyama, Mardh, Ly, Roccetti, Thea, and Esko," a voice called out, stuttering over each syllable.

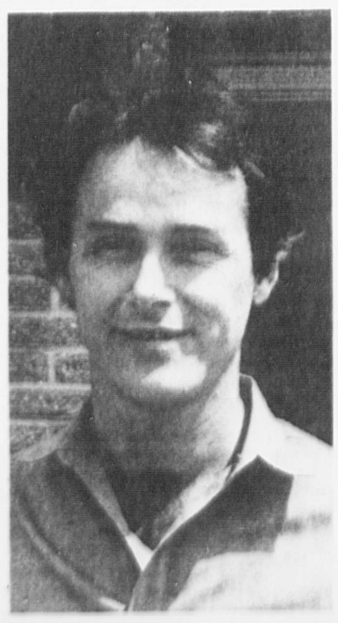

Their native lands — Afghanistan, Austria, Cambodia, Finland, Greece, Hong Kong, Israel, Italy, Japan, Korea, Russia, Sweden, Taiwan and Vietnam — represent several war torn, famine stricken, politically volatile nations.

Together, the 31 three and four-year-old children unite to form the Multi-Cultural Preschool based at the Lincoln-Eliot Elementary School.

For 10 years, the city-supported program has served as a gateway for both American and immigrant children to learn the local culture and English language. And last week, a tribute was paid to the school and its leaders.

DSS tactics pursuing child abuse questioned

By Lauren McFalls
Assistant News Editor

Newton resident Doug Turcotte says he knows why the Civil Liberties Union of Massachusetts has pressed suit against the Department of Social Services (DSS) for the manner in which it pursues suspected child abuse cases.

He opened his front door to a social worker several years ago, and as a result, he contends his visitation rights with his 4-year-old son were severely limited.

According to Turcotte, his wife, from whom he had been separated, had reported him to the DSS for child abuse and neglect when he failed to treat a burn the boy received from a moped exhaust pipe while riding with his father.

Turcotte said he "tried everything possible to eradicate the stigma" of the accusation. But sitting through a greivance hearing — an informal review of investigation procedures and results headed by a department administrator — was "everything." There is currently no procedure through which those accused of child abuse can appeal substantiation decisions.

Ultimately, he said, the department's report was used in a court of law to restrict Turcotte's visitation rights.

'No more excuses' for reval

By Edward Cafasso, Staff Writer

NEWTON — Peace of mind for residents concerned about skyrocketing property values and tax bills will cost about $260,000.

That was the message aldermen delivered recently when they approved the funding needed to get the city's upcoming fiscal 1987 revaluation off on the right foot.

A number of measures designed to avoid a repeat of previously chaotic revaluations comprise the major components of the spending package, including $38,750 for an independent monitoring agency to make sure assessors are operating on schedule.

The consternation and vote-switching that preceeded the funding's final approval served to underscore the importance the assessing package held for aldermen, all of whom made it clear that the Assessing Department has no excuses this time around.

"I just want to point out that over the last three years, we've thrown money at that department with both hands. We've given them all they needed to do the job and do it right," according to Alderman Richard Bullwinkle, who opposed the independent monitor idea.

"We're spending $38,750 to have somebody tell us that we're on schedule and we're okay. That strikes me as ludicrous. What that really says is that we can't trust our assessors," added Bullwinkle, who described his colleagues as "acting out of fear" and "like drunken sailors."

Alderman Rodney Barker found it "a little strange" that the assessors wanted $15,000 to hire a firm that would make sure residents understood the methodology behind the new values and the complex abatement options available for those dissatisified with the value placed on their homes.

"We're going pay $15,000 to a public relations firm to sell the results of the revaluation to the people. That's absolutely incredible. It's very suspect in my mind," according to Barker.

To counter those arguments, assessors found an unusual backer in Alderman Richard McGrath, whose previous cynicism has apparently given way to hope.

"This time, for the first time in 15 years, we're approaching a revaluation in the right manner. We now know who to blame if something goes wrong ... You owe it to the citizens to do it right this time," McGrath told his colleagues.

"We're finally doing the revaluation the way it should be done," echoed Alderman Verne Vance, who first proposed the independent monitoring concept.

"Even $38,000 is a relatively small price to pay for the best kind of insurance we can get to finally have a product we and the citizenry can be proud of ... This revaluation should lay the foundation for us to build on the hard-won and bitter lessons of the past," he added.

Alderperson Carol J. Robinson and Alderman Louis Irwin proposed cutting the funding for the public information consultant portion of the revaluation package, but then switched their move to reduce the bottom line of the entire appropriation request by $15,000.

That move failed 16-4, with Bullwinkle, Robinson, Irwin and Alderman Wendell R. Bauckman on the short end of the tally.

Irwin then asked his colleagues to send the consultant item back to committee for further deliberation, but the motion failed 12-8.

Opposition to the plan then faded away and the full board finally approved the $260,000 expenditure without dissent.

Concern grows over DSS tactics

Other Boston area parents have experienced similar problems with the DSS. Recently, eight of them filed a lawsuit against the department charging violation of constitutional rights by promoting harassment, intimidation and invasions of family privacy in child abuse investigations.

The suit, filed in Suffolk County Superior Court by the Civil Liberties Union of Massachusetts, seeks changes in the department's policies in child abuse investigations.

These changes include: establishing an appeal procedure for reviews of substantiated abuse complaints; requiring the department to screen out unreliable, repetitive accusations and substantiate reports; ordering the department to inform families in writing that they have the right to refuse to allow an investigator in their home and inform the family of the charges against them; ordering the department to tell parents that it must prove them unfit in court before children can be removed from their care.

According to John Roberts, director of the state Civil Liberties Union, the suit was filed to gain "due process." He said the social services department often pursues cases "without a strong reason to believe anything is taking place."

But local child, youth and parent social service workers, said there is no real solution to the problem. The issue is an emotional one, resulting in frequent conflicts between parents and social workers, especially when a false child abuse/neglect report is filed.

In addition, they said social workers are often unable to perform well because they are underpaid and overworked because social service agencies are typically understaffed.

Jeanette Atkinson, of Boston's Parents Anonymous, an organization created to help improve parenting skills, said the department's responsibility involves walking a "tight rope" between needing to protect children and the rights of parents.

But "there are limits to privacy," said James Breay, acting Newton area director of the Department of Social Services. He admitted the department is functioning "in an ethical frontier" when it pursues child abuse complaints.

If parents refuse entry to a social worker, Breay obtains a "writ of entry" from the courts. Further, he said, the law permits the department to take immediate custody of the child when death or serious injury is imminent.

"It's very hard for parents getting a social worker at their front door," said Atkinson. Breay noted, "People are hurt, shocked, angry when the DSS knocks on their door." But the "skill of the social worker" plays a key role here.

Here, parents' feelings toward the department's workers are mixed. A survey conducted by Parents Anonymous found half of the respondents felt "negatively" toward the agency, said Atkinson. But those feelings mostly revolved around personality issues with the department's social workers, she said.

Tom Engelman, Needham youth services director who works with the Newton Social Services department office, does not blame the social workers for problems.

"People in key positions of service are underpaid and overworked, so there's a high turnaround ... There's a lot required of them with limited staff help."

"Unfortunately," he continued, "it's a painful issue. How do you protect young people? How do you detect if there's a need. How do you protect families?"

Matters worsen when neighborhood or family feuds precipitate a false child abuse and neglect report.

Contrary to charges set out in the Civil Liberties Union lawsuit, Breay said his office screens out unreliable reports. This screening process involves asking questions to determine whether the reported behavior is legally considered abusive or neglectful and whether the report is filed by a person who has first-hand knowledge of potential child abuse.

For instance, he said, someone overhearing a child abuse incident at a cocktail party is not in a position to file a report.

Despite the precautions, "Every office has some number of reports which come to be identified as harrassment," he said.

According to St. Rep. Joseph DeNucci, chairman of the Human Services Committee, if parents rights are violated through investigating child abuse cases, "so be it."

"For too many years we have bent over backward to protect family integrity rather than the children," he said. "Denial of protection to some parents is unfortunate, but in the long run it helps to protect children."

DeNucci disagrees with the lawsuits intent on changing Social Service departmental procedures to allow parents the right to refuse social service investigators in their homes. "Why would a parent have a problem not cooperating? Children aren't just belongings. How do you protect their rights?"

Pigeons threatening City Hall

"In Newton, we basically used avitrol in combination with poly-butulane (the sticky stuff). Avitrol is a chemically-treated compound that produces an alarm reaction among flocks of birds," according to Barile.

Avitrol works through deception.

Whole corn kernels are treated with a very low ratio of the active ingredient and carefully placed in feeding stations near locations that the pigeons tend to favor.

"When a bird eats the baited kernel, it makes them sick and they go into distress. This alarms the flock, they fly away and are wary of returning to that location," according to Barile.

But, there are "certain risks involved" with the use of avitrol.

"You have to watch out that no animals other than the target animals are exposed to it. We try for a specific placement to keep it away from other animals. We also use whole corn kernels. Starlings can't digest them and there are very few birds around here that feed on whole corn pellets," he says.

The use of avitrol, which provides from six months to year of relief from the pigeon plague, requires that CPC seek permits from the Commonwealth's Pesticide Bureau, the Fish and Wildlife Department and the Environmental Protection Agency.

It's a pesty business, but somebody's got to do it.

Paulini, Amicangioli join race in Ward 6

NEWTON — Two more aspirants to the Board of Aldermen recently took out nomination papers to run for an at-large seat in Ward 6.

Thomas Paulini of Newton Centre and John Amicangioli of Newton Highlands both said revision of the city's zoning ordinances would be among their priorities if they were elected to the board.

Paulini, president of the Newton Centre Neighborhood Association, has led the drive for a building moratorium in the city.

"I think the Board of Aldermen needs some more representation from the neighborhood people, who want to protect the quality of life in Newton, as opposed to the kind of representation they're getting now," said Paulini. "In light of the recent action the board took on the moratorium, I think the city's residents were done a disservice."

John Amicangioli

He said his campaign would be aimed at capturing the seat now held by Regan.

Amicangioli ran unsuccessfully for a Ward 6 at-large seat two years ago. Although he said the city's zoning ordinances need to be updated, he was not in favor of the moratorium Paulini and others have worked for.

"The moratorium has its merits, but I spoke against it because I'm in business and I don't think it's fair to say that companies can't come into the city and build anything," said Amicangioli. "I want to see the village concept of the city stay as it is. There will be growth and progress, but it has to be tempered."

He said another of his major concerns is parking congestion in Newton Centre. He would like to see an underground parking garage built on the site of the old Mason School to alleviate the problem. The municipal parking lot in the middle of Newton Centre Square presently occupies that site.

Amicangioli, 51, a Highlands native and a Democrat, said he has already been endorsed by Lois Pines.

Nuttall, Segelman run for School Comm.

NEWTON — Citing programs they would like to implement in the city's school system, a college professor and an oral surgeon last week announced bids for election to the School Committee.

Ronald Nuttall of 106 Washington St. and Allyn Segelman of 48 Harwich Rd. confirmed their intent to run for a first term of office. Nuttall will seek the Ward 1 seat vacated by chairman Leonard Gentile and Segelman will oppose incumbent Robert Ricles for the Ward 8 office.

Nuttall, a professor at Boston College in the Graduate School of Education, said he will attempt to improve educational quality by implementing industrial quality control techniques.

"It's time to get Newton back in the leadership position," he said, noting that declining enrollments has prohibited the city from hiring "new young thinkers. I don't think the city has been as innovative as it once was."

Allyn Segelman

Nuttall has served on the city's PTA Council, the Newton Coalition for Education, the board of directors of Newton Citizens for Education, the League of Women Voters and as treasurer of the New England Eduaction Research Organization.

Segelman, an oral and facial surgeon, will strive to have seatbelts added to school buses.

"I am looking to get the School Committee to establish safety standards for children," he said.

The father of two children, Segelman was appointed by the governor to a commission studying the mandatory use of seatbelts on school buses.

"I can see it not going anywhere on the state level," he said. "At least my children and the city I live in can implement something like this. It doesn't seem like a priority item with the School Committee," he said.

He also said he was concerned that declining enrollments would force Newton South High School to close.

"If you look back at Newton South and the college board scores it would seem that the educational process would call for not closing the school that is producing these top students," he said.

New fund set up for library construction

NEWTON — For the first time since the dilemma arose decades ago, the city has officially earmarked funds for the renovation or construction of a new main library.

The Board of Aldermen last week approved the establishment of a "Capital Projects Stabilization Fund" designed to set aside revenues from the lease or rental of city-owned property — money that will eventually be put toward a new library.

In addition, as of July 1, all existing and expected revenues generated by the sale of surplus city property will also be put into a special account aimed at financing the long-awaited building.

Mayor Theodore D. Mann initiated the stabilization fund request by sending the proposal to the full board for its consideration during last week's budget review session.

The board voted 18-3 in favor the idea, but not until some aldermen battled over whether the move contradicted the message sent by voters who defeated a 1983 ballot question asking for an override of Proposition 2½ to finance a new library.

Meanwhile, the sale of surplus property account boasts a current balance of about $500,000 and additional revenues are anticipated once the sale of the former Hyde Elementary School is finalized.

Wilkinson will move to Brookline

NEWTON — The Garden City's loss will soon become Brookline's gain.

David C. Wilkinson, the city's chief financial officer since March 10, 1980, will become comptroller for the Town of Brookline in early June.

Aldermanic Finance Committee Chairman Paul E. Coletti last week announced Wilkinson's intention to resign at the onset of last week's budget review session.

In response, the Board of Aldermen gave Wilkinson — one of the key figures in the city's successful battle to overcome the restrictions of Proposition 2½ — a strong round of applause.

His current post provides an annual salary of $36,962. Wilkinson said he would be in line for a pay increase as Brookline's chief accountant.

Wilkinson, along with Comptroller Lawrence Marino and Treasurer Theodore Scafidi, has served as a key cog in the financial troika that allowed the city to finish every fiscal year since the inception of Prop. 2½ in 1981 with a substantial surplus and free cash position.

Garden City gets greener

By David Weber
Staff Writer

CHESTNUT HILL — Garden City residents are proud of their city for many reasons — fine public schools, celebrated citizens, proud Victorian homes, beautiful gardens and parks, to name but a few.

This city also has some treasures that are often taken for granted, that no amount of money can buy.

It is filled with great, stately shade trees that line its streets with a majesty that no row of mansions or swanky shops could ever hope to.

Like most gifts of nature, no two trees are exactly alike. They are large, living sculptures that can turn the wind into music, shade the sun from our backs and provide an umbrella for strollers during a flash rainstorm. They are one of the first indicators of changing seasons and provide homes for many smaller creatures.

Only generations of time can develop a large shade tree and because of that, Newtonians owe a debt of gratitude to city fathers and nature lovers from decades past who saw fit to plant so many young trees along the streets and in the parks.

But all is not well along the shaded streets of Newton. Each year the city loses approximately 400 trees to old age, disease, vandalism and off-course automobiles. The city has been able to replace only 250 each year, resulting in an annual net loss of 150 trees.

Someday, future residents of this city may want to thank some its current citizens for their foresight and desire to replenish this source of immeasurable beauty.

Glenn Morris digs trees.

Recently, the Newton Board of Realtors contributed to $500 to the city's Urban Design and Beautification Commission for the purchase of 600 trees, including Honey Locusts, Norway Maples, Black Walnuts and Chinese Chestnuts.

On a recent weekend, two members of that commission, Alexander Frisch and Glenn Morris, mucked about in the mud for several hours, planting about 200 of the seedlings in the Webster Conservation Area, next to the old Houghton estate.

They had hoped to plant them all, but rocky terrain and a lack of more volunteers slowed them down. The remaining trees will be planted in two weeks.

Morris, chairman of the commission, said the city wants to start a nursery and plant 600-1,000 trees each year. He said it takes between four and six years before the seedlings can be transplanted along the streets.

Morris said that 10 years from now, the city hopes to produce 2,500 trees for transplanting. He said trees that couldn't be used for planting along trees and parks might be sold at inexpensive rates to residents for beautification of their yards.

Anyone wishing to help plant the remaining seedlings on May 18 should give Glenn Morris a phone call at 926-4080 or show up at 10 a.m. on May 18 at the Webster Conservation Area, where Suffolk Road meets Clovelly Road.

New Japanese 'Super Pill' Insures Rapid Weight-Loss

No Dieting — Eat All You Want, Pill Does All The Work

BEVERLY HILLS, CA — An exciting new "all natural" weight-loss "Super" Pill developed by the JMA (Japanese Medical Association) has just been approved for distribution in the United States. Reportedly, it can guarantee that you will lose more than a pound a day without dieting, from the very first day until you reach your ideal weight and figure. News of this "Super Pill" is literally sweeping the country. It's called Amitol and there has never been anything quite like it before.

"Flushes Calories Right Out Of Your Body"

What makes Amitol so thrilling and unique is its reported ability to flush calories right out of your body. Amitol is completely safe, it contains no drugs whatsoever. Its ingredients are derived solely from the Konjac root which grows primarily in Northern Japan.

Why the Konjac root? It has been used in Japan for over 1600 years to produce rapid and natural weight-loss!

Japanese studies verify that Konjac root actually prevents fat producing calories from being absorbed into your system. They say it does this by surrounding much of the fats, proteins and carbohydrates you have eaten with a protective viscous coating which is then gently flushed out of your system. And according to Japanese research this produces absolutely amazing results.

And who can disagree! Amitol (although brand new to this country) is already being called by many people, "the most exciting weight-loss breakthrough of the century." In fact, everywhere there are reports of easy and fast weight-loss from formerly overweight people (in all walks of life) who are now slim, trim, and attractive again.

Company Offers Extraordinary Guarantee

You now can purchase Amitol direct from the North American distributor, and it comes with an extraordinary guarantee.

If you place your order now and then follow the simple instructions for a period of 30 days, you must be completely satisfied with the dramatic visible results or just return the empty container and Dyna Labs will immediately send back your entire purchase price. This guarantee applies regardless of your age or current weight level. What could be better than that! It's just that simple. If you've tried to lose weight before and failed you no longer have an excuse. Amitol is available, it's easy and it works without dieting!

$19.95—30 day supply, or $35.95 — 60 day supply. Order immediately by sending a check or money order to DYNA LABS, 270 No. Canon Dr., Ste. 1255 (Dept. U-11) Beverly Hills, CA, 90210. (Enclose your return address). Credit card holders can order by simply dialing toll free: (1-800-367-2400) 24 hrs a day, 7 days a week. Either way your order will be promptly sent. Please don't wait. You really do deserve to be thin.

Editorial

Thanks to vets for reminding us

When the proud survivors of World War II returned home from saving the world from facism, they were universally heralded as heros. The City of Newton gave them Oak Hill Park, acres and acres of land to build a modern, model community on.

When the confused contingent of refugees from the predoomed debacle in Vietnam came home from their war, they were spit on and branded "baby killers." Their parents told them not to wear their uniforms around, fearing they might become the focus of rampant anti-war sentiment.

Ten years after the fall of Saigon, the official end of a "conflict" that never had any official beginning, the city has given its Vietnam veterans a couple hundred square feet of city-owned property on Washington Street, across from Our Lady's Church.

Of course, they were two completely different wars. The whole world celebrated the conclusion of "the last great war." Only political activists and friends and families of potential combatants thought our turning away from the mess we had made in Southeast Asia was an estimable idea.

It was not just the wild-eyed protestors the vets were wary of. Fellow vets from other wars called them "cry babies" and told them "war is hell," wherever and whenever you find it.

Recently, the entire country seems to have been wrapped up in an attempt to make up for its failure to understand and honor those who survived the strange, alien hell into which our "best and brightest" were thrown. After an avalanche of articles in the newspapers and a predictable glut of other media attention, the vets finally got the "welcome home" they deserved. Last week's ticker tape parade in New York City was right in line with past celebrations.

The country and the city are to be commended for the courage they have shown. They have recognized their past failures, and they have tried to make up for them as best they can.

But it is little, and it is late.

Alan Licarie, the executive secretary of the city's Election Commission who has been active in veterans' affairs since his discharge, pinpointed the problem with an eloquent analogy. "It's like forgetting your anniversary," he said of the recent flurry of activity. "You can bring flowers or something to your wife the next day; but it's no good. You forgot."

The 23 sons of the Garden City who made the ultimate sacrifice in the Vietnam War will not be forgotten. Their comrades, with Charles "Buddy" Cerone as their guide and goad, have made sure of that. On their own, without any "official" assistance, they have come up with a memorial monument which does their brothers proud. It will be dedicated on Sunday, May 26.

To Buddy Cerone, John Magni, Richie Lerner, Mark Antonellis, Scott Bolio, Frannie Dalicandro and the others who have helped turn the dream of a local memorial into reality, you have our apoligies and our thanks. Hopefully, the monument you have created will remind all of us of the mistakes we have made and help us to avoid them in the future.

War against child abuse

DSS's double-edged sword

It's almost impossible to tell how many times this scene has been recreated, but the fact that the American Civil Liberties Union has pressed suit against the Department of Social Services over the way child abuse complaints are handled suggests that my son and I are not alone.

'She told me, 'I know your Dad doesn't hit you very hard when he hits you. Just how hard does he hit you?' I told her, 'My Dad doesn't hit me at all.'"

My son

My brother-in-law brought the policeman up to our apartment around 8:30 p.m.. By that time, my son and I had finished the dinner I had cooked and he was doing his homework. Everything was quiet in the apartment where, hours earlier, there had been a lot of shouting.

It might take a working, single parent to understand how it all happened, but I think any parent of an 11-year-old boy might get the gist of it.

It was late fall, and the evenings were getting cold, especially for a sweaty boy on a long bike ride home from soccer practice. I made my son promise he'd wear his sweatshirt home after practice. Walking through the parking lot of the Star Market after sunset, I noticed there was a cold mist blowing right through my sport coat and I congratulated myself for being a good father and forcing the sweatshirt on my son.

Of course, when I got home, I found it still tied to his bike.

He had not done what I told him to do. I had been mistaken. For all my hard work, I was not the father had thought I was.

I flipped out. Work. Groceries. Housecleaning. Soccer practice and games. Making lunch for school. Trying to recreate a home life that had never been created in the first place. It was too much.

I was holding the sweatshirt in my hand when I walked into the apartment. He knew he was in trouble. I started to yell. I threw the sweatshirt at him. I stepped up the decibels. "I'm really going to flip out on this," I thought. "Then he'll know I really mean it, and he'll pay attention to me next time. I'll come down real heavy this time, and I won't have to do it again."

Such is the reasoning of an exhausted neophyte in the midst of "parenting."

By the time the cop arrived, things had calmed down, my son had all but forgotten the shouting incident (as he would, once again, forget to wear his damn sweatshirt home from soccer practice) and the scene was one of a comfortable home life.

The cop said he was responding to a complaint from one of my neighbors who had phoned in to state that a young boy was being abused at my address. The cop stayed for about a minute. When he returned to the station, he told someone my son was dressed in a tee shirt and shorts and there were no visible signs of abuse.

That wasn't bad enough.

At 7:15 the next morning, a lady from the DSS knocked on my door. She explained that she was following up on last night's complaint and handed me a piece of paper that explained my rights. In the middle of the page, it stated that, if the situation in my home were deemed an "emergency," the government could take my child from me "immediately."

She wanted to meet with my son and me. Tomorrow would not do. "But I have to work, and he has school and after-school programs to go to," I complained to no avail.

We would meet that day at 3:15 at my apartment, and that was that.

When the lady from the DSS came back that afternoon, she had a friend with her. It was necessary for there to be two of them, because they were going to separate my son and me during our interviews so they could pick out any discrepancies in our stories.

The lady from the DSS took me to her office to interview me while her associate stayed at the apartment with my son. I was asked if I drank, and exactly how much. I was asked if I was under a lot of pressure in my job. No one was surprised when I answered "yes." I was asked if I was under a lot of pressure as a single parent. Again, "yes." Again, no surprise.

"Is there anything you can think of that might ease the situation," I was asked.

"Yes. Find me a decent-sized apartment where my son and I can get away from each other every once in a while. That would be a big help," I responded.

"Sorry. We can't do that."

"Well. What can you do?"

The end of the interview consisted of a litany of counselling services available through the DSS.

We returned home, and the ladies from the DSS said they would be in touch.

My son told me the lady who had interviewed him was quite adept at eliciting information from an 11-year-old boy. He said, "She told me, 'I know your Dad doesn't hit you very hard when he hits you. Just how hard does he hit you?' I told her, 'My Dad doesn't hit me at all.'"

We were both terribly shaken up by the incident. My son cried, and I came very close to it. Having an agent of the federal government walk into your home and tell you she can take your child away can do that to you.

I hugged my son, and he hugged me. We fell on the bed, exhausted from the strain, and took a long nap. When we woke up, I made his favorite dish for dinner — chicken parmesan. He did his homework. We watched some t.v.. We were together. It was very cozy.

Two or three days later, I called the DSS. After some delays, a voice came on the phone with a response to my inquiry. "Oh, yes. It was decided that the complaint was unsubstantiated," was the final disposition from the DSS.

As it turned out, the complaint had originated from someone who was having dinner at a neighbor's house when the yelling started. Some one who would not recognize my son or me if they tripped over us in the street had sent the government into my living room with a piece of paper that said I would have to give up my son to the government if a bureaucrat decided the case was an "emergency."

Among the repercussions of this incident: I don't yell at my son much any more, not because I fear another Orwellian invasion of my home, but because I found out it does absolutely no good. Also, whenever his mother pulls some screwy move and I complain about it, she rarely fails to tell me, "Well, at least the DSS never sent someone out here to investigate me for child abuse."

Thanks, DSS. In my estimation of your "war against child abuse," I join with the parents, in Maine, of the kid with the rare bone disease. Remember that case? His bones kept snapping for no apparent reason. The DSS, however, in its wisdom, knew what was happening. They took the kid away from his abusive parents who had never laid anything but love on him.

They had to fight like hell to get him back.

Despite the full-blown vision George Orwell had of life in "1984," I think even he might be shocked at some of the stories.

Keeping your kids safe and sane

By Ken Franckling

'We've got to keep them safe in a way that also keeps them feeling good about the world they live in.'

Author Sherryll Kerns Kraizer

You want your kids to be safe from abductors and abusers, yet you don't want to scare the dickens out of them and make them fear the world.

You read all the horror stories about disappearances and sexual abuse, and worry a bit, but think "Yeah, but it won't happen to my child." Then you have more doubts.

What do you do?

Buy Sherryll Kerns Kraizer's "The Safe Child Book" for $5.95 then spend an hour or two digesting her common sense method of protecting children and giving them a greater sense of self-confidence and independence.

At all costs, she says, avoid telling horror stories that will only overwhelm and paralyze the child with fear, rather than portray the world as a positive place.

Many of the things she suggests will trigger a common sense response from the reader, but haven't been taught to the child for one reason or another.

"Parents' instincts have been very right," Kraizer said. "They've said: 'I don't want to frighten my children, I don't want them to be hurt, and I'm not sure how to talk about it."

Over the past four years, Kraizer has developed a personal safety program for children that focuses on how parents can raise the subject with children.

"Initially, what many people did was talk about it in the way they'd talk about it with children who had already been victimized. For example, with sexual abuse, they'd say, 'Well, this is what sexual abuse is and this is what they do to you and this is who is likely to do it to you.'

"When we know that 85 to 90 percent of sexual abuse occurs with someone the child knows and trusts, that's a really devastating thing to say to a child. It changes the way they look at people they have relationships with," Kraizer said.

"It is not OK with me to sacrifice the positive mental health of our children in the name of prevention. We've got to keep them safe in a way that also keeps them feeling good about the world they live in and about the people that they have relationships with."

In an interview during a national book promotion tour, the former special education teacher, who works in New York, said her whole premise is that "preventing abuse is less painful than dealing with the after effects."

Her book explores avoiding sexual abuse, abduction, how to deal with leaving children home alone, and how to choose a day care center of babysitter.

She hammers home time and again that children from an early age can think for themselves and can learn to take care of themselves.

"They can prevent abuse, they can prevent abduction — if we just talk to them, give them a sense that indeed when they are by themselves they are taking care of themselves, that they need to think ahead of time about what they would do if this happened or that happened, so they feel confident and able to be out there in the world," Kraizer said.

They get to that stage through "What if?" question and answer games in the normal course of the day that force a child to think about how they would handle a particular non-threatening situation, how to say "no" to things that instinctively make them feel uncomfortable, how to instill in them the knowledge that they must be responsible for keeping themselves safe.

"It's unbelievable," Kraizer said. "I started doing this with kids when they are 2 ½ and 3 years old. They can absolutely learn and use these techniques and talk about them with their parents. When you begin to really talk to them, they do have concerns, questions that aren't being answered.⅞

"Some of the fear is not knowing," she said. "Knowledge is the antidote for anxiety."

At the same time, Kraizer doesn't want parents to feel anxious about the situation.

"The last thing parents need is one more thing they have to do with their children. These techniques mesh with things they do every day," she said.

Dell Publishing Co. agreed with her on the importance of getting the message out, and simultaneously released the paperback and hardcover versions of the book.

"Parents need the information now, and parents for the most part just don't buy hardcovers," Kraizer said.

House balks again at 'better budget'

By William G. Robinson

BEACON HILL — Republicans worked long and hard to produce the "Better Budget"–an alternative to the Governor's budget and the House Ways and Means version. For the past four years we have offered this document every year as a complete substitute budget. Every year it has been voted down as such. However, many parts of the Better Budget become a part of the final budget document throught the amendment process.

Under a new rule adopted by the House, any amendments to the budget have to be filed with the Clerk two days before the debate on the budget begins. As a result, Republicans filed over 800 amendments. Practically every one of them deals with one of the more than 1,000 line-items in the budget and mirrors an item in the Better Budget.

Our intention in submitting so many amendments is not one of a dilatory nature; rather, it is a way to stimulate constructive, meaningful debate on how your tax dollars are spent. Otherwise, as it is turning out now, the House would merely act as a rubber stamp for any legislation submitted by the Governor.

The process of examining each area of the budget is time consuming and very trying on every member of the Legislature. Yet, it is the responsibility of elected officials who act as fiduciaries of taxpayer dollars. Republicans are spending more time now to spend less money in the end–a trade off we fully endorse. Efficient use of funds should be the goal of any Governor and the Legislature. But apparently it is not in this budget.

Top executives of the Fortune 500 companies would be appalled at the waste and overbloating of funds in state government. If they ever operated their companies in a similar fashion the stockholders would throw them out in a minute. In state government, the constant turnover of elected "executives" may prevent such efficiency, but certainly some overhaul is possible.

Reality is that the more money we have, the more money we spend. The administration has revised its revenue estimates upward so many times that officials often quote different projections of what the revenue surplus will actually be. Today, anyway, the administration says the surplus for FY '85 is at $171 million, a figure that is low and will be low. By nearly all honest estimates, that figure should be in the mid-$300 million range. Yes, it could be more–no, it is unlikely to be less. With all that money lying around, you can bet it will be put to all kinds of uses.

The opportunity to make sensible suggestions and changes in the state budget is now. The Democratic Leadership should end its "power trip" and be a bit more responsible with your tax dollars.

(William G. Robinson is House Republican leader on Beacon Hill.)

Will King turn to Republicans?

By Loring Swaim

What to make of those gaudy trial balloons about 1) an Ed King comeback? and 2) King running as a Republican?

Don't make very much.

As things now stand, Mike Dukakis is on a roll and, as the saying goes; if it ain't broken, don't fix it.

As for the former governor: if you need a rerun to satisfy your ego, forget it.

But, if you can come up with a dynamic program–vital new initiatives for Massachusetts improving on current policies–you're welcome to showcase them when the time comes.

But not as a Republican "convert".

Stories were floated breathlessly last week disclosing King was toying with another run. He had breakfasted with some Republican elders. His chances would be better, it was observed, as a Republican — far better if the Republican field were cleared for him. In the deal, Republicans could recapture the corner office.

The further presumption is that, given that wing's animosity towards King, a Democractic state convention would deny him (as a Democrat) the 15 percent vote qualifying him for a crack at Dukakis in the primary.

Everyone knows King leans philosophically Republican and conservative. He had Republican advisors while governor; he was partial to Ronald Reagan, earning the latter's sobriquet as "my favorite governor"; he is uneasy with liberal party activists; he deregulated business where possible; he curbed the welfare state.

But to expect the Republican party to anoint him its standard bearer is an insult to the GOP. It also ignores the stable of proprietary talent grooming these days in renascent Republican circles.

Republicans like Andy Card, Andy Natsios, John Lakian, Paul Cronin, Ray Shamie, Ann Kramer, Mike Valerio, Avi Nelson, Bill Robinson, Steve Pierce, Jack Flannery, Bill Weld should be able to scare up a bona fide candidate of their own when the time comes.

No, if Ed King wants for some strange reason to be governor again, he should do it the old-fashioned way, earn it–on his own, with his own political organization, challenging the incumbent on his own ground, campaigning as a Democrat or possibly as an Independent.

King or anyone, of course, will be hard pressed to find an issue with which to belabor Dukakis. The Duke's got his administration under control, the economy is bubbling, no one is rebelling. Unless something goes sour, why change?

There are, also Republican braintrusters who wouldn't mind using King to insinuate their beliefs back into vogue. They get fixated by conservative viewpoints; they relish pulling the levers behind the scenes; they prefer manipulating forces to taking their case to the people.

Lacking in the Massachusetts GOP are attractive new faces and voices with recognized reputations in business or politics who have thought through their beliefs and can evoke commitment for people eager for leadership. With a populace eager for leadership, with a popular president breaking ground, the opportunities are boundless. Where are they? You can't beat anybody with nobody.

As for King, he should know he carries heavy baggage. He is not universally liked. He's prone to excesses with the Praetorian Guard he relished at his side. His last months in office constituted a crude orgy of accomdating cronies.

Suspicion still lingers over the Revenue Department where one of his appointees tragically committed suicide.

Technically, "candidate" King has till June 3 this year to switch parties and enroll as a Republican. Or he can wait till March 3 next year to shed a label and go Independent.

Comments a poised Dukakis spokesman wryly about King trial balloons: "We take him seriously. It may make sense for him to change parties; he's consistently demonstrated he's comfortable with Republican programs."

Ward 5 GOP Comm. pushes English as official language

At a recent meeting of the Newton Ward 5 Republican Committee the following resolution was adopted:

Whereas it is our belief that one of the most important things that binds our nation together is our common language, and ...

Whereas virtually every country in history which has collapsed into civil war and permanent division, and ...

Whereas those who cannot speak English cannot really participate in the mainstream of American life as all other immigrant groups in American History have, and ...

Whereas is is also our belief that bi-lingual programs in our schools, although well intended, tend to isolate and hold non-English speaking working back in unskilled jobs, and ...

Whereas this tends to deny them and their children the opportunity of breaking out of life of poverty and enjoying the blessings of liberty.

Now, Therefore the Newton Ward 5 Republican Committee does hereby urge the adoption of an amendment to the United States Constitution making English the official language of the United States.

Reagan did us all a favor

Isn't it time that we all woke up to the fact that President Reagan has, quite unwittingly, done the world a great service in his visit to the Bittburg Cemetery? Since the Nuremburg Trials, nothing has aroused the world so much as that eight minute visit. The President's historic gessture of "reconcilliation" is of far less importance than the fact that it reminded the world of the Holocaust. It may have awoken painful memories to many, but a T.V. news clipping of Jews and Germans arguing in the streets of Bonn served to remind the world once more of all that had been suffered. Had Ronald Reagan backed down and gone "somewhere less inflamatory" these reminders might never have reached so many millions.

For years survivors and relatives of those who died in the Holocaust have anguished that the world was forgetting the past. In one brief gesture, however mismanaged, it has been brought back to life. As someone far wiser than I one once wrote, "The best things can happen from the wrong reasons."

Special treatment at Fernald

In these times of increasing scrutinizing and negative views of our state institutions, I'd like to offer a positive experience as an example of the many wonderful things never reported.

My 33 year old son, a resident of the Fernald State School in Waltham, recently had a leg amputated, while this is traumatic enough for anyone, it is more so for someone who has limited understanding.

Our family's burden has eased tremendously by the overwhelming support and endless care we received by Fernald's staff at Dolan Hall. During my son's hospitalization, staff members volunteered their free time to give him one to one care. They brought radios, gifts and favorite foods and stayed for hours and each came many times and Fernald offered personal care day and night. The day of surgery about 10 came at 6 a.m. and remained until 3 p.m. as good friends of my son.

Despite the Christmas season, the team at Dolan Hall provided constant company and endless devotion, well into the evening for my son. While he is recovering back at Fernald they continue to do the same. He could not have managed the walker or this major change without their devotion. They are sincere thoughtful-beautiful people. One such staff person, Tony Valdettaro says "It's easy to do because he's like a brother." Such is the charcter of the many caring staff at the Fernald School. It's time people heard about the good news too.

Stars come out for sports fair

By Edward Cafasso
Staff Writer

NEWTON CORNER — The stars came out last Saturday afternoon along the Charles River.

Instead of names like Antares, Polaris and Rigel, these stars were called Williams, Orr, Havlicek and a host of other titles.

For some, the brightness with which they once shone in the local heavens has now been overshadowed by new stars like Rice, Peeters and Bird. But for the hundreds of people who came to the New England Museum of Sports' "Super Sports Cookout," these stars will always have a special place in New England's celestial array of athletes.

The cookout, which was held at the Msgr. Daly Hockey Rink & Recreation Area on Nonantum Road, served as the museum's first major fundraiser and gave local residents the chance to meet true legends in every field of athletic endeavor.

Bruins great Bobby Orr thrilled autograph hounds, including Vinnie Pennacchio, 8.

Despite the unusually hot weather, the afternoon easily qualified as a dream come true for any sports fan as hundreds of youngsters and quite a few adults lined up to get autographs. A sample of William's, Orr's and Havlicek's penmanship required the longest wait.

Star after star appeared to lend support to the museum's effort, including Celtic hero Dave Cowens, Olympic hockey great Mike Eurzione, former Patriot stand-outs Gino Cappellitti and Jim Nance, current gridiron veteran Guy Morris, Red Sox stalwart Rico Petrocelli, Boston College Football Coach Jack Bicknell, baseball notables Dick Radatz and Ted Lepcio and former World Middleweight Champ Tony DeMarco.

A contingent of local sports greats from both past and present were also on-hand, including Waltham's blind golf champion Joe Lazaro, former middleweight contender turned politician State Rep. Joe DeNucci and Waltham-born boxing legend Al "Red" Priest.

Hundreds watched Garden City iron-pumper Ted Arcidi, billed as "the strongest man in the world," turn in a record-shattering weightlifting performance and, while dining on "all-you-can-eat" cookout fare, gathered around the center ring to enjoy a wrestling exhibition officiated by legendary matman "Killer" Kowalski.

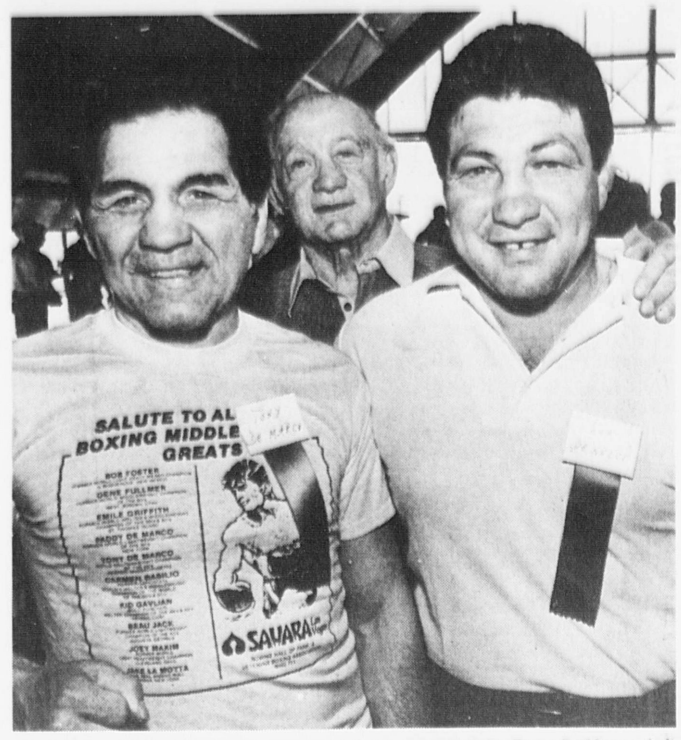

According to Executive Director Dick Johnson, the proceeds from Saturday's all-star event should help insure a successful opening for the museum exactly one-year from now.

"It's a very enormous undertaking that usually doesn't happen overnight unless you get a huge private donation. We've been working almost exclusively with individual contributions and just a few corporate gifts," Johnson said of the effort that began in 1979.

The "immediate goal" of supporters is to open a headquarters on the future site of the museum — 1175 Soldiers Field Road in Brighton, which Johnson noted as an entirely appropriate location for a building dedicated to the contributions of New England's sports heroes.

"It will be just across the street from Harvard Stadium, the oldest concrete stadium and the home of the oldest intercollegiate sports program in the nation. The building will be located on what used to be a very popular harness racetrack, the Brighton Speedway. It'll be on the doorstep of tradition," he said.

Gov. Michael S. Dukakis, who appeared briefly at the cookout, is also a strong backer of the effort. The first exhibit planned for the museum is a tribute to the Boston Celtics' supremacy in professional basketball.

Johnson said the idea to hold a cookout where fans could openly mingle with the greatest is indicative of the unique kind of non-profit, educational museum New England citizens can expect to visit in the spring or early summer of 1986.

"We're introducing people to the concept of a museum as an active, hands-on, multi-media center that will serve as the focal point of sports history for the entire area," he said.

Mann declares for a fifth term

"The moratorium is very much against progress," Alan Karp said to his wife.

"They're (the aldermen) entitled to their opinion," his wife said, smiling at Alderman Verne Vance who had joined the small group near the punch bowl.

But city politics would have to be put on the back burner. This was the mayor's night.

"The city is very fortunate to have a man of his caliber and integrity," Arnold Huberman of Allen Avenue in Waban said.

Huberman was not the only guest to sing "Happy Birthday" and praises to Mann for the "excellent job" he has done for the city.

Jim Regan, Ward 6 Alderman-at-Large, believes the city enjoys its AAA-bond rating - the only city in the state to earn such a distinction - because of the mayor's management and administrative skills.

"I think he's the best," said Regan, who at one time worked in Kevin White's administration.

Because of the mayor's tempered administrative skills, Regan does not foresee a large field in the upcoming mayoral race.

"There's not a better city administrator living in Newton," Regan said, adding, "As a result, I don't see any competition.

He added that "this mayor can handle anything that come down the pike."

Louis Kaitz, a friend of the mayor's who served as MC, told Mann and his supporters that Newton was regarded by the rest of the nation as "the All-American City."

"Newton is a role model for every city and town in this country," Kaitz added, "thanks to Ted Mann."

Kaitz also said the Mann's success was due in part to the efforts and commitment of his supporters in the city.

"As I look around the room," Kaitz said," I see people who helped Ted Mann run for alderman in Ward 8 25 years ago." In addition, he commended the age diversity of Mann's inner circle of supporters.

Gayle Seidman, a sophomore at Newton South and one of the mayor's younger supporters at the party, could not agree more with Kaitz assessment of the mayor.

"Anything in the community, he's always been there," Seidman said.

She talked of the mayor's commitment to preventing drug use in the city's schools, and how he came and spoke to the students at Newton South. "He convinced me not to try them (drugs)," she said.

Lenny Aronson, formerly a city solicitor for Newton who is now treasurer for Gov. Michael S. Dukakis's campaign, brought the mayor a special birthday greeting from the governor.

"The only reason I'm here is because we ran out of postage stamps," Aronson said jokingly. "This is not a campaign endorsement."

In addition to his duties as mayor, Mann is now serving an unprecedented third term as president of the Massachusetts Mayor's Association. He serves on two committees for the United States Conference of Mayors and was recently elected vice chairman of the MBTA Advisory Board.

The mayor is married to the former Florence Ober. Residents of the city's Oak Hill section, the Manns have five children and three grandchildren.

Handbook set

NEWTON — Conduct by students that may prompt possible expulsion actions will be described in an updated handbook on the rights and responsibilities of students.

The School Committee Monday night reviewed a 14-page draft of the latest version of the Student Rights and Responsibilities handbook. The book was last updated in 1982.

"These are spelled out more clearly," said school committee member Angela Neilsen, noting that the book is a "readable document."

The new book calls for expulsion by the committee for the following reason after all other appropriate actions have been deemed unworkable.

- If continued presence represents a danger to the physical safety of others.
- If his/her conduct is disruptive to the educational environment.
- If act or acts are so heinious to disrupt the education process despite the students prior school record or behavior.

Croce scolds panel

By Robert K. Newman, Staff Writer

NEWTON — Newton Teachers Association President Anthony Croce Monday night scolded the School Committee for sanctioning last week's "callous, insensitive and unprofessional" layoff of nine tenured teachers.

In a highly charged five minute speech, Croce said that prior to the committee's vote, school department personnel notified the faculty that contracts would not be renewed. The committee agreed unanimously last Monday to notify staff members that declining enrollments had prompted a reduction-in-force (RIF).

The verbal assault was the first public encounter between union and school officials since the heated collective bargaining talks and job action last winter. The attack comes at a time when officials from both parties are meeting to address the problem of low morale among the city's school teachers.

"If you bother to wonder why there exists a serious morale problem in our ranks, may I suggest that you reflect on the way these difficult RIF decisions were carried out," Croce said. "After years in our system, often more years than any of you have sat in your positions, isn't a professional, isn't a person deserving of more?"

According to Croce nine teachers — from six schools and four disciplines — were notified prior to the committee vote by their principals or through "blunt" calls from the personnel department.

Asst. Supt. for Personnel Thomas O'Conor declined comment following the meeting.

Terming the verbal thrashing "unfair," committee chairman Leonard Gentile said after the meeting his colleagues have expressed concerns to school department administrators over the RIF process. Prior to last week's vote, the committee met in Executive Session to review the criteria used to determine which faculty members would be cut.

"If anyone had cared to ask, the committee raised concerns on the way the process was to be handled," he said.

Gentile said he was disturbed and offended by Croce's "ranting and raving in front of the public and the press.

"I don't like being lectured to like a misbehaving student," he said.

But teachers and administrators are "concerned, angry, and outraged" over the treatment, according to Croce.

Board will debate sanctuary scheme

Backman said there approximately 15,000 illegal Central American aliens in Massachusetts right now, many of them living in the Allston section of Boston.

He said the plight of Central American refugees facing deportation has been compounded by an order from the Reagan administration that forbids federally funded legal service agencies, such as Greater Boston Legal Services, from assisting illegal aliens.

For that reason, he recommended that $250,000 in the state budget be allocated to the Attorney General's office for legal representation for political refugees.

"Not only is the Reagan administration trying to push these people out, but it's making it impossible for them to be represented," said Backman.

He said the bill was given an unfavorable report by the joint Legislative Judiciary Committee, but that report was reversed by the full Senate. The bill is now in the Senate Ways and Means Committee.

The Senate's reversal came one day after the city of Cambridge voted on April 8 to establish itself as a sanctuary for Central American refugees. The city declared itself " a safe haven for refugees now residing in Cambridge until they can safely return to their homelands or until they receive federally recognized residency status." It also declared that no city official or employee should cooperate with federal investigations into alleged immigration violations.

Jewels & Gems
BY CAROL
THE GOLD LADY
THE PERSONAL TOUCH
Today's woman, like those before her, still enjoys the pleasures of self-adornment. They include the dramatization and display of her beauty to express herself while attracting and exciting others. The style of jewelry a woman wears, and the specific pieces she prefers, mark her as sophisticated, tailored and softly feminine or free and independent. Since a woman may be any or all of these at different times, her jewelry is an extension of her personality. A woman does not simply accessorize her ensembles with earrings, pins, necklaces, rings, bracelets and watches. She adds the personal touch that is an immediate expression of herself. Her jewelry wardrobe communicates for her and is both useful and ornamental.
The fact that your jewelry is a reflection of your personality is no mistake. There are so many styles of jewelry to please everyone's tastes. And you can have different jewelry styles to reflect your whimsical or serious moods. Here at CAROL "THE GOLD LADY" we display a variety of jewelry to stay popular with traditional preferences as well as the up-beat styles. A popular look today is big, bold earrings. They're so much fun and look terrific on. Come see for yourself at 109 Dalby St., Newton. Tues., Wed., Sat. 10-6; Thurs. & Fri. til 9. Tel. 332-5935.
HELPFUL HINT
Diamond-set earrings are most flattering to the mature woman.

OUR ONE-HUNDREDTH ANNIVERSARY

4 DAY ANNIVERSARY SALE
STARTS WED., MAY 15th AT 9:30 A.M.

Kids are nudged into our culture international cooperation. As an announcer chanted the names and native countries for each of the students, the children sang to the appropriate music.

"We are the world. We are the children," the shy voices whispered.

"They will represent the future of the world," Mayor Theodore D. Mann responded, prior to reading a proclamation lauding the program and declaring "Multicultural Week" in the Garden City. "In a small city like Newton, we find the rainbow, a pot of gold."

Students are selected for the preschool after passing an interview and test given by the program's teacher Ena Lorant. A judgement is made whether the child will be suited to a multi-cultural environment.

In a secluded basement room, sessions are held three days a week, morning and afternoon. Students arrive prepared to participate in three hours of instruction, games and singing.

"It does not matter to the students where their classmates come from," Lorant said. "They just play with each other."

The classroom walls are covered by a mixture of international souvenirs symbolizing the cultural origins of each student and toys contained in an ordinary preschool.

Unable to read or speak the English language, newcomers often communicate through body language. According to Lorant, children quickly derive sounds by imitating syllables spoken by their teachers and classmates.

"Because there is no pressure, they learn from one another," Lorant explained. "Something they get from this program is an appreciation of dealing with students from different cultures."

After crossing their name off an attendance sheet and participating in a brief play period, Lorant rounds up the class. With the eyes of their curious peers fixed on the teacher, the students are asked to identify and pronounce their last names.

"Children have the capability of being bilingual," Lorant pointed out. "In many countries in the world this is accepted."

In addition to language skills, the program's leaders teach the youngsters social skills.

"To form a cohesive group where they trust each other is one of our basic aims," Lorant said. "Until there is trust, you can't work together."

To build up the trust, Lorant encourages students to share personal anecdotes with the class. Students often elaborate on trips, new possessions and family illnesses.

As the interaction concludes, the students disperse throughout the playroom. Children identify interests to work on, including painting, building with blocks and reading books. According to Lorant, children develop a routine that makes them feel comfortable in the surroundings.

"The first thing we must teach them to ask when they have to go to the bathroom," she said with a chuckle. "That is the key word."

Following the play session, children gather together for a snack and a story. Later on several songs are sung by the group before the children gear up for one final recreation session on their own.

To most children in the program, their home country is nothing more than a hazy memory — a dash across a border or a trip overseas. For their parents the memories are more immediate and intense, a separation from family and friends.

As novices in American culture, Lorant said some parents are not familiar with the informality of the American educational system.

"Different people have different ideas of what school is," she said. "Many of these people come from countries where the schools are identified stringently. Looking at this they realize you can learn while singing and playing."

In her years as the program's teacher, Lorant has developed a passion to insure the school's future.

"Every once and a while I go crazy," she said. "I have to remind people that it is worthwhile.

"We've been anxious for a while with the school closings," she added. "This program is not mandated by the state, but it is not expensive when you consider what preschools cost."

After searching citywide for a new home, representatives of the Bilingual Education Department have secured space next year at the Franklin School in West Newton.

"My worry was that there was no adequate space, that we didn't have any place to go," she said, noting the group looked at a lot of spaces.

While Lorant is "ecstatic" that the program will have a home, she is disappointed they have to say goodbye to the Lincoln-Eliot Elementary School. School officials are expected to convert the program's space into an art room.

"The principal of this school and staff have been so supportive," she said. "Children learn a lot from being a part of a school and seeing other children."

Juniper blooms

NTA Ward 8 debate on 21st

OAK HILL — The Newton Taxpayers Association will sponsor a debate between the four candidates for the Ward 8 Alderman's seat on Tuesday, May 21, 7:45 p.m., at the Memorial-Spaulding School on Brookline Street.

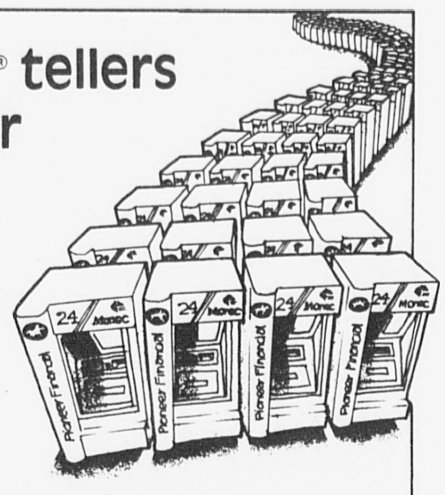

Sam Robbins, a member of the board of the NTA, will act as moderator for the event. He has promised that the form of the debate, including questions from the audience and a period in which each candidate will take turns as moderator, is designed to encourage lively, if not heated, discussion.

He's extremely civil, but still disobedient

By David Weber
Staff Writer

AUBURNDALE — Everett Blake was among approximately 400 people arrested last week for occupying the JFK Federal Building and was held overnight in a Lawrence prison.

"All of us were asked by the magistrate to give our name, social security number, address and date of birth. When it was my turn, I said in a loud voice, 'I was born January 3, 1901,' and everybody clapped," said Blake with a mischievous grin.

What makes an 84-year-old man sit on a cold concrete floor for about 12 hours ("got some sore bones from that"), only to be dragged across that floor ("like they did everybody else"), escorted into a waiting police van and shipped to Lawrence at 3 a.m., where he slept for about two hours on an Army cot ("I can't sleep once the sun comes up") before being booked on a misdemeanor charge?

"I like adventure and I'd do it again," he said, adding that he has to show up at the Federal Courthouse in Boston June 4 for arraignment on charges of failing to follow the directive of a federal officer.

Maximum penalty for the offense is 30 days in jail, a $50 fine and $25 special assessment. He was released Wednesday without bail on personal recognizance. "I'm supposed to be a good boy until June 4," he said.

But Blake sees the serious side to all this. "I feel the world is going to the dogs if we don't do something about it... I think the religion of Jesus compels us to do this. Love thy neighbor as thyself. From this background, I felt I had to do something," he said.

His background is that of a Congregationalist minister who spent 43 years in Turkey working as a missionary and educator. His wife, Lynda, 79, ran a small school for Turkish girls between the ages of 12 and 20. He taught English, algebra, philosophy and biology at the school.

"They went on to university from our school. One of my students is now teaching at Wellesley College and another teaches at UMass," he said.

The couple returned to the United States in 1971 and lived for a while in Waban before moving to Auburndale.

Blake calls himself a "liberal" who believes in civil disobedience "if the issue deserves it. I don't do it for everything." He said his activist views are a natural outgrowth of his religious background. "What good is it just to go listen to sermons about problems if you're not going to do anything about it," he said. In recent years, he has picketed Raytheon in Waltham and Draper Laboratories in Cambridge. "The nuclear problem is the biggest problem we have," he said.

Asked if his parents influenced his liberal outlook as he was growing up in Faribault, Minn., he first said "no," then paused for a moment and said, "Well, my mother was kind of wild. She took a trip to Hawaii in 1910." Who did she go with? "She went alone. Faribault was a pretty quiet town and she was looking for adventure," he said, smiling.

When he is not practicing civil disobedience, Blake and his wife are involved with food programs for the needy. Every Tuesday he goes to the Heartland Food Warehouse in Nonantum at 8 a.m., loads his Honda wagon with day-old baked goods and delivers them to the Warwick House in Roxbury.

On the first Monday of each month, he collects food from Protestant churches in the area and delivers them to another shelter in Roxbury. He also delivers food prepared by his wife to Rosie's Place, the women's shelter in Boston's South End.

> 'I like adventure and I'd do it again. I'm supposed to be a good boy until June 4.'
> Everett Blake

"That's what I do for recreation. Sometimes you get help carrying the food in from the neighborhood people. You meet lots of people and I enjoy it."

Blake also participates in a program called AIM (Aid to Incarcerated Mothers). He said he gets a call about once a month from the head of pre-release center for women in Lancaster, asking him to drive children of a prisoner into the center to see their mother.

Everett and Lynda Blake both enjoy good health (she recently completed the 10 kilometer Peace Walk in Wellesley) and he credits that to nothing in particular, except maybe "the good food, air and water in Turkey."

Everett Blake, 84, fresh from 'the slammer,' relaxes in his Auburndale home.

A sprightly Springfest '85

By Kevin C. Kennedy
News Editor

NEWTON — "Sidewalk Sam" proved there is a place for fine art in our everyday lives. Mayor Theodore Mann hinted that his estimable influence is not limited to the political sphere. John "Hondo" Havlicek proved that he has a VCR at home. And hundreds of happy Garden City residents proved that Springfest is a great way to ease out of the winter doldrums.

"Sidewalk Sam," a.k.a. Robert Guillemin, a Newton Corner resident who has earned the title "The Johnny Appleseed of Art" for his reproductions of the classics on sidewalks all over the world, plied his craft at the bottom of the City Hall steps, proving to all that he merits his moniker.

He recreated, with misleading ease, a 100-year-old masterpiece by Alexander Koester called "Feeding the Geese." Guillemin commented that the picture of two farm kids captured what he saw as "the spirit of Springfest."

Mayor Theodore D. Mann kicked off the celebration under grey skies with an invocation which hinted his influence extends further than anyone had ever contemplated. Standing on the steps of City Hall, Mann led the crowd in a chant: "Sun, come out!" The effect of Mann's maneuver was subtle, but it is a fact that not one raindrop fell on Guillemin's masterpiece until the sun had set and, as one organizer commented, "It actually got a bit brighter."

Langione's dance troupe stole the show with costumes and choreography that hinted at hundreds and hundreds of hours of hard work and preparation. State Rep. Susan Schur, helping her daughter Erica with her makeup before the show, was only one of dozens of mothers who showed up to attend to the all important last minute details.

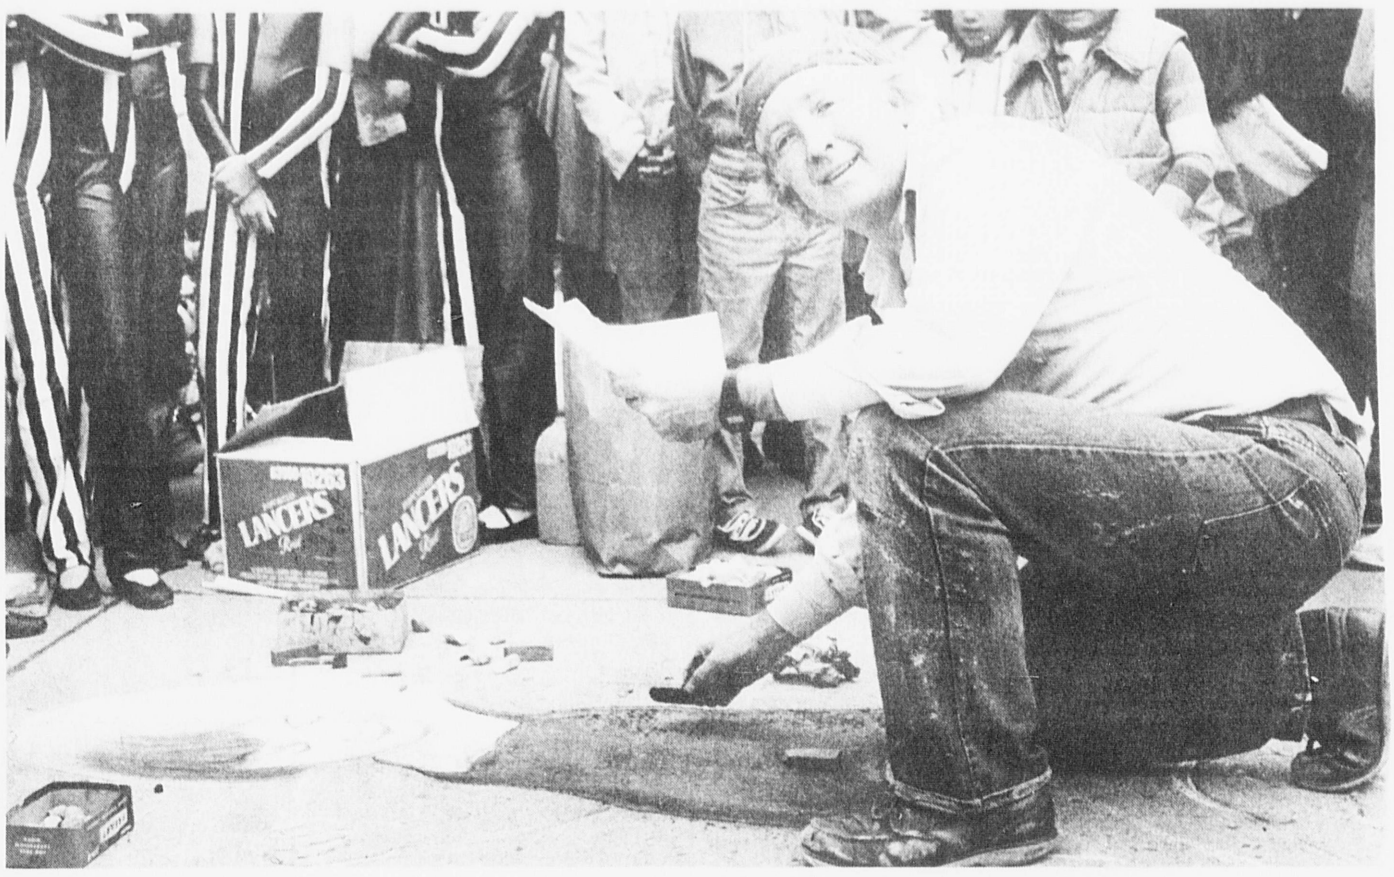

The older girls started things off with a slow, expressive number from the Broadway show "Purlie." The younger set followed with a rendition of Elvis' classic "Jailhouse Rock." Adaptations of "Sing, sing, sing" and other numbers suggested that Langione's dancers were just getting warmed up before they retired to a rousing round of applause.

Also served up as entertainment was a juggling exhibition by the high-spirited "Suspenders" and a display of the fine art of ju-jitsu by a group of martial artists headed up by Jim Castoldi.

Of course, the political possiblities of such a gathering in an election year did not elude some of the city's elected officials and, while Mayor Mann did some of his own "tub-thumping," Alderman Verne Vance and School Committee members Lynn Sullivan and Robert Ricles could be seen soliciting support for the fall election.

Springfest was the kind of event where 10-year-olds run around like possessed things, where Dads carry their toddlers around on their shoulders and everyone smiles and says "Hi."

Its organizers should be proud of their work, just as they should wonder how they are going to top this year's performance when the city shakes off the vestiges of the winter of '86.

Summer art offerings at Newton Music School

NEWTON — The All Newton Music School is offering a summer arts program for children ages five through eight. Innovative and original work will be created by children exploring and developing interests in area which lead to a lifelong enjoyment and fulfillment.

The program will be limited to 40 youngsters who will participate in music, drama, movement and fine arts classes, as well as swimming and various outdoor actiivities.

"Older children have the benefit of a great many local programs iding hands-on exposure to the arts," says Associate Director Paulette Bowes," but the only alternative for children this age really seems to be day care."

Director Andrew Wolf and Bowes are also planning a series of concerts and demonstrations for the young people. "We're arranging to have some first-class performances and demos," continues Bowes, "where a child might hear a flute being played, or see a pottor create something from a lump of clay for the first time and say 'Wow I want to do that!'."

The program is being staffed by professionals in the fields of art, music, dance and drama. The culmination of the planned three week camp session is an Art Festival Day, Thursday, July 25. Campers will share their works and perform for their parents and public.

The All Newton Music School Summer Arts program is working through the models of the Charles River Creative Arts Program in Dover and the Arts at Park program at the Park School in Brookline. For more information call 527-4553.

A mammogram can detect a cancer no larger than this dot. And when it's found that early, it's easy to treat and cure. It doesn't have to become a large problem, one that kills 37,000 women a year.
The American Cancer Society recommends that women between the ages of 35 and 39 – younger if there's a family history of breast cancer – have a baseline mammogram, and women 40 to 49 should have a mammogram every year or two. Once a woman reaches age 50, she should have one every year.
Consult your doctor, and then come to Precheck/The Mammography Center. We provide information and a comfortable, supportive atmosphere for a simple, safe mammogram. It's a small test that can make a big difference.

Link awarded Likely scholarship

NEWTON — Darlene Link, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Link of 286 Melrose St., Auburndale, has been awarded the Richard A. Likely Memorial Fund Scholarship. She is now attending Merrimack College in North Andover.

Richard A. Likely, son of Police Lt. and Mrs. John Likely of Auburndale, a 1968 graduate of Newton North, was killed in Vietnam on April 27, 1971.

Relatives and friends of Richard established a memorial foundation in his name and have contributed toward its funding. The amount of the award is derived from the interest on the fund.

Under the rules of the foundation, anyone under 21 who needs assistance in education in any area is eligible to apply. Please submit scholarship applications for future awards to Gill Sampson, 44 Newell Rd., Auburndale, MA, 02166.

Contributions to the memorial fund can be sent c/o to the Auburndale Cooperative Bank, 307 Auburn St., Auburndale, MA, 02166.

Recording outdoor events

By Gregg Howard
Copley News Service

Every year your children learn something new — how to swim, for instance, or how to hit a two-handed backhand. The thrill of a pony league uniform seems to make a new team member stand even taller.

These magic moments can't be repeated, and still photographs only freeze the action. A videotape preserves the event — and those winning smiles — "live" forever, according to Bob Burnett, a home videotaping expert at 3M, the company awarded an Emmy for inventing videocassette tape.

Making home video recordings outdoors requires special preparation and attention to a few simple details, according to Bob Burnett, a home videotaping expert at 3M, the company awarded an Emmy for inventing videocassette tape.

— Make sure you know the workings of your camera and portable recorder inside and out before you go out on the field. Practice a little in the back yard. Sports scenes happen fast, and you don't want to be fiddling with the white balance when a knuckle ball flashes past.

— Charge your battery the night before you plan to shoot. The battery powers both the recorder and the camera. If it's not up to full, you'll run out of time.

— Choose a high-grade name-brand tape that takes up to six hours of recording time. Your son may get into a tiebreaker. Or you may want to put the bush league ball game and your daughter's swimming meet on the same cassette.

— Bring a lens cap and keep it on when you're not using your camera. If you accidentally point the lens at the sun, it can burn out the tubes.

— Splurge on an inexpensive tripod. It will give you a steady platform to track your son running the bases. If you hand hold your camera for shots like these, the scene can look shaky.

In a tilt, the camera is moved in a vertical line from the top of the subject down or vice versa. Poised on a high dive, your daughter's body tension and concentration will be brought out by this camera technique.

In a tracking shot, you physically move the camera along the side of a moving object, Burnett said. Try walking down the sideline of a soccer field as your child passes the ball toward the goal. Other unusual shots are the dolly and the zoom. They're particularly good for catching expressions in a face. In a dolly, the camera itself is moved toward your child, while the zoom button on a camera causes the lens to close in tight.

Appliance clinic

Q. My 10-year-old, two-speed Westinghouse clothes washer has a soap build-up problem. What should I do?

A. First, remove the agitator by unscrewing the agitator cap. Check the inside of the agitator and the post in the machine for soap deposits or residue, and scrape off as much as possible. A plastic pot-scouring pad or popsicle sticks work well. Then replace the agitator.

To clean out the washer tub, fill it with hot water, add one cup of non-precipitating water conditioner, such as Calgon, Spring Rain or Miracle White, plus a cup of ammonia. With nothing else in the machine, run the washer through a complete cycle. You may have to repeat the process.

To get soapy film out of clothing, fill the washer with warm water, add one cup of conditioner and ammonia, and then the soiled clothes. Complete a normal wash and dry procedure.

Q. My Canadian General Electric dryer has a problem with its timer switch. The automatic cycles for delicate or permanent press don't work. It seems to fail in advance. How to I correct the problem?

A. The problem may be that you dryer is suffering from an open heat compensating resistor around the thermostat probe.

To check the resistor, disconnect the power from the dryer. Open the door and remove the four Phillips-head screws under the front lid of the top panel. Loosen the two hexhead screws near the bottom of the front panel, one on each side, which attach it to the cabinet.

Pull the top forward and lift it up, back, and away from the front. Now remove the ¼-inch hexhead screws near the top that hold the front panel in place, and take off the panel.

A black box behind the panel is the thermostat. From this box a probe or thin wire runs down into the lower part of the front panel. Around the probe is the resistor. It is shaped like a hollow sleeve into which the thermostat probe fits.

The resistor is held in place with a clamp, and is connected to two wires. Disconnect these two wires and check the resistor with a continuity meter. The resistance should be about 400 ohms.

If it is defective, a replacement part can be gotten in Canada from Camco Inc., a service part store, or from General Electric in the United States.

Newsmakers

Daniel R. Coquillette, a partner in Boston law firm of Palmer & Dodge, has been named Dean of the Boston College Law School.

Coquillette's appointment was announced by Rev. J. Donald Monan, SJ, president of Boston College.

Coquillette, 41, of Cambridge, Mass., earned his undergraduate degree at Williams College, studied law at University College, Oxford University, England, where he received a B.A. and an M.A., and earned his J.D. at Harvard Law School.

Daniel R. Coquillette

He will assume the position on July 1, succeeding Richard G. Huber, who has announced his retirement at the completion of the academic year. Huber has served as Dean of the Boston College Law School since 1970.

The Boston College Law School, located on Boston College's Newton Campus at 885 Centre St., Newton, was founded in 1929. An enrollment of 840 students is served by some 40 full-time faculty members.

Carole Capalbo of Newton has been appointed Sales Operations Manager for MIRA, Inc., a manufacturer of ophthalmic surgical and diagnostic instruments. Capalbo will be responsible for all direct sales force and distributor sales support in both the U.S. and Canada.

Capalbo, a native of Newton, joined MIRA in 1984 as Sales Coordinator. Prior to joining MIRA, Capalbo was employed by BSI, Inc., an office equipment manufacturer, where she was the sales coordinator for their dealer network.

Bank of New England, N.A., in Boston, recently appointed Anna Faith Jones of Newton to its board of directors, increasing the number of board members to 15. Jones is the director of the Boston Foundation, which has an endowment of $120 million and is the largest community charitable fund in New England.

Jones is a graduate of Wellesley College and has a master's degree from Columbia University. She joined the Boston Foundation, then the Permanent Charity Fund, in 1974, and previously served as its associate director and acting director.

Newton Rotary Club President-Elect Thomas R. Jackson presented the "Paul Harris Fellow" Certificate to Rotarian John B. Gregorian. This certificate, issued in honor of the founder of Rotary International, signifies a substantial donation to the Rotary Foundation, which finances study abroad by young scholars worldwide. The aim of this program is to promote understanding and friendly relations among nations.

David A. Lurensky, a resident of Newton, has been elected an Honorary Trustee for Life by the unanimous vote of the Board of Trustees of Temple Sinai, Brookline. Lurensky served as an officer and/or Trustee from the inception of Temple Sinai when it was founded in 1939 through 1971.

From 1939-1942 Lurensky served as a full-time founding executive secretary, assisting the late Rabbi Beryl D. Cohon in the founding of Temple Sinai. Thereafter, he served as a trustee, assistant treasurer and from 1956-1968 as administrative secretary. He retired from the board in 1971. Since 1976, he has served as Secretary of the Board of Governors of the Rabbi Beryl D. Cohon Memorial Lecture Fund.

Lurensky is active in civic affairs, having served 15 years on the City of Newton Planning & Development Board and 10 years on local board of U.S. Selective Service.

Newton resident Arnold Z. Rosoff, founder and chief executive officer of Arnold & Company Advertising, was elected honorary director of Boston Aid to the Blind, at that organization's April board meeting.

Called by the organization's President Robert Freedman "one of Boston Aid to the Blind's most faithful supporters," Rosoff has served on the Board for over 10 years. Rosoff also sits on the Board of Trustees for Beth Israel Hospital, the President's Council at Brandeis University, and the Board of Directors for the Combined Jewish Philanthropies.

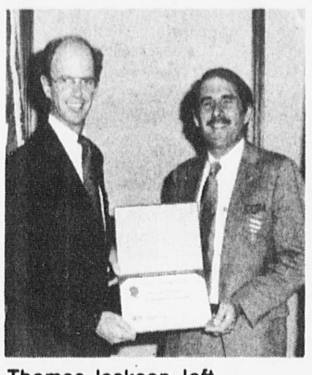

Mary Mahon, of Newton, was chosen as academic counselor at Chamberlayne Junior College last fall. Mahon was offered the position following work on a master's degree in counseling psychology and a year's internship at Chamberlayne. As academic counselor, Mahon is responsible for assisting and scheduling courses, helping students choose their majors, and running a peer tutoring system for students who need extra help with their studies.

Margaret A. McCloskey of Newton was recently elected to membership in the Boston Chapter of the National Association of Accountants.

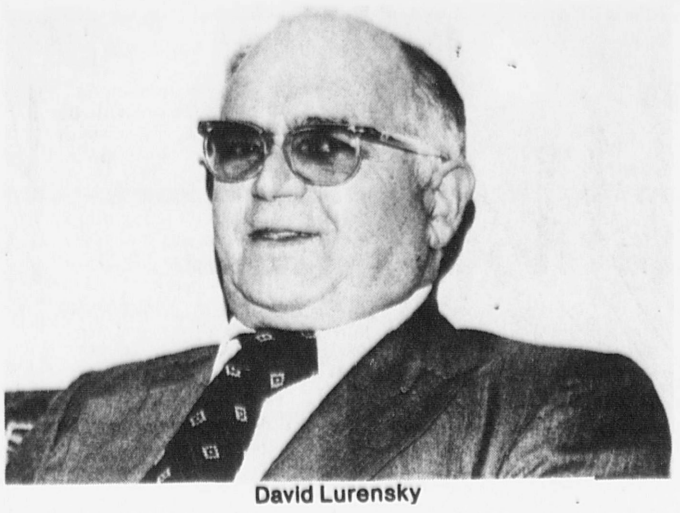

The National Association of Accountants is the world's largest management accounting organization with over 95,000 members worldwide, affiliated with 345 Chapters. The Boston Chapter is the oldest of these, chartered in 1920, and is among the largest with approximately 900 members.

Regis College is pleased to announce the appointment of Deborah Mayerson of Newton to the position of Director of Public Information.

Mayerson has been the Assistant to the Director of

David Lurensky

Public Information since last September. Before that she was the editor of the employee newsletter at AT&T Consumer Products. Mayerson is currently completing a master's degree in Communication Management at Simmons Colelge, Boston.

Betty Taymor, of Newton, was elected Secretary of the Northeast Region of the Democratic National Committee on May 3 in New York City. The Northeast Region includes the fourteen states on the eastern seaboard.

Taymor has been a member of the Democratic National Committee since 1976 and a member of the Democratic State Committee since 1956. She has served on numerous national Party commissions and was appointed by both Presidents Kennedy and Johnson to the U.S. National Commission to UNESCO.

Newtonville resident Carolyn Taylor has joined the staff of Lasell Junior College, Newton, as an admissions counselor.

Ms. Taylor holds a bachelor of arts degree in sociology from the State University of New York at Purchase, and formerly served as a services coordinator at Arrowood in Westchester, New York. She is a native of Armonk, New York.

Michael Frieze has been named chairman of the New England Region of the American Society for Technion--Israel Institute of Technology.

Frieze, president of Gordon Brothers Corp. of Newton, has been active in the society and served previously as chairman of the New England Region's committee and as 1984 annual dinner chairman.

Michael Crocetta of Newton has been appointed to the new position of marketing director for MIRA, Inc., a manufacturer of ophthalmic diagnostic and surgical instruments.

Crocetta will direct marketing and sales for IMEX, the Company's retinal implants and exoplants and for its surgical diathermy units. He will also supervise the MIRA market research department.

Crocetta holds a Master of Science in Cell Physiology from The University of Vermont and a Bachelor of Science degree from Tufts University.

Newton resident Dr. Arnold D. Vetstein, president of the Massachusetts Dental Society, completed his term of office during the Society's 121st Annual Session held April 26-28.

Dr. Vetstein is a fellow of the American College of Dentists and the International College of Dentists and a member of American Kappa Upsilon Dental Honor Society.

A West Newton resident, Thomas A. Medaglia, has been appointed as Adjutant General for the up-coming Newton Veterans' Council Memorial Day Observances and annual parade advises Saul Klashman, President of the Newton Veterans' Council.

Long active in Newton veterans affairs, Medaglia is a past commander of Sgt. Eugene J. Daley, Jr., Post No. 2384, Veterans of Foreign Wars as well as a past commander of Nonantum Post 440 American Legion where he presently serves as a member of the Executive Committee. Medaglia has also served as a vice president of the Newton Veterans' Council and is presently a delegate to that organization.

Regis College is proud to announce that Nancy Concannon, a Waban resident and senior vice-president of John Hancock Life Insurance Co. and chairperson of the Regis College Board of Trustees, is this year's recipient of the College's Alumnae Achievement Award.

Ms. Concannon graduated from Regis College in 1946,

receiving a B.A. in sociology. She continued her education at Boston University and Radcliffe and completed the Executive Management Program at Penn State University.

Last year, Ms. Concannon was cited in Boston Magazine as a stand out woman in Boston's corporate world.

Concannon will receive her Alumnae Achievement Award at the 1985 Regis College Baccalaureate Ceremony on May 18 at 4 p.m. in the Tower Gardens.

Resident named Aid for Blind director

NEWTON — Newton resident Arnold Z. Rosoff, founder and chief executive officer of Arnold & Company Advertising, was elected honorary director of Boston Aid to the Blind, at that organization's April board meeting.

Called by the organization's President Robert Freedman "one of Boston Aid to the Blind's most faithful supporters," Rosoff has served on the Board for over 10 years. Rosoff also sits on the Board of Trustees for Beth Israel Hospital, the President's Council at Brandeis University, and the Board of Directors for the Combined Jewish Philanthropies.

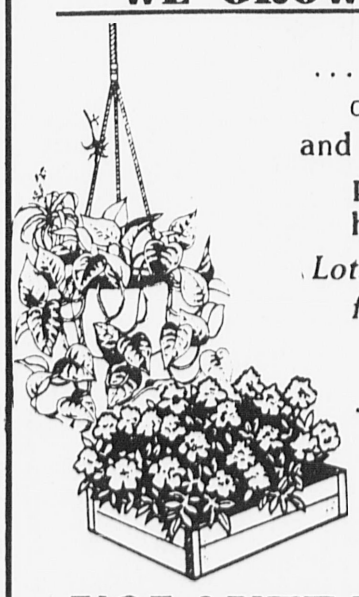

Among his professional affliations, Rosoff is a past president of the Advertising Club of Greater Boston, and the former governor of the National Academy of Television Arts and Sciences, Boston/New England Chapter.

Rosoff is a resident of Newton Highlands, and is the husband of the former Billie L. Tanner. He is a 1939 graduate of Harvard University.

Multi-Service Center needs volunteers

Volunteer opportunities for Newton residents are being offered by the Newton-Wellesley-Weston-Needham Multi-Service Center, an agency providing counseling help to adolescents. The Multi-Service Center staff is now interviewing applicants availble 3 p.m. - 7 p.m. on Tuesdays or 6 p.m. - 10 p.m. on Thursdays, to counsel female clients of the agency's adolescent health clinic. Volunteers to be honored at luncheon

NEWTON — Isabel Coleman and Fr. Anthony Moore will be honored for their work with senior citizens at the annual Senior Citizens Luncheon, to be held on May 15 at Post 440.

Coleman's volunteer work began in Newton in 1949, when she took responsibility for senior health and hospitality at the Pomeroy House Community Center. In 1969, she was appointed to the Newton Community Service Center Board of Directors, at the inception of the Council on Aging.

She was on the committee for the first senior luncheon, held at the Newtonville Methodist Church, and she invited Mayor Howard Whitmore to be the first volunteer waiter. Since then, every luncheon has had volunteer waiters drawn from department heads, business leaders, clergy and elected officials.

She is still associated with the Pomeroy House as a director, the Newton YMCA as president of the Women's Auxiliary and the scholarship fund, Action for Mental Health, the Newton Guidance Clinic, the Newton Health Advisory Board, the Newton Community Development Human Services Advisory Committee, Grace Church Sunday School, the Retired Senior Volunteer Program and the Underwood and Bigelow PTA's.

Fr. Anthony Moore

According to Mayor Theodore Mann, "Isabel has been so busy she hasn't had time to grow older and is long overdue for recognition for so many jobs well done."

Born in London, England, Fr. Anthony Moore arrived late to his vocation in the Church, having served in the R.A.F. and earned degrees in history, politics and economics at several European universities. Before he entered the seminary in 1944, he worked as secretary to the senior vice-president of Chase Manhatten Bank.

His first assignment as a priest was on the Isle of Jersey, in the English Channel. After 10 years there, he was assigned to St. Bernard's Parish in West Newton. Besides his duties at St. Bernard's and an active athletic life that has led him into hiking and mountain climbing, Fr. Moore has served on the Newton Senior Citizens Luncheon Committee, the city's Council on Aging and the Mayor's Prayer Breakfast Committee.

He has regularly conducted walking tours of the city, including a tour of seven of the city's churches on Good Friday afternoon. For the past three years, Fr. Moore has completed the 20-mile "Walk for Hunger."

Day camp registration

NEWTON — With the opening of registration for the Newton Community Service Centers, Inc. popular summer Day Camps accommodating children 2.9 to 12 years of age came a flurry of interest.

Registrations are taken each day Monday through Friday at the center's main office at 492 Waltham St., West Newton during the hours of 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

In commenting on the Day Camp serving boys and girls ages 6.5 to 12 years of age, Nicholas Siciliano, camp director, said the centers will continue to operate the program at the Sever Hale Camping Reservation in Westwood. The location utilized by the centers for the past 19 years, moves into its 20th season noting that in excess of 6,650 youngsters while residents of Newton have experienced the joy of a summer at Hale Reservation.

The program includes swimming instruction and free swim, arts & crafts, hikes, fishing, archery, canoeing, sailing for approved participants, rowing, physical fitness, cookouts, folk singing, overnights and many other activities initiating by staff and children's input.

Junior camp for boys and girls 2.9 to 12 years of age, under the direction of Patti Place, will again be held on the grounds of the Newton Country Day School of the Sacred Heart, Newton Centre. The semi-wooded, hilly lawns provide space to explore and participate in a variety of outdoor activities and yet the campus is entirely fenced to ensure safety. The gymnasium, art rooms, and other rooms allow for an all-weather program.

The curriculum consists of developmentally appropriate activities in four areas. Each day the children participate in arts & crafts activities and indoor motor pool play in the gymnasium. In the four-foot deep pool, children over the age of three are provided with swimming lessons by a certified Water Safety instructor who specializes in the training of young campers.

In keeping with its commitment to be responsive to the needs of the community, the centers offers extended hours for both camps. Campers may be enrolled for any of the following time slots: 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., 7:30 a.m. to 4 p.m., 7:30 a.m. to 6 p.m., or 9 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Transportation to and from local elementary schools is available upon request.

Cantabs nip Tiger trackmen

NEWTON — The fastest 4x110 relay of the year for Newton North wasn't enough as the Tigers lost to Cambridge Rindge and Latin on Tuesday, 73-67, to virtually assure the Cantabs of the Suburban League title. Cambridge went to 4-0 with the win, while North fell to 2-2.

The meet could have turned around on any number of events, but it finally came down to the relay. Cambridge's quartet of Patrick Sylvain, Lance Campbell, Karim Saunders and Sean Belfast sped to a 44.2, just four-tenths of a second ahead of the Tiger team.

Rob Gheewalla, Peter Bourland, John Carpenter and Rich Forrest turned in a 44.6, their best of the year, but it wasn't quite enough. Belfast, who anchored the Cantab relay, was fifth in the state in the Coaches' Meet in the 100, but Forrest stayed right with him. Unfortunately, Forrest couldn't cut into the slim lead that Belfast had when he got the baton.

Belfast and Saunders also came through in the long jump and triple jump, respectively, winning those events by coming through on their final attempts.

The Tigers had another shot to win the meet in the 220, which David Gates appeared to have locked up, but he reinjured his hip muscle and had to drop out.

North did get some other outstanding performances. Jay Scott had his best throw ever in the shot put, taking second. John Redmon cleared 10 feet in the pole vault for another second, while David Vento high jumped 5-10. He lost out when the Cambridge competitor had fewer misses.

Gheewalla and Geoff Drew both sailed over 19 feet in the long jump, while the consistent Bourland turned in a 16.1 to win the high hurdles.

The Tigers host Brookline on Friday.

In the State Coaches Relays on Saturday in Brockton, Vento raced for third in the 330 low hurdles, overcoming a few bad steps to pull in at 39.4.

Vento's timing between hurdles was slightly off but the veteran trackster held his composure and pulled in with a medal.

Also for North, Carpenter tossed the javelin 150 feet and Forrest ran 24.1 in the 200-meter race. Neither trackster advanced. North's mile relay was pulled because Vento was feeling ill after his race.

State Coaches Meet

Newton North senior David Vento raced for third in the 330 low-hurdles Saturday at the State Coaches Relays, overcoming a few bad steps to pull in at 39.4.

Vento's timing between hurdles was slightly off but the veteran trackster held his composure and pulled in with a medal.

Also for North, senior John Carpenter tossed the javelin 150-feet and senior Rich Forrest ran 24.1 in the 200-meter race. Neither trackster advanced. North's mile relay was pulled because Vento was feeling ill after his race.

For Newton South, senior Co-Captain Benji Hochberger missed a few steps and hit a hurdle, thus dropping him six-tenths of a second under the top ten with a 40.6 finish.

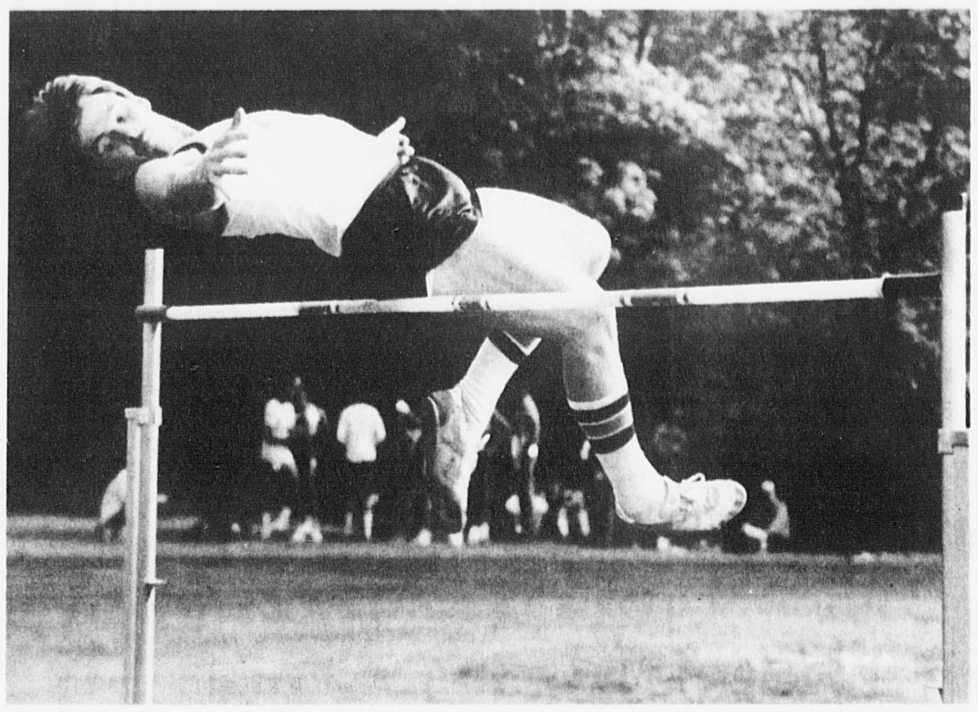

South's mile relay missed scoring by three seconds as senior Jeff Portnoy (52.7 leg), senior Ted Trevens, and juniors Micah Lowenthal and Illir Toplalli turned in a 3:37.1.

Portnoy also ran in the 880, coming in fourth in his heat at 2:01.5.

North staves off Cambridge nine

Newton North jumped out to a 5-0 lead and then hung on to defeat Cambridge Rindge and Latin, 5-4, at Ferguson Field on Monday. The Tigers scored three times in the first and added a pair in the second before watching the Cantabs almost come all the way back.

In the initial frame, the home club rapped four hits to take a 3-0 lead. Artie Aaron started it off with a single, and, after a stolen base, wound up coming home on Greg Larson's single. Mike Solomon doubled to score Larson, and tallied on Alex DeNucci's safety.

Aaron again ignited the Tigers in the second with a single and a stolen base. Bob Martin chased him home with a hit, and came around when the Cantabs misplayed Larson's single.

Cambridge made things real uncomfortable for North with two runs in the sixth, after picking up a pair of singletons earlier. An error and a walk enabled the Cantabs to begin the rally. Don Ferry singled to load the bases for Vinnie Foderingham, who singled in a run. Jamie Holway's sacrifice fly made it 5-4, but that's as close as the visitors would get.

Martin got the win for North with six innings, while Ray Gladu picked up the save with one inning of work. Gladu helped himself with a nice play on a line drive to start a game-ending double play.

Brockton prevails

A controversial decision went against Newton North on Friday and it cost the Tigers a ballgame, their first league loss of the season. North is now 3-1 in the Suburban League and 9-3 overall after the 7-6 loss in nine innings to Brockton.

The Boxers led off the final frame with a single by Mike Slammene, only the second hit allowed by Tom Casey in three innings of relief work. The next hitter reached on an error, putting runners at the corners with nobody out.

The strangeness started with two strikes on Pat Boen, as he attempted to suicide squeeze the winning run home. He missed for strike three, as Slammene was barreling home. The runner put on the brakes, as catcher Colin Ryan began chasing him back. Slammene finally broke into foul territory, dodged Ryan's tag, and scampered home. The Newton bench immediately claimed that the runner had gone out of the baseline, but the umpire let the run stand and the game was history.

After playing to a 5-5 tie in regulation, the teams had matched runs in the eighth. North picked up a marker in the top half when Bob Martin singled in Artie Aaron (single).

Greg McMurty got his club even in the bottom half with a solo homer to deep right.

The baserunning play ruined a nice comeback by North. the Tigers came up with two runs in the sixth to erase a 5-3 Boxer lead. Martin and Larson drove in markers with basehits, with another potential run wiped out at the plate on a great throw from the outfield by Sherrod Rainge.

The Tigers got a big effort from Larson, who included his sixth homer among his three hits, a solo shot to lead off the second, and pitched three shutout innings in relief.

North was without shortstop and leading hitter Jim Proia, who was recently hospitalized with an ulcer. He may not be back this season. The Boxers were also hurt by the injury bug, as catcher Peter Marciano dislocated a shoulder on Friday.

Gift from Quincy

With a 6-0 lead after two innings, the high-flying Newton North Tigers were well on their way to a rout. But a funny thing happened on the way to their ninth victory.

Visiting Quincy used five pitchers over five innings, exhausting the bench, and did not have enough players to finish the game. North took a 7-2 decision after a fifth-inning forfeit by Quincy at home Thursday in Suburban League action.

Under league rules a player can not be taken from the game and return at random, which was the point of disagreement between North coach Dick Walker and Quincy headman Tom Fitzgerald.

"In the Suburban League we don't have unlimited substitution or re-entry," explained Walker. "We do allow the hidden ball. The Quincy coaches think there is re-entry and no hidden ball."

Walker said Fitzgerald had brought up the point of re-entry and substitution during the pre-game conference with the umpires and the matter seemed cleared up. Apparently not.

"They (Quincy) made wholesale changes with their pitchers," Walker said. "In the bottom of the fifth they couldn't legally field a team. He (Fitzgerald) had to take his last pitcher out of the game because of a sore arm."

As far as the game goes, Walker said the score stands as it is.

A four-run second inning had put North on top 6-0 and that was all she wrote. Chuck Prioa walked to lead-off the inning and Artie Aaron singled to put men on first and second. Aldo Calcagni singled home Proia and Aaron also scored on the play, coming in on an error. Bob Martin singled home Calcagni from third and later in the inning, Alex DeNucci drove home a run with a single.

The summary:

NEWTON NORTH(5)-Aaron 2-2, Martin 4-1, Larson 3-2, C. Ryan 3-0, Solomon 3-1, DeNucci 3-1, Casey 3-0, B. Ryan 3-1, Calcagni 3-1. Tot. 27-9.

Newton South stickmen lead division

WAYLAND — Newton South remained in first place in Division II South lacrosse with a 9-5 victory over Wayland on Monday. It was the Lions' third league win without a defeat.

The visitors waltzed out to a 5-1 lead after the first quarter and were never really threatened. Dave Kowal had two of the five goals, finishing with three on the day.

It took the Lions only minute to get on the scoreboard, as Matt Ranen took a pass from Peter Murphy and found the twine. After Kowal got his first, Whitney Dorf (from Dave Abrams) made it 3-0 at 3:35.

Wayland answered with a goal, but South wasn't through. Kowal scored again and then assisted on Garth Bloch's tally to make it 5-1.

Scott Passman later added two goals, while Ranen scored another. Steve Alter had a pair of assists.

The Lions got good efforts on defense from junior goalie Alex Levine (15 saves) and defenseman Scott Katz.

Bop Acton-Boxboro

The Lions roared out to an 8-2 lead by halftime on Friday and never looked back as Newton South belted Acton-Boxboro, 12-4, in boys' lacrosse. Dave Kowal, Peter Murphy and Steve Alter each scored twice in the early Lion surge. Kowal, Alter and Matt Ranen all finished with hat tricks in the game.

The victory enabled South to take first place away from the Colonials in Division II South.

"We're happy to be here," said Lion coach Paul Murphy later.

Ranen got the winners going three minutes into the game. Kowal picked up a pair of goals inside four minutes and the Lions led by three after a period.

After the visitors sandwiched two goals around Alter's score early in the second, South ran off four unanswered goals to take charge. Peter Murphy began and ended the run, with Ranen assisting on both scores. Ranan picked up four assists in the first half alone.

Junior goalie Alex Levine made 15 saves in holding off the Colonials.

Now 6-3 overall, South plays Wayland today.

North slips

Newton North had Brookline on the ropes but couldn't put the Indians away on Friday, and it proved costly as the Indians took a 10-7 victory.

The Tigers were up, 5-2, at one point in the first half, and took 27 shots before intermission.

"We just didn't put the ball in the cage," said North coach Rick Clark. "We dominated the game but didn't put it away...We were lazy...That's the bottom line."

Despite a letdown, North still clung to 5-4 lead at halftime and was in the ballgame at 8-6 after three.

Late in the contest, the Tigers tried to make up some ground by doubling up on the ball, but they didn't execute and the Indians took advantage of the open man to put the contest away.

"Our mental mistakes were unbelievable," North's disappointed coach said.

The lone bright spot for the Tigers was Tom Dalicandro. He had only one goal, but his all-around play was "outstanding," according to Clark. "He's playing great," said the coach of the senior midfielder, who has been appointed an honorary captain because of the leadership he has provided.

Other Newton goals went to John Boudreau (two), Dan Nardone, Paul Healey, Charlie Albanese and Pat Poon.

The Tigers are 7-4 overall and still 2-0 in the league. Their next league contest is against Framingham North Friday.

Judd's bat ignites Lions over Bedford

NEWTON — Judd Cohen had two hits to spark Newton South to an 11-run fourth inning as the Lions hammered Bedford, 15-0, in Dual County League baseball on Monday at South. Cohen finished with three hits in as many trips during the game, while Jon Glick and Chris Pappas combined to twirl a five-hit shutout.

Glick was rolling along with a 3-0 lead before his teammates exploded in the fourth. Cohen ignited the rally with a single, and would later repeat the feat in the inning.

After Darvell Huffman walked, Mark Maiocca rapped a basehit to make it 4-0. The parade was just beginning.

Greg Manthei (single), Steve Stoller (error) and Cohen (single) all reached base before Gary Collins and Huffman capped the rally with doubles. The final run came home when Maiocca grounded out.

Huffman, Maiocca, Altman and Thirumalaisamy each drove in two runs in the contest.

Glick went five innings to pick up the win, only throwing 45 pitches. Pappas finished up.

South surprised

Fresh off a big win over Weston, Newton South was surprised by Concord-Carlisle in Dual County League play on Friday, 7-3, in Concord.

The Patriots came up with three runs in the sixth to put a 4-3 ballgame out of reach. Singles by Cameron McKennitt and Dave Pura, along with a Newton South error, accounted for the three markers.

Concord-Carlisle took a 3-1 lead after two innings, and the best the Lions could do after that was get back to 4-3, when Greg Manthei beat out an infield hit and scored on Gary Collins' double.

Patriot pitching held South's Steve Altman hitless, the first time that trick has been turned all season. Altman is still hitting .421.

Altman connects

Kevin Houlihan allowed only one hit and Darvell Huffman provided the offensive support by figuring in all the scoring as Newton South blanked Wayland, 4-0, in a Dual County League baseball contest on Wednesday.

Houlihan, a hard-throwing senior righthander, fanned six and walked six in winning his third decision against one defeat. The only safety for the Warriors was a clean single to center in the fifth inning by Steve Johnson.

Huffman, a senior outfielder, scored what proved to be the winning run and drove in the next three. In the third, he walked, stole second, and cruised home on Steve Altman's hit.

In the next inning, his fly ball plated Steve Stoller, who had walked and swiped second and third.

Huffman's two-run single in the sixth accounted for the rest of the scoring.

Cullins, Bellevue fire North girls

CAMBRIDGE — It was a breeze through the park for the Newton North softballers Monday as the crunched home team Cambridge, Rindge & Latin, 10-1, on two-hit pitching by Sharon Cullins and Michelle Bellevue.

Cullins, a senior righthander, started the game and tossed four innings of one-hit, shutout ball before giving way to Bellevue, who finished up. Noreen Tucker connected for both Cambridge hits.

North increased on a 1-0 lead after two innings with a five-run burst in the third. Jackie Kinsella led the frame off with a triple to left-center and scored on a Robin Silver single. Wendy Rogers singled, and Beth Morahan walked one out later to load the bases. Jen Quigley emptied them in a hurry with a triple of her own and scored on a Diane Tormey base hit.

North edged

Undefeated Brockton threw a curve at Newton North and the Tigers missed, falling 8-3 at home.

Four runs by Brockton in the fifth secured the victory, the sixth league win in as many tries. A bases-loaded triple by Liz Garner and an RBI single by Lynn Payson accounted for the winning runs.

North had tied the contest, 2-2, just a half an inning before, capitalizing on a Beth Morahan RBI single and a Nuala Horkin fielder's choice that scored a run.

Morahan hit her first home run of the season in the sixth inning to round out the scoring.

Kinsella slugs

Veteran shortstop Jackie Kinsella turned in a perfect performance at the plate and drove home seven runs to lead the host Newton North Tigers to an astounding 22-6 stomping of Brookline in Suburban League softball.

Kinsella, a senior, connected for two singles, a triple, and a home run in four plate appearances. Also perfect on the day was junior Robin Silver, who beat out a pair of singles and cracked a two-run triple in three trips.

Jackie Kinsella supplies punch for Tigers.

North trailed in the game, 2-0, after one inning but Kinsella quickly took care of the problem in the third, smashing a three-run homer in the inning to put the Tigers on top to stay.

Six North runs in the third inning did Brookline in. Freshman Diane Tormey walked with the bases stacked to score the first and a Sharon Cullen bloop single plated two more runs. Kinsella then added her triple, knocking two runners in, and scored herself on an overthrow. All in all, North sent nine batters to the plate in the inning.

Cullins, a senior, pitched the entire game for Newton North, earning the win. The righthander improves her record to 4-1.

For Brookline, senior Ruth Lamprey drove in three runs with a triple and a home run, a solo-shot deep to straight-away center in the fifth.

Lamprey, also an outstanding basketball player, will attend Georgia Tech next year on a full basketball scholarship.

Frank Battista turns slugger for Newton Catholic.

Lancers bow to Hudson Catholic

HUDSON — Hudson Catholic put together a pair of three-run innings to down Newton Catholic, 6-5, in a Catholic Suburban League game Saturday.

Control trouble helped put Lancer starter John Canning in trouble from the beginning, as he surrendered a single and two walks before Mike O'Keefe roped a base-clearing double for a 3-0 Hudson lead.

Newton immediately began clipping away at that, eventually taking a 5-3 edge. Canning got things going himself in the second when he reached on an error. Four walks resulted in a 3-2 ballgame.

Another walk figured in tying the game in the third, as Jeff Sherman drew a free pass, stole second and scored on Canning's double.

The Lancers finally went ahead with a pair (without any help) in the fourth. Nick Abruzzi singled and came around on Frank Battista's triple to right-center. Battista trotted home on Sherman's basheit.

Like the first inning, Hudson's fifth featured one big blow that killed the Lancers. A couple of bloop hits set the stage for John Fitzgerald, who blasted one long and deep to left for a three-run homer.

Newton Catholic fell to 9-5 overall and 7-5 in the league.

Battista homers twice

Sophomore shortstop Frank Battista clouted two home runs to pace Newton Catholic to a 10-3 Catholic Suburban League baseball victory over St. Columbkille's at Cabot Park.

Battista led off the third with a shot to center that kept rolling and made the score 3-0. He followed that up with a three-run blast in the sixth that went to right-center. They were the first two round-trippers of Battista's high school career.

The Lancers wasted no time in jumping on the visitors. Winning pitcher Nick Abruzzi led off the first with a triple and cruised home on Jeff Sherman's single. Sherman wound up making it 2-0 when he scored on an error.

The Lancers made it 6-0 in the third. After Battista's shot, Sherman walked, stole second and scored what proved to be the winning run on John Canning's hit. Canning added an RBI single in the sixth.

Abruzzi went five strong innings, allowing one unearned run for the win. Sherman finished up, fanning five while allowing only a single hit.

Concord handcuffs South softballers

CONCORD — The Newton South Lions left their bats at home Monday against Concord-Carlisle, thus dropping an 8-4 decision on the road.

South managed just six hits off Concord hurler Eileen Farren, scoring one run in the fourth, two in the fifth, and one in the seventh. South Coach Larry Caranfa is used to his team collecting at least 10 runs a game, and being held to four scores was quite a shock.

"We didn't hit the ball well," Caranfa said. "That's the first team that's held us under five runs. We average more than 10 a game."

Dede Theodore and Katrina Antonellis had two hits each to account for the South offfense.

Antonellis also had a good day defensively, making several nice plays at short stop.

South, 8-5 in the Dual County League and 10-5 overall, host Lincoln-Sudbury on Wednesday at 3:30 p.m. South needs just two more wins in five remaining contests to qualify for the tournament.

Lions rally, 21-20

After building up a 17-0 lead after four innings, the Newton South softballers needed one extra frame to pull out a 21-20 win over visiting Boston Latin Friday in Dual County League action.

Sandy Bonazolli took ball four on a loaded count with the bases stacked to force in the winning run with two out in the bottom of the eighth. With two gone, singles by Katrina Antonellis, Stacy Hackell, and Jessica Olansky loaded the bases to set-up Bonazolli.

South had hammered Latin for 14 fourth-inning runs to blast out to a more than comfortable 17-0 lead but Latin shot back with 10 runs in the fifth and added seven in the sixth to tie the score. Three runs by Boston Latin in the seventh put South on the low side of the score for the first time in the game with only one turn at bat left.

A three-run home run by Jennifer Lerman in the bottom of the seventh tied the match and sent it into overtime. With one out, Stacy Baumberg walked and Bonazolli reached on an error before Lerman stepped up and laced her first round tripper of the season to knot the score.

Dede Theodore smashed a grand slam homer and Stacy Hackell smoked a three-run job in South's big 14-run fourth inning. Susan Fallon responded for Latin with a three-run homer in the sixth to spark a 10-run outburst.

Netminder

Junior Debbie Bernheimer of Waban compiled an 85.5 save percentage as goalie of the Williams College women's ice hockey team. With 265 saves, and only 45 goals allowed in 11 games, she helped lead the team to a 6-6 record. The 1982 Newton South High School graduate is shown with Coach Dave Scheibe. She is the daughter of Wally and Roz Bernheimer of 75 Winslow Rd., Waban.

Hochberger track star

CONCORD — Ben Hochberger continued his impressive performance this season as he led the Newton South track team to its second straight win on Thursday, a 96½-47½ decision over Concord-Carlisle. Hochberger accomplished personal bests in the high jump (5-10) and high hurdles (15.2), winning both events. The senior tri-captain also picked up third in the shot put.

Bob Hsiung had his best day ever to aid the South victory. His personal best of 19-1 won the long jump. He also turned in a personal best in the 200 for one of his three seconds.

Coach Chris Omeltchenko was pleased with several underclassmen. Freshman T.J. Rhone picked up a second and two thirds, while sophomore Russ Kane collected his first two wins of the season, taking the triple jump and 200. He also was second in the long jump.

The distance events, a problem spot for the Lions most of the season, turned around in this meet, as Mike Silverstein won the mile and Len Nyberg the two-mile.

The 2-4 Lions will send Hochberger, Jeff Portnoy and a mile relay team to the Coaches' Meet in Brockton on Saturday. They finish the dual-meet season on Monday at Lincoln-Sudbury.

Burke cops racquetball titles

Janet Burke of Newton Highlands placed first in both the 16 and 18-year-old divisions at the Northeast Regional Racquetball championships held at the Boston Athletic Club on May 4 and 5.

Burke accomplished her goal of a double regional championship by defeating players from Connecticut and New Hampshire in the 16-year-old division, along with a 15-4, 15-1 thrashing of Canada's Natalie Bernard.

She won the 18-year-old title by defeating the Canadian national champion, Sonia Tardiff, in a rematch of last year's championship round. After going to a three-game tie-breaker for the title last year, Burke defeated Tardiff impressively, 15-9 and 15-11.

Burke could garner an unprecedented four championships in the 18-year-old bracket over the next two years of competition.

In 1981, Burke won the 13 and under title on her first attempt. The following year she placed second, losing to Laura Remries of Connecticut. 1983 saw Burke finish first in her age division, and in 1984 she returned to defend her 16-year-old title.

She entered two divisions, beating Tardiff for the 18-year-old championship but losing to Robin Levine of New York in the younger bracket.

Burke, a junior at Newton North High, will travel to Houston, Texas in May for the Women's Nationals competition. In June she will travel to Newport Beach, Calif. for another shot at the junior title.

Tryouts for AAU Junior Olympics at Pine Manor

Tryouts for the AAU Junior Olympic 15 and under basketball team will be held Tuesday and Thursday nights at Pine Manor College in Newton at 7:30 p.m.

Any boy 15-years or younger before September 1 can try-out for the team, sponsored by the Newton Yellow Cab, which will compete in the districts in June and make a bid for the regionals and nationals to follow.

Coach Mike Eldridge invites any area boys to try-out. There is no fee, just attend with sneakers and shorts.

The first weekly tournament for members of the Ladies' Inner Club at Ponkapoag Golf Course had over 40 players competing in a Florida best ball-9 hole round on Course No. 2.

Tieing for first place (40) were Brenda Alverson, Charlotte Dickie and Rita Rogers. Tieing for second place (41) were Nancy Carlton, Peg Cullinane and Kay Iredale. Third place (45) went to Hilda Appel, Renee Bogie, Ann McCarthy and Edna Tenney.

Weekend wins boost East Sox into 1st place

NEWTON — Three weekend victories catapulted the Newton East Red Sox into first place with a 4-1 record as they dropped the Tigers, Dodgers, and Yankees in succession.

A 14-2 lashing of the Dodgers on Saturday finished off the perfect weekend as Khari Brown fanned 11 and Leo Alvarez cracked three doubles with four RBI's.

For the Dodgers, Jonas Goldstein had two hits and scored both runs.

Aaron Burrows struck out nine Yankees and the Red Sox scored four runs in the third inning to slip by, 6-3, on Friday.

Eric Kaplan, Brown, and Scott Grupp drove in key runs in the third for the Sox.

The Red Sox need seven runs in the final inning to do the Tigers in Thursday, 17-12, as Brown won in relief, striking out six of the eight batters he faced.

Burrows cracked four hits, including two doubles and a home run and Grupp had four hits with two doubles.

Eric Kornfeld had two hits for the Tigers.

Dara Lee

Wesleyan hockey letter to Dara Lee

Dara Lee, a junior at Wesleyan University in Middleton, Conn., and a resident of Newton, earned her first varsity letter in ice hockey, Head Coach Stuart Bevis announced recently.

Lee played defense for Wesleyan during the Cardinals' 3-11 season. She saw action in each of Wesleyan's 14 games this winter.

The daughter of Tunney and Irene Lewe of 135 Langley Road, Dara is a 1982 graduate of Newton South High School, where she lettered in lacrosse.

At Wesleyan, Lee is a participant in both field hockey and lacrosse. She is a student health advisor and a co-chairperson of WESTAR, an organization that assists the alumni office ion its activities.

Lee is majoring in biopsychology at Wesleyan.

Westboro Track post to Merrill

WESTBORO — At a pre-opening day meeting of the track officials recently, Peter Falconi of Motorsports Promotions, Inc. announced that Carl Merrill of Newton has been retained as the racing director for the Westboro Speedway, which operates every Saturday night, with race time set for 7:30 p.m.

Merrill, who is also associated with the Monadnock Motor Raceway and the Northeastern Midget Association, is a former car owner and part time driver having had his greatest success with cars driven by "Red" Foote and "Slim" Ingalls in the 1949-50-51 era prior to his becoming a racing official.

Over a period of 33 years, Merrill has held positions as a chief steward for NASCAR at the former Norwood Arena, Lee Raceway as well as at the Thompson International Speedway where he also held the positions as racing director and general manager.

He has also held the official positions as a technical and safety inspector as well as that as a starter and flagman. While associated with NASCAR of Daytona Beach, Florida he served as a member of the National Stock Car Racinng Commission.

In recent years, Merrill has been associated with the Coastal Racing Association, former operators of the Westboro Speedway and the Monadnock Motor Raceway, and in 1983-84 was the racing director for the Waterford Speedway Bowl, Conn.

Merrill is also a columnist for the largest auto race paper in the northeast.

Hold Legion tryouts

Tryouts for the Newton Post 440 Stan Musial League team will be held on four dates this month at the West Newton Common and will be open to men over 18.

The dates are: Tuesday, May 14; Thursday, May 16; Tuesday, May 21; and Thursday, May 23. Tryouts will be held between 6-8 p.m.

2 special fans will be leading cheers at Shriners grid game

BOSTON — When the Seventh Annual Shriners High School Football Classic gets underway on June 22 at 4 p.m. at Boston College's Alumni Stadium, two very special fans will be cheering on the gridiron efforts of the 90 players from 75 eastern Massachusetts cities and towns who make up the North and South teams.

They are the courageous young man and woman who represent the thousands of Shriners patients nationwide for whom "Strong legs run that weak egs may walk." Their names are Richard Belanger of Lowell, Football King, and Queen Darlene Murphy of Lynn.

Since 1979, when the Massachusetts High School Football Coaches Association teamed up with the Shriners of Aleppo Temple in Wilmington to co-sponsor the event, approximately $200,000 has been raised to provide free treatment for Shriners hospital and burn center patients like Belanger and Murphy.

At the same time, 550 outstanding high school all-star or all-scholastic players have showcased their talent since the inception of the Classic, the most recent of 53 Shrine games held nationwide annually. Chief among them is this year's Honorary Chairman, Heisman Trophy Winner and New Jersey Generals quarterback Doug Flutie, who led his 1981 Shrine team to victory.

Belanger, a 16-year-old Lowell High School freshman, is quite an athlete in his own right. Before a traumatic train accident in 1984 that severed both his feet, he placed first in his weight class in the Lowell City Wrestling Championships, and played on the Lowell Recreation Department basketball team.

After his accident, he endured six operations in as many weeks, and was then referred to the Shriners Hospital for Crippled Children in Springfield. There he received therapy to ready him to walk again. With the help of prostheses made and fitted at the Shriners Hospital, Belanger now plays basketball and football again. He also received a citation for bravery from Governor Michael Dukakis.

Football Queen Darlene Murphy of Lynn is another brave 16-year-old. Since the age of nine, when 60 percent of her body was burned in a fire that engulfed her house as she slept, she's triumphed over 40 corrective operations done at the Shriners Burns Institute in Boston.

1982 Queen, 17-year-old Julie Stedman from Wilmington, is another example of the courage that typifies Shriners patients. Born without one leg, she became an outpatient at the Shriners Hospital in Springfield, and has since won numerous national skiing and tournaments for the physically challenged.

Both this year's King and Queen will be crowned during halftime festivities, which also feature performances by the award-winning Boston Drum & Bugle Corps and Shriners bands and clowns.

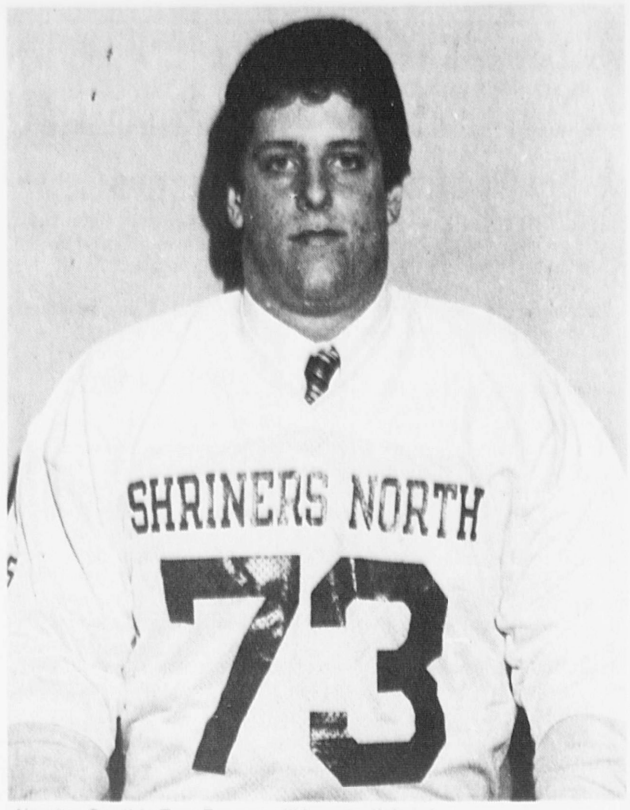

Head coach for the North squad is Mike Cavanaugh, who led North Andover High School to the Cape Ann League Championship this year; and for the South, Tri-Valley League Trichamp Hopkinton's Dave Hughes. Both North and South go into this year's Classic with three wins apiece.

Armand Sabourin, head coach at Bedford High School and president of the Massachusetts High School Football Coaches Association, says of the upcoming contest, "Because we are now more experienced in selecting players and running the game, this should be the best Classic ever. Through greater knowledge of what the game is all about, public support continues to grow each year."

Sponsors this year are Converse, Inc., John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Company, Coca-Cola Bottling Company of New England, Rabboni Lodge A.F. & A.M. and the Fourth Masonic District.

Tickets are $3 in advance, available at the Shriners Auditorium, Exit 13 off I-93, Wilmington, or by mail. Send a check and self addressed, stamped envelope to Shriners Football Classic, 99 Fordham Road, Wilmington, MA 01887. Tickets at the gate are $4. All proceeds go to Shriners hospitals where patients under age 18 are treated free of charge.

For more information contact Harold Foley at (617) 665-6466 or 657-4202.

Newton South's Tom Rogers will be a participant.

Central Phils win with Fruhan

NEWTON — Southpaw Bill Fruhan pitched and batted the Central Phillies over the West Orioles, 6-1, Sunday at Cabot Park in a Newton Central Little League inter-league clash.

Fruhan, a 12-year-old, scattered three hits, walked three, and struck out nine of the Orioles' hitters. At bat, the lefty had a double and single.

In Sunday's inter-league action at Lyons Field, Dennis Burke had two hits in as many trips as, the Newton West Braves downed the Newton Central Giants, 7-3.

Burke added a double and a couple of spectacular catches to his performance.

On the mound, 11-year-old lefty Ryan Fitpatrick went the distance, allowing nine hits and five walks while striking out seven.

The Newton Central Yankees hammered the Newton West Red Sox, 17-9, as Ben Weisbuch went 5-for-5 with two RBIs.

Jeff Abrams was the winning pitcher, throwing four innings of two-hit ball.

North's Diane Goldstein 4th in shot put at Coaches Meet

BROCKTON — Diane Goldstein was Newton North's top finisher in the State Coaches Track Meet on Saturday, as she hurled the shot 34-11½ for fourth place. It was the junior's best effort ever.

The Tigers had two other competitors finish in the top six.

Rachel Davis high jumped five feet for sixth. She's a senior. A freshman, Magda Kornitzer, had North's other sixth-place finish, as she turned in a time of 5:22 in the mile.

The Tigers also got a good performance out of Joanna Giddon, who reahced the semifinals in the 100-meter dash. The junior turned in a time of 13.1.

Several other Newton North girls made the trek to Brockton.

Junior Abby Segal was seventh in the 880 with a personal-best of 2:25. Carol Ventura topped 90 feet in the discus preliminaries.

Carolyn Natale made it to the semifinals in the 220, thanks to a personal record of 276.

Nickie Cradle, Rachel Levine Giddon and Erica Bruner ran together in the 4x110 relay for the first time ever. Cradle also competed in the 100, while Bruner ran a PR 49.3 in the 330 low hurdles.

South girls compete

Newton South didn't fare quite as well. Lana Kim had the top finish for the Lions with a seventh in the triple jump. The senior tri-captain achieved a 32-10. She holds the school record in the event with a 33-4 against Concord-Carlisle earlier this year.

Sophomore Sarah Lahey and junior Lisa Heck also competed in that event, though not making it past the preliminaries. Lahey leaped 29-3, while Heck sailed 29-¾.

The three combined with freshman Julie Goldenberg to run a 53.6 in the 4x100 relay. The quartet finished seventh, missing sixth by half-a-second.

Goldendberg also advanced to the quarterfinals in the 100-meter dash with a 12.9, four-tenths better than her previous best. Goldenberg owns the best dash time (in meters) in the DCL this season.

Finally, Hendi Crosby competed in the 800 and ran a solid time of 2:40.4.

South wins

Newton South is another team on a streak, of sorts, as the Lions picked up their second straight Dual County League win with a 74-59 decision at Concord-Carlisle.

Senior captaion Lana Kim had the best day of her career in leading the way for South with four first places. She won both hurdles, the triple jump and javelin.

Coach Chris Omeltchenko was particularly pleased with Kim's triple jump, as she posted a 33-4, the best in the DCL this season, in only her second attempt at that event.

Freshman Julie Goldenberg picked up a pair of firsts, in the 100 and long jump. She turned in an amazing jump of 15-7¾ in the latter event, a huge increase over her previous best of 13-9. The leap qualified her for the state meet. Goldenberg was also second in the dash.

Denise Hill, still fighting off an illness, picked up a first and three seconds.

The coach was also happy with milers Hendi Crosby and Allison DeRensis. Crosby won it with a 6:04, while sophomore DeRensis turned in a 6:15 for third in her first time out.

Police, fire briefs

Claflin Place fire blamed on wiring

NEWTONVILLE — Fire Department investigators have ruled that a poorly grounded wire caused the three-alarm blaze on Claflin Place that destroyed a 2½-story house and left 12 homeless.

Newton Fire Chief Edward Reilly said the faulty wiring was in the bedroom on the second floor, where the fire began. Reilly estimated the damage to the home at more than $50,000.

Housebreaks on Centre, Hyde streets

NEWTON HIGHLANDS — A pair of neighboring houses on Centre and Hyde streets were broken into last week, police said.

The Hyde Street home was ransacked, police said. Cash, jewelry and two bottles of liquor were reported taken, according to police.

Police said jewelry and a camera were reportedly stolen from the Centre Street house.

A blue pillowcase from the Hyde Street home containing jewelry and empty jewelry boxes was recovered on Rogers Street, police said. Another jewelry box from the Hyde Park residence was recovered at an MBTA station and a kitchen knife was found in the back yard.

Police said the Hyde Street home was entered through a rear door. The Centre Street break-in occurred after a hole was punched in a window.

Student faces charges of armed robbery

NEWTON — A 17-year-old Newton South student will face charges of armed robbery in Middlesex Superior Court following a ruling last week in Newton District Court.

Judge Monte G. Basbas found probable cause that the student be charged with armed robbery.

The suspect is alleged to have robbed two women in Newton with a firearm March 25, according to court records. He allegedly stole one pocketbook containing $30 in cash.

The high school student's case was continued until June 3.

Court records show that the suspect was arrested by MDC police April 24 on a warrant. He was released on $1,000 bail.

Coins stolen from Duxbury Road home

NEWTON CENTER — A Duxbury Road home was ransacked last week and 10 sets of proof coins and two rolls of silver dimes were stolen, police said yesterday.

According to police, the inside of the home was torn apart. The homeowner's son called police and reported all known stolen items.

Entrance was gained after a burglar stood on the home's bulkhead and forced the casement on the kitchen window.

Theft attempt foiled by school principal

CHESTNUT HILL — The principal of the Chestnut Hill School last week foiled an attempted theft of computer parts from the school when she called police after hearing noises in the second floor hallway, police said.

Police reported finding the computer parts in bags in the hallway of the 428 Hammond St. school. A clock was stolen from a desk on the first floor, police said. The thieves left through the emergency exit, according to police.

Cash and jewelry taken in housebreak

AUBURNDALE —Jewelry and cash were the targets last week of a house break on Islington Road, police said. The residents of the house left home at 6:10 p.m. Sunday and returned at 12:07 Monday, finding the rooms ransacked and an unknown amount of cash and jewelry missing. Rolled coins and a penny jar were also missing, police said. The home was entered through a rear sliding glass door, which was forced, according to police.

Jackets stolen from high school lockers

NEWTONVILLE — Jackets seemed to be the target of four thefts from lockers at Newton North High School reported last week, police said.

Four Riley House students reported having their jackets stolen from their lockers. Also taken were a wallet, calculator, book bag and sweat pants.

Jewelry lifted from Hood Street house

NEWTON CORNER — Jewelry and cash were taken last week from a Hood Street home, police said. Between 7:15 a.m. and 10:44 a.m., the rear kitchen door to the home was forced, according to police. Police reported finding a knife and watch from the home across the street.

Fairview Street house was burglarized

NEWTON CORNER — A Fairview Street house was reported ransacked and silverware taken last week, police said. Also reported stolen from the house were men's and women's jewelry and a 10-speed bicycle, police said. According to police, a screwdriver was used to force the bulkhead door. The theft occurred between 10 a.m. and 8 p.m., police said.

Carpenter demands payment for work

NEWTON — A Brookline construction company last week entered a not guilty plea to a charge of non-payment of bills. Court records show that Jeanne Kirdorfer, J.G. Construction, 43 Verndale St., is accused of not paying a carpenter $544 for carpentry work done in Newton from Jan. 7-16. A pre-trial conference was scheduled for June 11.

Assault reported at Newton MBTA stop

NEWTON HIGHLANDS — A Dorchester man told police last week that he was assaulted at the Newton Highlands MBTA stop following an argument with a man at Capuccino's Restaurant on Beacon Street, police said. The man suffered a laceration on a finger on his right hand from the alleged assault, which is said to have occurred at midnight.

Merchandise is stolen from parked car

CHESTNUT HILL — A car at the Chestnut Hill Mall was broken into last week and more than $700 worth of merchandise reported stolen, police said. Taken were 12 yards of fabric, a leather bag, two sets of lingerie, silk flowers, a carpet, and eight wine glasses, according to police.

Union Street cafe employee assaulted

NEWTON CENTRE — Two men assaulted an employee at a cafe on Union Street Monday after the victim asked the pair to leave, police said. According to police, the two suspects walked into the cafe looking for cigarettes. When they were asked to leave, one of the men reportedly grabbed the employee from behind while the other hit him, police said. No complaints have been filed, police said.

Two cars damaged on Mechanic Street

NEWTON UPPER FALLS — A pair of cars were broken into over the weekend on Mechanic Street and one radio was taken, police reported. Police said the dashboard to a 1985 Honda Accord was damaged after one of the breaks, while an AM/FM radio was taken from a 1978 VW parked there. The theft occurred between 11:45 on Saturday and 12:45 p.m., Sunday, police said.

MONEY TALK$

(Mr. Frankel, vice president of Financial Planning Associates of Boston, is a financial planning expert whose column is aimed at helping our readers toward financial independence. Questions for him should be sent to this publication.)

Plan your finances

By Neville Frankel

Money Talks is a weekly column intended to help you manage your finances now, and to assist you in planning for your financial future.

Our readers may ask why we have decided to devote space to a column on financial planning. The answer is simple: We all need help.

Our Social Security System is under fire; proposed changes in the income taxation system, if implemented, will require that we all adjust; the laws governing pension plans (IRAs, Keoghs, Etc.) have changed so often that even experts have difficulty keeping pace.

Interest rate fluctuations in the last few years have been greater than anyone could have predicted a decade ago; inflation, although down, is something we will have to live with for the foreseeable future.

And we are bombarded daily by a confusing array of financial products and services, many of which did not exist five years ago. These range from adjustable rate mortgages, through universal life insurance, to zero coupon bonds. The result is that financial planning has become more important–and more difficult–than ever.

We hope that you will become a loyal and regular reader. Please write to Mr. Frankel care of this publication with questions, or with specific financial matters you would like his column to cover.

The phase "financial planning" has been taken up recently by every professional offering to sell a product or service. As a consequence, its precise definition has become somewhat muddied. This column will attempt to clarify the situation.

Many of the people I meet have done some planning. Steve and Elaine, for example, had a will drawn up four years ago; they have an accountant who does their tax return each year for the last ten years. They have some life insurance and long term disablity insurance, and they make an annual contribution to retirement plan. A stockbroker advises them with investment decisions, and last year, for the first time. They were in high enough marginal tax bracket to benefit by the purchase of a real estate tax shelter.

Steve and Elaine have done more planning than most, and they are content. But they don't have a comprehensive financial plan. What they do have is hodge-podge of advice, which may be excellent, from a number of financial specialists.

In comprehensive planning, decisions are made at the strategic level, in the context of a long range plan that integrates income taxation, and estate planning needs. Instead, Steve and Elaine have made their decisions at the product level (and in the definition of product I include professional services such as accounting and law).

The problem with making decision at the product level are many. Each financial advisor receives only partial information on which to base recommendations; the advisors never talk to each other, and this often results in missed planning opportunites, and in conflicting advice. Perhaps worst of all, Steve and Elaine assume–perhaps incorrectly–that they have adequately protected themselves against risk, provided sufficiently for their retirement, and arranged for the distribution of their estates in the most appropriate and tax-wise manner.

No column can be a substitute for comprehensive finanacial planning. In this limited space we can do more than raise the kind of concerns that often emerge during the planning process. Following are a few of the gaps that one might find in the planning done by Steve and Elaine.

1. Everyone has a will. If you don't make one yourself, the state will impose one on you–and you might be horrified to discover just how the state thinks you should divide up your property. Steve and Elaine have made a will–but even that may not be enough. Recent changes in estate tax law may make your will obsolete if it was drawn more than two years ago.

2. Most self-employed people with Keogh plans believe that the maximum annual contribution is 25% of income, with a $30,000 ceiling. Some people, however, might benefit from the establishment of a defined benefit plan–and be able to make substantially higher contributions.

3. Steve and Elaine have some idea of what retirement income they will need; and they have a vague idea of how much Elaine and the children will need to live on if Steve dies. But they've never sat down with a pen and paper to calculate their retirement and survivor income needs, nor have they factored inflation into the equation. They may have provided sufficiently for their needs–but guesswork has no place in the areas of critical importance. And with the computer able to project finanacial needs out to retirement, Steve and Elaine have more opportunity than ever to take a controlling interest in their future.

Tefila will host UN rep

The 127th Annual meeting of Congregation Mishkan Tefila, Newton, will be held on Thursday evening, May 30. Following a 6 p.m. dinner, an installation of officers of the congregation will take place.

At 8 p.m. that evening, the synagogue will welcome the entire community to the Rabbi Herman H. and Mignon L. Rubenovitz Memorial Lecture at which time Benjamin Netanyahu, permanent representative of Israel to the United Nations will speak on "Israel in the Family of Nations."

Stolen car found stripped and damaged

BOSTON — A car reported stolen from Wells Avenue last week turned up in Boston missing all of its seats and radio, police said. Police also reported damage to the dashboard and body of the Rhode Island registered vehicle.

State prizes student's poster

NEWTON — An eighth grader at Bigelow Junior High has won second place in a statewide poster contest promoting water conservation.

Julia Ditelberg of 49 Woodchester St., Newton received a $250 savings bond as her prize in the third annual poster contest sponsored by the Metropolitan District Commission. She was one of six winners honored by MDC Commissioner William Geary in a brief ceremony at the State House Thursday morning.

Ditelberg's poster depicted a water-filled vase of roses with the slogan: "Save Water For A Rosy Future."

"Julia loves to draw. She enjoys science and has been getting A pluses," said her mother, Francis Ditelberg.

Twelve other Bigelow Junior High school students received honorable mention for their poster entries. Ditelberg's poster is currently on display at the Boston Museum of Science May 13-19.

Sons of Italy honors athletes

Newton student athletes Christopher Biotte, Alex DeNucci, and Don Natale were recipients of Grand Lodge Awards certificates from the Massachusetts Grand Lodge, Order of Sons of Italy at the 24th annual sports awards dinner held at the Woburn Sons of Italy Lodge.

The three students were honored for exceptional athletic ability. Newton North High students DiNucci and Natale, both West Newton residents, were recognized for football and soccer, respectively. Biotti, of Newton, from Belmont Hill School, was recognized for hockey.

Ad Tips...

PLAN AHEAD!
Save time! Plan your ad before you call. List the item for sale first, then the description, price, phone number, and hours to call. For Yard Sales, list the town, date, times, address, then special items or directions. It's that simple!

Management Career Opportunities

While Your Peers Are Pushing Pencils, McDonald's Will Be Pushing You.

While your friends are sitting behind a desk and complaining how routine their jobs are day in and day out, you'll stand out from the crowd, because McDonald's Management Training Program will teach you every facet of the exciting restaurant industry. And, we're not just talking about the basics.

We'll train you in all aspects of managing a million dollar business. This includes management, marketing, personnel, training, budgeting, equipment operations and purchasing.

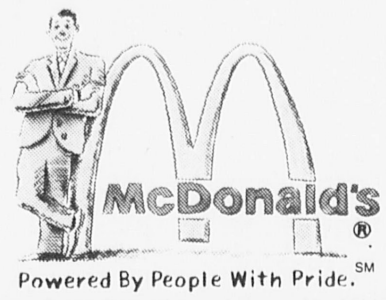

It should be obvious to you by now that McDonald's definitely cares about its people. At McDonald's, our people are rewarded on the basis of their achievements, not seniority, and we'll do everything we can to help you to achieve your goals—as lofty as they may be.

At McDonald's, we offer an excellent starting salary, extensive training, health, life, and dental insurance, profit sharing, promotions based on performance, and more.

So, if you're interested in working for the industry leader, see how you too can join the McDonald's Management Training Program. It can give your career a real push.

To apply, please call or send your resume to: Judie Stoebel, Dept. DT0515, McDonald's Corporation, 420 Providence Highway, Westwood, Mass 02090, (617) 329-1450.

Always, An Equal Opportunity/Affirmative Action Employer.

Federal royalties victimize Indians

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Roger Bosin, a 42-year-old Kiowa-Commanche Indian, says he recently lost his home and his car because his federal oil and gas royalty payments stopped for a year and then came late.

He used to get $1,500 a month. Now, if payments come, he's lucky to get $27.

Thelma Haag, an Arapaho Indian, and her family of five have been without oil, natural gas and a telephone since her royalty payments stopped without explanation in 1983.

Since then, she has had to cook outside. To support her family, she makes Indian dolls and sells them door to door.

Mary Limpy and her three young children have been evicted from apartments five times in two years, living in her van for a month at a time. Limpy's royalty payments, her sole source of income, have decreased sharply and usually arrive late.

So far, no one has told her where the money went.

Bosin, Haag and Limpy, all from Oklahoma, are are not receiving the benefits of a three-year-old federal law affecting as many as 250,000 Indians who depend on the Interior Department to promptly pay out $140 million in annual oil and gas royalty payments from companies that lease their land.

Glitches in a computer system set up two years ago have resulted in royalty payments being cut off for some Indians for as long as two years. Checks often have been sent to the wrong people. Much of the money is left in federal accounts longer than the legal limit, to accumulate interest the Indians have yet to receive.

Interior Department officials administer the royalty program through the Minerals Management Service, which collects money from oil companies, and the Bureau of Indian Affairs, which distributes it to the Indians. They concede they have a problem.

"We've got a mess and we're trying to cope, but there's no easy solution," Vincent Lovett, an Interior Department spokesman, said.

Lovett said the agency's computer cannot monitor the oil production "and what's produced for whom and (paid) to whom and what is owed."

Indians in Oklahoma, New Mexico, Arizona, Utah, Montana and other states receive royalty payments from lands that have been in their families since the government gave them the land by treaties in the 1800s. When an Indian lease owner dies, the land is split among offspring. Most lots have 10 to 15 lease owners; some have as many as 200.

Robert Boldt, associate director of the Interior Department's Minerals Management Service, acknowledged the department has failed to comply with a 1982 law requiring prompt payments, accompanied by an explanation sheet, to individual Indians.

"Under the current system of collection and distribution, there is no such thing as normal," an audit by the Interior Department's inspector general's office concluded. The audit, published March 25, was obtained by United Press International under the Freedom of Information Act.

Victims of the bureaucratic snafus have included families that, in most cases, are ineligible for public assistance.

"The amount of human suffering that is caused as a direct consequence of the mismanagement of (royalty payments) is terrible and inexcusable," said Alan Taradash, an Albuquerque, N.M., lawyer representing Navajos in a lawsuit against the government. He said the Bureau of Indian Affairs' "indifference to the suffering caused by the bureau's incompetence is shocking and unconscionable."

"What (money) goes through the system is not equal to what the lease owners get," Taradash said. "There is no way to know how much money's been lost because the system has been so horrendously messed up that they can't even get an accounting of it."

Last year, the Minerals Management Service identified and distributed $9.8 million owed — but not paid — to Indian lease owners from underpayments from oil and gas companies, and from undistributed money left in department accounts. An extra $1 million in interest on late payments to Indians also was identified.

Gas, oil payments a pattern of neglect

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Problems with Indian oil and gas royalty payments reflect overall neglect by the Interior Department in the administration of Indian affairs, Indian representatives say.

Officials, aware of the severe deficiencies in the collection and distribution of mineral lease income, have been slow to act — and have made decisions affecting Indian lease owners without soliciting their views, they say.

During an April 8 congressional hearing at the Anadarko area Indian affairs office in Oklahoma, Alan Taradash, a lawyer representing Navajo Indians in a lawsuit against the government, painted a picture of years of administrative neglect.

Taradash testified that if Interior Department officials "were private trustees, they would have been fired or they would have gone to jail a long time ago for the mismanagement of the accounts."

"The level of evasiveness by even top level officials (at the hearing) was absolutely embarrassing," Taradash said last week.

During the hearing, it was disclosed that royalty management officials in February adopted a policy to limit Indian involvement in solving their own royalty management problems. A report by agency officials said disadvantages to the Indians of the new guidelines would include "increased political pressure from tribes and allottees (and) possible dereliction of government trust responsibilities."

Rep. Mike Synar, D-Okla., whose House government operations subcommittee oversees the Interior Department and its enforcement of Indian royalty management laws, said recently that "even the most basic of the laws ... have not been implemented."

A year ago, in a draft "memorandum of understanding," the Minerals Management Service and the Bureau of Indian Affairs described the royalty management failures as "a critically serious problem that needs prompt resolution."

But John Fritz, the top-ranking Indian affairs official, had not yet seen the memo and said no action has been taken on it.

Indians charge that government officials are making decisions about their money and their land without consulting them, also a violation of the 1982 law.

In discussions concerning "direct payment" — in which oil and gas companies would directly pay Indian lease owners with less government involvement — the Interior Department requested company comments in a notice in the Federal Register. Indians say they were not consulted.

Indians charge they have been forbidden to review their mineral leases and other production records. For the last three years, Thelma Haag has traveled 140 miles three times a week to seek answers to her royalty problems. "When I get there, (officials) call me a welfare case, and say that the check will be in the mail," she said.

Synar concluded the April 8 hearing by saying 1982 laws that placed a six-year limitation on actions to recover penalties from producers are being neglected.

"Now, while the years are literally ticking away, the department is studying, organizing task forces and shopping for new computers," Synar said.

Obituaries

Sr. Karolina Schewendemann

Member of Religious of Christian Education

NEWTON HIGHLANDS — A funeral mass of the resurrection was celebrated Friday, May 10 at 9 a.m. in Sacred Heart Church, Newton Centre, for Sr. Karolina Schewendemann, RCE, of Newton Highlands. Burial followed in Holy Cross Cemetery, Malden.

Sr. Karolina died at Lowell General Hospital, following a lengthy illness.

Born in Baden, Germany, Sr. Karolina had lived in the United States for most of her life. She recently celebrated her diamond jubilee as a member of the Religious of Christian Education.

The daughter of the late Herman and Theresia (Schatzbe) Schwendemann, Sr. Karolina is survived by many nieces and nephews in Germany. Funeral arrangements by Francis J. Joyce & Son, 245 Main St., Waltham.

Mary Mahoney, son from Auburndale

WEST ROXBURY — A funeral mass was celebrated for Mary A. Mahoney, 86, of West Roxbury, in the Holy Name Church, West Roxbury.

Mrs. Mahoney died last week at the Faulkner Hospital, Jamaica Plain.

Locally she is survived by a son, Francis J. of Auburndale. She is also survived by another son, Eugene D. of Needham; a daughter, Mary T. Geary of Dedham; 12 grandchildren and seven great-grandchildren.

A lifelong Boston resident, she had lived in West Roxbury for many years and was a member of the Holy Name Sodality.

Ann C. Crouse, former Waban resident

MILFORD, N. H. — A funeral service were held last week for Ann Catherine (Martin) Crouse, 65, of Milford, a former resident of Waltham and Waban, from the Smith & Heald Funeral Home, 39 Elm St., Milford, N.H. Interment followed at Riverside Cemetery, Milford, N.H.

Mrs. Crouse died, after a long illness, recently at the Milford Nursing Home, Milford, N.H.

Mrs. Crouse was a former employee of the Pentagon in Washington, D.C. during World War II. She was also a former employee of Gault Plumbing Co., Milford, N.H. and the Smith Electric Co., Amherst, N.H.

The daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. James J. Martin of Waban, she was also the sister of the late, James J. Martin, Jr. of Waban. She is survived by: Two daughters, Mrs. David (Patricia) Paro of Greenfield, N.H. and Carol Eliott of Milford; two stepchildren, Mrs. Bernard (Nita) Lacourse of Nabonesett, Ma., and Mrs. Gailen (Jean) Easton of Bangor, Me.; eight grandchildren; a sister, Margaret Allen of of Waltham; two nieces, Mrs. Raymond (Nancy) Gobbi and Mary Trott, both of Waltham; four nephews, James R. Allen, Jr. of Waltham; Ronald R. Allen of Arlington, Daniel Allen of West Virginia and Robert M. Allen of Framingham.

Mabel Farwell, 84

Short story writer

NEWTON CENTRE — Private funeral services will be held for Mabel (Brown) Farwell, 84, of Newton Centre, who wrote short stories from 1939 to 1955. She died last week in Sudbury Pines Nursing Home.

A longtime member of Junior Mother's Rest of the First Church of Christ Scientist in Newton, Mrs. Farwell wrote for the old American magazine, Good Housekeeping, McCalls, Woman's Home Companion, Mademoiselle and a number of foreign periodicals.

Mrs. Farwell also had her stories printed in the O'Henry Collection, a collection of the best short stories of the year. In the 1930s she had been a part-time secretary to author Margaret Lee Runbeck and she also taught courses and short story writing at the annual Breadloaf Writers Conference in Vermont.

She volunteered as a writing instructor for paraplegic veterans at the Veterans Aministration Hospital in West Roxbury in the late 1940s and early 1950s.

Born in Schenectady, N. Y., she attended Pembroke College at Brown University and was a graduate of Simmons College. She was later secretary to the director of secretarial studies at Simmons.

She leaves her daughter, Margaret McQueen of Sudbury; a son, Leonard Farwell of Riverside, Calif.; a sister, Margaret Lockwood of Yorktown, Va.; four grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

Zaven Yardume, former Newton resident

MARSHFIELD — A memorial service will be held Sunday, May 19 at 2:30 p.m. for Zaven Yardume, 63, of Marshfield Hills, a former resident of Newton, in the First Parish Church, Norwell Center.

A former sportswriter and copy editor for the old Boston Traveler and the Boston Globe, and in recent years a weekly newspaper editor in Norwell, Mr. Yardume died of cancer Tuesday in South Shore Hospital, Weymouth.

Mr. Yardume was a sportswriter for the Globe in the mid 1940s before joining the Boston Traveler Sports Department. Until 1967, when the Traveler merged with the Herald, he was a sports copy editor and sportwriter. He then worked in the sports department for the paper until 1972, when it was purchased by the Hearst Corp.

He then began working in public relations for the Massachusetts and New England High School Principals Associations. He was also a scriptwriter for several Boston radio stations and had broadcast color commentary for high school games.

Born in Boston, he was educated at Huntington School, Boston and at Amherst College. He moved from Newton to Marshfield Hills in 1965.

He was the editor of the weekly Norwell Mariner from its beginning in 1974 until his retirement two years ago. He was writing a novel shortly before his death. He leaves his wife, Evelyn (Jones).

Rev. G. P. Gallivan, brother in Newton

METHUEN — A concelebrated mass was sung last week in St. Ann's Church, Dorchester, for Rev. G. P. Gallivan, a Boston native and retired pastor of Blessed Sacrement Church, Walpole.

Rev. Gallivan's body lay in state in St. Ann's May 2. Rev. Gallivan died in Bon Secours Hospital, Methuen, after a long illness.

Locally, he is survived by a brother, Vincent M. Gallivan of Newton. He also is survived by a niece and a nephew.

As pastor for eight years at Blessed Sacrament, Rev. Gallivan was instrumental in the expansion of the parish's St. Francis' Cemetery, where he donated a statue of the Risen Christ.

A graduate of Boston College High School and Boston College, he was ordained in 1936.

In his early years, he was an assistant at St. Thomas the Apostle Parish, Millis; St. Patrick's, Lawrence; St. Catherine's, Norwood, prior to his becoming pastor of the Assumption Parish in Dracut.

During World War II, he was a chaplain in Gen. George S. Patton's Third Army with the rank of Captain.

He was a member of the Redberry Council, Knights of Columbus, No. 117.

David A. Trageser, son from Newton

WAYLAND — A memorial service was held recently in the First Parish Unitarian Church, Wayland, for David A. Trageser, 60, of Wayland, who was president of Voltek, a division of the Sekisui America Corp.

Mr. Trageser died in Brigham and Women's Hospital after a brief heart ailment.

Locally, he is survived by: A son, Charles Trageser of Newton. He is also survived by his wife, Mary (Stewart); three daughters, Alice Trageser of Vergennes, Vt., Molly Humphrie of Seattle, Wash., Katherine McNiff of Littleton; a brother, Charles A. Trageser of Hampstead, N.C.; three grandchildren.

Mr. Trageser was formerly associated with the High Voltage Corp. of Burlington and with Dewey & Almy Chemical Co., now the W. R. Grace Co., Cambridge.

Born in Bethlehem, Pa., he lived in Wayland for 33 years. During World War II, he served as a Navy lieutenant in the Pacific. He was chairman of the Businessmen's Collaborative in the Lawrence Chamber of Commerce and was active in the Lawrence Neighbor Home Housing Service.

He was president of his class in 1944 at Massachusetts Institute of Technology, where he earned a chemical engineering degree.

He also had been active in the First Parish Unitarian Church and was a former director of the Tree Growers of Wayland.

Music in May fair is charmer

By Candy Kosow, Correspondent

To pass by the large stone house at 123 Chestnut St., you might think some rich eccentric lived there. But upon closer investigation, you would find that this stately structure, located just off Commonwealth Ave., is home for the All Newton Music School. Although the school has not been there since its inception, the institute does plan to mark it's 75th birthday in that house, next year.

Why is having a permanent home for a music school so important? "Tradition" says school president, Stan Rosenberg. He adds that the school is so well-known in local circles that their enrollment has reached its peak. If they got any larger, they would have to move, and that is something this community school, nestled in a grove of majestic trees, simply does not want to do.

The environment and setting of the school recently had a chance to show off its charm during the Music in May Festival. This is the second year of the festival, and all agree, this is a new tradition that will be kept alive for many years.

This school has enrolled some 1,600 children and about 400 adult students. They have the opportunity to learn everything from piano and violin to ballet and chamber music. The Music in May Festival gives students the chance to display their talents.

Upon talking with several teachers at the school, the consensus is that children must learn music like they learn a foreign language. The notes are the words and the bars are like phrases. Although the school endorses the traditional way of teaching music, they have great success with preschoolers by utilizing the Suzuki method.

Faculty member Nancy Hair says Suzuki helps youngsters develop tone and rhythm, along with understanding and having an appreciation of notes and their relationship with other notes. The system resembles the Kodaly vocal training system taught in many schools. Kodaly was the system used by the scientists in the film, "Close Encounters of the Third Kind" when they wanted to communicate with the aliens.

Needless to say, the faculty members realize they are teaching children something more than how to play a Mozart Sonata. President Rosenberg indicates that music lessons help a child develop "good study habits and learning styles" in everything they do, whether it be homework, or learning baseball. He says children are adaptable, and therefore, if taught discipline at an early age, can carry this virtue with them the rest of their lives.

But don't young children become frustrated when they can't accomplish something right away? Yes, says Rodenberg. That's why music lessons are so good for a child, because "the rewards are so immediate." And thus the reason for having a Music In May Festival. The children can all share with each other what they have learned, and, of course, the acceptance of skills acquired by other kids gives them all a great deal of satisfaction. As many happy kids as there were at the festival, there was an equal number of happy parents boasting about their children's abilities.

The Music In May Festival showcased many different instrument recitals. You could hear the pianos pounding away on the upstair floors, while groups of wind and string instruments performed ensemble on the main floor. Outside the house, there were groups of teachers playing folk instruments, while around the back of the house several May pole dances were taking place. A police officer had to be hired to keep traffic moving along, because there were hundreds of parents and kids running around the grounds.

The thing that most affiliates of the school are proudest of is the track record of the school's faculty, and even some of their students. Most children who take lessons at ANMS do go on to study with more formidable schools. One former student is now playing with the L.A. Symphony. Most of the staff members play with other regional groups like the Boston Symphony Orchestra or the POPS.

This community school has based its reputation on professionalism. They have endured for 75 years, supplying Newton residents (and those who travel here from neighboring communities, as far away as New Hampshire) with a sense of fulfillment as far as music education is concerned. The Music In May Festival was a way for the students to be creative, and a way for the community to show its appreciation.

He teaches kids for fun and games

NEWTON — "Here I am, still a kid, teaching kids. It's a lot of fun," says Grant Covell, a four-year veteran instructor with Newton Community Schools' Hyde program.

It's hard to believe that Covell, a senior at Newton South High School, is still a kid. He is quietly intense, mature and articulate beyond his years. Which probably accounts for at least one of his most recent successes, his induction into the ranks of the country's National Merit Scholars.

Since ninth grade, Covell has taught chess, Dungeons and Dragons and Rubik's Cube through the Hyde neighborhood program to grades two though six. "It's a lot fun, but mostly, it's a challenge. It's become a part of what I do. I'm not a very good chess player," he adds modestly, "but I can teach it."

Covell credits teaching with showing him "how to explain things more simply...and making communcation easier."

Communication comes to Covell with ease through another vehicle, music. A composer since "I can't remember when," Covell immediately becomes animated when the topic of music arises. Recently accepted into Oberlin College, Covell remains in passionate pursuit of making music, whether as an avocation or a career.

Grant Covell

He spent April vacation composing and copying parts to three symphonic pieces for his school orchestra. In May, Covell will conduct his "Three Little Pieces for Orchestra." Additionally, he will conduct another of his original pieces for the school chorus.

Covell's enthusiasm for composing is contagious. However, he's low key, almost self-effacing about his accomplishments. Credit and appreciation readily go to Newton South Orchestra Director Gordon Duchel and Chorus Director Helen Taylor. Other important influences are Boston University's Samuel Headrick and Robert Sirotas, with whom Covell has recently studied.

Covell just submitted one of his compositions to Broadcast Music Incorporated, in hopes of a coveted B.M.I. award. Considering Covell's recent National Merit Scholarship, perhaps he'll maintain his winning streak.

"It's an honor," he says about the scholarship. "Things are so amazing in Newton, you take them for granted. Being in Newton, I'm with a lot of smart kids, so it doesn't really strike me, which is sort of unfortunate. It's almost like being spoiled. I know kids who aren't National Merit Scholars who have better grades, are more charismatic, have other talents. I'm very fortunate to be where I am."

Newton Community Schools is fortunate to have Covell as part of it's learning program. Barbara Balasa, a Hyde program coordinator and Covell's neighbor, asked him to teach classes through the program four years ago. "He's such an asset...a great kid, bright and charming."

Summing up his experience with NCS, Covell says, "(being a teacher) I'm a little more understanding; so I go to my classes (at Newton South) and I am more responsive. I'm just glad I did this."

(This report was compiled by the staff of Newton Community Schools.)

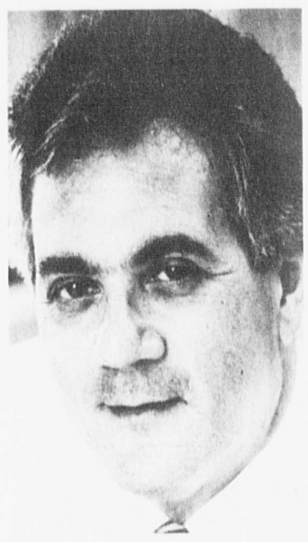

Frank debates dots for the Record

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Some congressmen think the House doesn't have enough black spots on its record, so they tried to add some last week.

The issue evolved into what Rep. Barney Frank, D-Mass., called "the great dot inquiry" but Republicans insisted it was a serious effort to assure the accuracy of the Congressional Record.

At issue were "bullets" — black dots used in the Record to denote that the words were not spoken on the House floor but were added later. The GOP wanted a full-scale study by the House Rules Committee because of some recent omissions of the bullets. The House referred the matter to the House Administration Committee on a 245-184 vote.

Assistant GOP leader Trent Lott, R-Miss., said the debate marked the start of GOP efforts to reform House rules, which Republicans vowed to do after they lost a hotly-contested election recount for an Indiana seat.

Barney Frank

'I couldn't resist. I haven't debated dots in some time'

"The first item on our agenda is an honest and accurate Congressional Record," Lott said.

Lott said in the debate on the Indiana seat no bullets were used to mark comments that two Democrats added to the Record but there were bullets around the expanded remarks of Rep. Charles Pashayan, R-Calif. Accuracy is vital, Lott said, because courts and the public rely on the Record to determine the history of legislation.

"I couldn't resist joining in. I haven't debated dots in some time," Frank said. "I hope he is not suggesting ... there is someone deep in the bowels of the House, dotting unfairly."

"As usual ... there is an attempt to trivialize" GOP complaints, responded Rep. Robert Walker, R-Pa. "There is something drastically wrong with the rule. The Record has become a disastrous document."

Andover Newton to be site of day-long tour

NEWTON — The Newton Historical Society at the Jackson Homestead and Andover Newton Theological School are co-sponsoring a fun-filled and informative "Day on the Hill" on Sunday, June 2 from 2 to 5 p.m.

Andover Newton, the oldest Protestant graduate school of theology in the United States, sits atop a green and wooded hill in the heart of Newton Centre and is just a short walk from the Green Line Newton Centre T-Stop. Its 40-acre campus is one of Newton's best kept treasures.

Activities throughout the afternoon include an orientation, architectural tours of campus buildings, historical exhibit, and a nature walk.

Meet the authors of the Newton Historical Society's book, "Newton's Older Houses: Newton Highlands, Oak Hill and Chestnut Hill" at a reception held in their honor.

Tickets are available through the Jackson Homestead; 527 Washington St., Newton Corner; 552-7238. Tickets $3/$2.50 for Historical Society Members and senior citizens. No charge for children under the age of 16 if accompanied by an adult.

Q's and A's in Ward 8

By Kevin C. Kennedy, News Editor

'Grassroots, consistent'
Teresa Walsh

'Seasoned activist'
William Shaevel

Former alderman
Robert Katz

'Strong, independent voice'
Howard Passman

Land use, increasing population density, its effects on already "problematic" traffic and sewerage problems and, specifically, development plans for Mt. Ida Jr. College and the Lacy Estate are the issues cited by Ward 8 aldermanic candidates as "most crucial."

That was the unanimous response to a questionnaire sent by the Newton Graphic to the four contenders runing for the seat of the late Ward 8 representative Robert Shuman in a June special election.

William Shaevel, Howard Passman, Teresa Walsh and former Ward 8 alderman Robert Katz all pointed to control over the use of the remaining open space on the south side of the city as their primary concern.

"Care must be taken to prevent inappropriate and dense uses of that open space which would (1) change the character of the neighborhood and (2) overload sewerage and traffic capacity," Shaevel responded regarding the most crucial issue facing Ward 8 residents at this time.

According to Passman, the proposed development of 78 condos at the Lacy Estate, on the corner of Nahanton and Winchester Streets, and a plan to create 250 units and a nursing home facility at Mt. Ida "would harm our community in several ways. Our sewage and drainage system is already overtaxed. ... There would be an increase in traffic volume in areas that are already congested : Nahanton, Winchester, Wiswall, Parker and Dedham Streets."

Walsh echoed her opponents' concerns, stating, "the threat of multi-development" at the two sites seriously threatened to exacerbate "already problematic sewerage and traffic conditions."

Katz, who was on the Board of Alderman for the 1980-81 term, promised to fight tooth-and-nail to prevent "overdevelopment of the ward." He referred to his past stance

Comm. report:

Options for new library

By Edward Cafasso, Staff Writer

NEWTON — The answer to the city's long-standing library dilemma is the construction of a new three-story, 76,600 square foot building on city-owned land at the corner of Homer and Walnut streets — a project that should be financed with revenues from surplus and leased property, fire insurance proceeds, bond issues and some fundraising.

Those are the general conclusions reached by the Main Library Facility Committee, according to a draft report obtained recently.

Although the 42-page document is only a draft, sources close to the committee say they expect few changes in the major components when the official results are delivered to Mayor Theodore D. Mann sometime within the next week.

Mann formed the all-volunteer, citizens' group one year ago in an effort to resolve the differences of opinion and lack of hard data that had delayed a final productiuve solution to the city's library problem.

The draft report clearly shows that the mayor's seemingly impossible charge to the committee in May 1984 — find a way to build a 21st Century library at no cost to the city — is now closer to reality than ever before.

"It is the conviction of the Committee that virtually all available expertise and just about every pertinent and relevant source of information has been sought out and addressed in preparation of this report," according to Chairman Melvin R. Wintman's introduction to the draft report.

"It is, therefore, with pride that we report to you that with some small personal sacrfices and the cooperation of its residents and public servants, the city ... can and will have a library which will one day serve to enhance the quality of life in our city for still another century to come," Wintman concluded.

The draft document is composed of separate reports from the three subcommittees formed "to provide for more intensive concentration" on each aspect of the library problem — needs, physical feasibility and construction, and financing.

Permit denied for synagogue

By David Weber, Staff Writer

NEWTON — After grappling with the issue procedurally and ideologically for a number of weeks, the Board of Aldermen has finally denied permission to Congregation Shaarei Tefillah in its proposal to build a synagogue at 841 Commonwealth Avenue.

In an unusually solemn and measured debate Monday night, one alderman after another rose to say how much he or she had agonized over this decision. After 13 members said their piece, a crucial special permit for a parking waiver was denied by a 15-6 vote.

Site plan approval for the synagogue, which, in the opinion of the city's Law Department, was dependent on the parking waiver being granted, was denied a short time later by a 16-5 margin.

Attorney Jason A. Rosenberg, representing the congregation, said afterward that the board "has left the congregation's members and families no choice but to proceed under the statutes into court."

She'll 'paint' your home

By Lauren McFalls, Assistant News Editor

Jill Karlin is a compulsive artist. In the basement rooms of her parents' Oak Hill home, she runs from art project to art project, displaying a multitude of flower paintings, hand-painted T-shirts, and "portraits" of houses.

"I am a total addict," she says, as she shows off about a dozen water-color paintings she completed during a recent vacation to Breckenridge, Colorado.

While skiing at the mountain resort, she carried a miniature watercolor paint set in her pocket which she would whip out between ski runs.

"What else are you going to do on a ski lift?" she asks.

Now, Karlin seems to be making a success of her compulsion. She's completed huge watercolor paintings of orchids for the Meridien Hotel in Boston and for the Waverly Hotel in Atlanta, Georgia. She has created a special lettering, called "Body Type" — drawings of people's bodies shaped into letters — for T-shirts.

Last fall she was commissioned by the Massachusetts Arts Lottery to paint "house portraits" of Newton's historical homes. In fact, she is so diversified that one of her lawyers described her as a "mini conglomerate," she says.

In addition to a diversified artist's life, she goes off in a million different directions in her personal affairs as well. Following the whirlwind tour of the paintings in her home, Karlin settles into a couch and proceeds to explain that she recently had recovered from a fall off a cliff in Mexico, which laid her up for a year in a body cast.

After a house she was renting in California burned to the ground, destroying all her possessions, her aunt and uncle invited her to crew for them on their yacht during a race off the Mexican coast. Following the race, she went for a drink with a friend and was walking down the steps of a hotel when she suddenly fell into a crevice where the stairway had been dynamited to make way for a road.

War against drunk driving hits new fronts

Plea from nurses who CARE

By Robert K. Newman, Staff Writer

NEWTON — With the graduation season approaching, Pamela Bell is dreading "the nightly carnage" of teenagers that will roll through Worcester's University of Massachusetts Medical Center.

"Distraught parents ..., innocent victims killed or maimed ..., friends lost forever ..., aunts, uncles, spouses, brothers and sisters left behind ...," Bell spoke in phrases as she described the atmosphere that develops following drunk driving accidents.

Working as an emergency room nurse in a hectic city hospital, Bell has witnessed white sheets draped over countless young corpses and listened to the shrieks of grief-stricken relatives following "yet another drinking and driving accident."

"Weekend nights in the average Emergency Room are dreaded by those of us who are there," Bell told a group of Newton Catholic High School students last week. "We see too many deaths, crushed lives and crippling injuries that destroy thousands of lives."

The horror that haunts nurses, prompted Bell and her colleagues to launch the Westborough based C.A.R.E. — Cancel Alcohol Related Emergencies — Don't Drink and Drive.

"We established the Emergency Nurses Care Program because it is impossible to leave our anger, frustration and torment at the door," the group's co-founder said. "And because we want to share

Test in bar, not in car

By David S. Martin, Staff Writer

The latest video machine springing up in area bars is not a revamped version of Pac Man or Donkey Kong, but a breathalizer. It is meant as anything but a game.

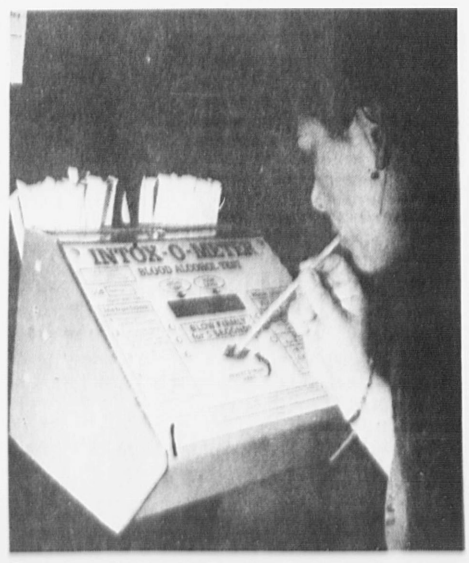

For 50 cents, patrons at Thackeray's Table & Tap in Waltham, The Boston Fish House in Newton Upper Falls and the Backyard in Newton Centre can blow into an Intox-O-Meter to find out if they've had one drink too many.

"It's a serious thing," said Jim DeFonzo, night manager at the Boston Fish House. "If nothing else, it's a reminder, 'Hey, have I had too much to drink?'"

At Thackaray's the breathalizer is also used to settle disputes between a customer who wants to keep drinking and a bartender who thinks the patron should be "shut off," said manager Pamela Thompson.

Unlike Pac Man and Donkey Kong, the Intox-O-Meter requires absolutely no skill. All the user has to do is blow into a disposable straw for five seconds.

Issues and answers in Ward 8

on development saying, "When I was on the board, I provided a fiery and often controversial viewpoint on this issue, but the voters were always well represented. We've slacked off since then."

All the contenders except Katz indicated that they also saw overdevelopment, a change in the city's residential character and more strain on existing traffic and sewer systems as the "most crucial" issues facing residents all over the Garden City.

"Multi-building should come to a halt until intelligent planning can be done to halt this urbanization trend," Walsh stated, suggesting a stance favoring a moratorium such as that endorsed by the Newton Neighborhood Network, of which she is a member.

Citing the same citywide concern, Shaevel indicated he thought "a political solution is possible, if enough discussion and facts are put forward." He stated that he thought expediting the Village Stabilization Study might be the best way to insure "an acceptable balance between the need to preserve our residential character and the need to provide appropriate spaces for commercial developments ...."

When asked what the "most crucial" citywide issue is, Katz broke with his opponents and stated his main concern was with "finalizing plans for a central library."

Dealing specifically with the Mt. Ida and Lacy Estate proposals, all four candidates stated that they found little to recommend them and lots to make them appear ill-advised.

Shaevel, who once was a community representative on the advisory board for the Mt. Ida project, stated that he opposes the project because "it is two-and-a-half times more dense than anything in the neighborhood."

Passman reiterated his concern for maintaining open space and avoiding further sewage and traffic impact on the Mt. Ida neighborhood.

Walsh stated, "The Mt. Ida proposal is frightening to me." She cited "the massive density, the change of use and the concept of a college being a 'landlord'" as her main concerns.

Katz once again broke with his opponents when he said, over and above the concerns mentioned by his colleagues, he questioned the "reputability" of the Mt. Ida proposal.

Jack Antaramian's proposal for developing the Lacy Estate was roundly scored for being too big and too dense. Katz commented that "no variance should be granted as there is too already too much traffic on Nahanton Street." Walsh stated that she would "like to see the entire front parcel kept intact."

Variations in the responses of the four Ward 8 candidates increased when they were asked what "one, concrete contribution" they would hope to accomplish if elected. Katz stated he would like "to take an active role in re-opening the Oak Hill School property as an educational facility."

Walsh said she would work on "some type of truck exclusion so residential streets of Ward 8 would not continually be used as 'cut-throughs'" through Oak Hill to commercial areas just across the line in Needham. She added, "I would also like to see the constant threat of multi-development put to an end .... It would certainly save residents from always having to defend the quality of residential living that they have invested in."

Passman stated he hoped his contribution would be to give the ward "the strong, independent and effective voice our community needs so desperately." He also commented that he would work to "increase support on the board for issues that are of importance to our community. It was unfortunate that some members of the board showed little concern for our community regarding the re-use of the Oak Hill School."

Shaevel stated he hoped to strike a balance between commercial and residential land use. "Given my experience as a neighborhood activist, my citywide experience as a member of the Economic Development Commission and my experience as a lawyer dealing with governmental agencies, I believe I am well qualified to apply my expertise to this issue," he stated.

When asked what best qualifies each candidate for the job of ward aldermen, Walsh and Shaevel both cited their long history of involvement in "grass roots" political activism in their neighborhoods.

Walsh stressed her "consistency; my consistent interest over a long span of time and my consistent efforts to maintain the residential quality of life in this area." She added her belief that "government was established to serve and respond to those who support it, that the position of ward alderman was meant to bridge the gap between the people of the area and the municipality and to be a responsive listening post to those people."

Shaevel stated, "I have spent the last 14 years working within the neighborhood and learning how to deal with issues such as land use or school policy from both a people and governmental perspective." He added that "by personality and professional experience, I believe I am able to argue positions, but also recognize the means and manner of finding acceptable consensus."

Passman stated that what best qualified him for the office was his "mature, common sense approach to the issues. I vow never to be on both sides of an issue," he added. "My decisions will be made independently by gathering the facts and listening to community input."

Pointing out what best qualifies him for the Ward 8 post, Katz once again broke from the pattern of his opponents, indicating what might prove to be a distinctive style in the campaign. "I don't have any obligations to organizations or family," the bachelor stated, "which would prevent me from returning phone calls and providing the dedication, open mind and time which I felt was necessary for good representation in my previous term of office."

Katz also pointed out that, during his previous term on the board, he garnered the best attendance record of any one of the 24 members.

Of the four candidates, only Shaevel and Passman promised that, regardless of the outcome of the special election in June, they would definitely be running again in November.

A second debate between the four candidates will take place at Temple Beth Avodah, Puddingstone Lane, on Thursday night, May 23.

Portrait of an artist

Pausing, Karlin remarks, "You're looking at me dumbfounded, thinking 'Is this girl for real?' Yes, I am."

Professionally speaking, Karlin, 30, got her start at the Rhode Island School of Design. After graduating, she entered the Boston University School of Fine Arts for a masters degree.

In 1975, she spent a year in Paris at L'Academie de Beaux Arts and the following year she studied with the Italian sculptor MANZU.

Karlin also taught art classes at the Stowe School in Vermont, and served for three months as an artist-in-residence in Saratoga, California.

She started painting house portraits in 1977 while living on Martha's Vineyard because "a lady lived there who wanted a picture of her house," she explains.

Ultimately, that is what the lady got, but much more. In painting the picture, Karlin decided to borrow an idea from her mother, who had needlepointed pictures of family members' hobbies into a piano bench cushion.

The young artist researched the home's history and interviewed the residents to determine "what was dear to them," she says.

When the painting was complete, it was bordered by panels depicting memorable features, hobbies or pets that residents connected with the home. "It's like a patchwork quilt," she explains. "It's so personal, it's so cute!"

Karlin continues to paint the portraits today, but she diversified her talents last year when she was commissioned by the hotel in Atlanta to paint a picture which had "the same feeling as I put in my paintings of nudes — a very light and airy feeling."

She achieved this through painting orchids. Now, these paintings are not only hanging in the Atlanta and Boston hotels, but they were recently on display at a silk flower shop and gallery called "Blossoms" in Newton Highlands and are being featured June 6 at the Laughlin-Winkler Gallery in Boston.

Karlin is also planning another trip to California, where her flower paintings will be featured in yet another show. Barring the possibility of another traumatic experience along the way, the outcome of the contest between hers and other artworks at the show should be far from a cliffhanger.

City fails in bilingual ed

By Robert K. Newman
Staff Writer

NEWTON — State officials have given the School Department 30 days to address alleged violations concerning the city's bilingual education program.

The state Department of Education reported this week that the Newton school system for the last four years has knowingly violated the state law by failing to instruct immigrant students in their native languages.

Evidence gathered in January by a state audit team revealed that Newton has not provided transitional bilingual education for 80 percent of the limited-English speaking students. Education departmant officials called on Supt. John Strand to develop a plan of action within 30 days to correct the 22 non-compliance issues and 12 problem areas highlighted in the report.

"Educational services for these children are not in compliance with the regulations and guidelines of the state law because English, not the native language of the student, is used as the medium of instruction throughout the program," said Ernest J. Mazzone, director of the state Bureau of Transitional Bilingual Education.

School Committee Chairman Leonard Gentile said the city will be faced with reviewing this program in the near future.

"These are very serious issues," Gentile said.

All tolled, 307 limited-English proficient children are enrolled in the English as a second language program (ESL), according to school department records.

In 1973, the city launched its bilingual education program following the passage of the Massachusetts Transitional Bilingual Education law. The statute mandates cities and towns to hire an instructor to teach students in a foreign language when the school population is composed of more than 20 students in any language group. The report concludes, that during the first eight years of the program, the city attempted to meet this requirement.

After 90 interviews and a review of school documents, the auditors said that native language instruction ranges from 0 to 4 hours weekly for the 235 limited English proficient students.

"The audit team was dismayed by the irreverence with which the school system treated the mandate to provide transitional education to limited English proficient children," Mazzone stated. "The team consensus is that the school system, by its open disregard of the state mandate,

> "The audit team was dismayed by the irreverence with which the school system treated the mandate.
> Ernest J. Mazzone

preempts the rights of children and parents to equal access specified under law."

Lawrence Annett, assistant superintendent for curriculum, said the results of the report were prompted by a "difference in educational philosophy."

The report supports Annett's contention that "there are a number of effective curriculum development efforts, but curriculum development is focused on ESL methodology and resources, not on bilingual education."

"It's our belief that the primary responsibility is to get children comfortable using English to the degree it does not interfere with their understanding the subject matter," said Annett. "My belief is a straight bilingual approach works to the detriment of the student."

School records indicate that three language groups — Mandarin Chinese (20 students), Italian (54) and Spanish (33) are instructed in their native tongues.

But the city does not provide native language instruction for 22 youngsters whose first language is Cantonese, 21 Japanese students, 19 Hebrew speaking students and 17 students whose first language is Farsi.

According to questionaires filled out by parents and students, perceptions of the ESL program are positive. However, on-site interviews indicate that neither parents nor students had been informed of transitional bilingual education programs or their rights and responsibilities as outlined in state guidelines.

The report also asserts that parents do not receive information about school activities, student progress reports in the native language and in English.

"Parents did express a desire to be more involved in the school program ... however without a regular schedule of meetings and without school information in the native languages meaningful parental involvement can only be minimal," Mazzone said.

Cleanup

Liz KLeitch, left, and Jamie Haywood joined in with more than 60 members and friends of the Bulloughs Pond Association to mark the beginning of the city's Beautification Week with a communal effort that routed years of trash out of the pond.

Budget finally OK'd

By Edward Cafasso
Staff Writer

NEWTON — The Board of Aldermen last week ended its deliberations on the city's fiscal 1986 budget after securing significant assurances from Mayor Theodore D. Mann regarding the continued operation of the Rumford Avenue transfer-haul station.

By a 20-2 vote, the full board placed back into the budget the $1.98 million annual payment to the GSX Corporation of New England, which operates the facility, that had been cut by a previous 12-9 tally.

Once that lingering dispute was resolved, the city's 23 aldermen voted unanimously to approve a $99.5 million city budget for the fiscal year beginning July 1.

The final budget figure, thanks to a number of additions and deletions during the past week, comes in at about $1.4 million less than the $100.9 million in departmental appropriations suggested by Mann on April 1.

Several assurances that increased the board's role in administrative decisions about the volume of rubbish processed at Rumford Avenue and the routes of truck traffic into and out of the site helped end the furor that erupted earlier in the week.

In a letter Mann read to aldermen at the start of the meeting, he said the station "cannot and will not become a regional transfer-haul facility."

"The amount of solid-waste processed at Rumford Avenue will not, under any circumstances, exceed 85,000 tons annually," Mann said.

The mayor also assured aldermen that Newton and Waltham will be the only two communities allowed to dispose of solid waste at Rumford Avenue if Waltham decides to accept GSX as its collection agency.

If Waltham decides to discontinue its use of the station, Mann stipulated that "another community may be allowed to use the facility" as long as the total processing volume remains within the 85,000-ton limit and related truck traffic sticks to the routes currently decsribed in the contract.

A final proviso added that Public Works Commissioner James L. Hickey "will not make any changes" in annual tonnage or traffic patterns "without first seeking the concurrence of the board."

During a five-minute recess in the session, Mann was persuaded to add one final assurance regarding the chance that Waltham does not choose GSX when its makes a bid decision next Wednesday.

Life insurance

A simple test – one that's safe, swift and painless – could save your life. It's a mammogram, and it can detect breast cancer in the earliest stages, when it's still easy to treat and cure.

The American Cancer Society recommends that women have a baseline mammogram between the ages of 35 and 39 – younger if there's a family history of cancer – and one every year or so from 40 to 49. After a woman reaches age 50, she should have one every year.

So check with your doctor. Then come into Precheck/ The Mammography Center.

If you're a woman over 35, make it a policy to have a mammogram at Precheck – a life insurance policy.

Untangling the Snarl on Route 128

Too often, government waits for a crisis to take any action.

But the Dukakis Administration is showing foresight in its push to untangle the traffic on Route 128 before it suffers permanent gridlock.

State Transportation Secretary Frederick Salvucci has said that commercial and industrial development in 1985 and 1986 alone will add 20,000 new commuters to the Route 128 equation.

First of the moves Salvucci contemplates is allowing motorists to travel in the breakdown lanes between Route 9 and Route 24. That stretch of the superhighway passes through Needham, Dedham and Westwood and is the only section of Route 128 having three rather than four lanes.

Eventually, the state plans to add another lane, taking the land from the median strip.

Salvucci is soliciting cooperation from communities and businesses flanking Route 128. He hopes to encourage more car pooling, shuttles, van pools, public transportation, shifting of work schedules and other initiatives to take the pressure off the highway.

More importantly, the transportation secretary hopes to instill a new mentality about Route 128 with community leaders. He wants selectmen and mayors to think of the highway as their 'Main Street' rather than the local hinterland.

Thirty years ago, when it built Route 128, the state naturally bought its right of way along town borders and in the least congested sections of the cities and towns affected.

Since then, commercial growth has spread along the sides of the highway, radiating farther and farther inward toward the center of town each year. Meanwhile, bedroom neighborhoods have been expanding outward from town centers.

Over the past decade or so, the two growth trends have overlapped, with each laying claim to the little land left in greater Boston. The competing claims have spawned a campaign of skirmishes between developers and homeowner groups reminiscent of the range wars in the old West.

In the war between homeowners and developers, the developers have had the money and the power to generate local tax revenues. But homeowners have had the power over local elections and zoning policy.

Among the homeowners, traffic has been one of the prime arguments against commercial growth. That means traffic on local tributaries of the big highway, not the highway itself.

Successful car pooling, staggering of work hours and improved public transportation along Route 128 could be the very keys to freeing up the local streets.

Salvucci's main public relations mission now is to convince homeowner groups that this is one instance where what is good for the business people is good for their neighbors, too.

Two modest proposals

New tack on traffic trauma

By Kevin C. Kennedy

A few modest proposals aimed at improving two traffic situations that are bad — real bad — and getting worse all the time.

The problems areas are the infamous intersection of no less than seven historical cow paths in West Newton Square, and Route 128, especially the area around Route 9, where it loses a lane.

Bob McCarthy, owner of McCarthy's Exxon, just east of the square on Washington Street has a plan for redesigning the Urban Systems Project aimed at easing West Newton's traffic woes. There is a subparagraph to "Murphy's Law" that says, "Every man has a plan that won't work," but several factors suggest that the axiom does not apply to McCarthy.

In the first place, he is not the only one to speak of the plan. Some elected officials have even been known to bandy it about. Secondly, the plan itself seems to have a lot of intrinsic worth.

McCarthy would have the city move the Police Department and Newton District Court over to the abandoned Warren Jr. High building. There is plenty of room for both there. Holding cells would be located in the basement. There is even room for the cops' firing range. Plenty of parking. Direct access to Washington Street, one of the city's main east-west arteries. Less than a city block to Commonwealth Avenue.

Removing the police and court traffic from West Newton Square would undoubtedly have an ameliorating effect on the problem that has existed there since one cow bumped into another a couple of centuries ago.

But, wait! Here's the good part. Remove the police station and the courthouse from the north side of Washington Street and you just might have the opening you need for a decent Urban Systems Project that will really realign the traffic patterns in the square. The only existing project has targeted poor, little Cherry Street and the savior of the square. But Cherry Street can not bear the burden that is being asked of it, and we do not need to wait for the hue and cry of digruntled residents to tell us that.

If the land on which the police station and the courthouse are now located could not be useful in correcting the problem, then we should block off the square and officially turn it into the used car lot it resembles at certain times every day.

With that age-old problem solved, let's move out to Route 128.

Could Warren Jr. High be the key to unlocking the traditional gridlock in West Newton Square?

The state's Secretary of Transportation Fred Salvucci is making the rounds of area newspapers trying to generate a new awareness of Route 128's role in our economy. He has asked us to stop thinking of it as "the edge of town," where you park such undesirable elements of the community as the town dump, and to start thinking of it as the "Main Street" of a larger community.

According to Salvucci's estimates, some parts of 128 already rate up there with the Southeast Expressway for confusion and congestion. The amount of office space along "America's Technology Highway" already approximates that of downton Boston. And estimates of further growth in the near future boggle the mind when the square footage of office space is translated into working people and the cars they need to get to their jobs.

For now, Salvucci has a few band aids. He is encouraging an aggressive revival of car pooling and the "Caravan" program that has withered recently. He is pushing for staggered work hours, so everyone is not coming or going at the same time. The breakdown lane is being opened up for traffic at peak hours.

In the future, Salvucci predicts that another lane will be added, taking part of the median strip. But, even with those changes planned, Salvucci sees a dim future for the circumferential artery of greater Boston. He sees some hope in the fact that his department is getting a head start on the problem. But the ultimate solution is still somewhere waiting in the wings.

Might we suggest a plan that was formulated in jest? It appeared in an April Fool's edition of a Boston weekly, and, according to many denizens of Beacon Hill, it took a great number of politicians, state officials and journalists by surprise.

The spoof purported to reveal a plan the administration had hidden away, but was working hard on. Code named "The Silver Lining," the plan called for a high speed monorail zipping up and down the median of Route 128 from Lynn to Quincy and back again. There would be a dozen terminals along the way, with the largest planned for Auburndale, where Route 128 intersects with the Mass Pike.

Expansion of the Riverside "T" station was an integral part of the plan, and a modest addition of 2,000 rooms to the Marriott was suggested.

It was a great spoof in that it caught everyone off guard. We all fell for it. But, look closely. What made it such a good April Fool's joke might also make it a decent, far-in-the-future plan. To a lot of people, it made a lot of sense.

Remember, 50 years ago, they would have laughed if you predicted the traffic problems we are laboring with now. Why rule out a possible solution just because people laughed at it?

Finnegan blindsides Duke

By Loring Swaim

The state auditor exposed a raw nerve in the Dukakis administration last week. He caught Dukakis people off balance–and they don't like being blindsided.

That doesn't happen often to Dukakis' well-oiled machine. You could almost hear the gears grinding as officials tried to escape criticism, minimize the damage, regain initiative and cast the controversy in a favorable light.

From the very beginning, Mike Dukakis never liked Proposition 2½. When the idea of limiting local property taxes first surfaced, he announced Bay Staters were too smart to fall for it. When it passed overwhelmingly on statewide ballots, he pledged artfully "to make it work as it should."

One of Prop. 2½'s less publicized codicils is the requirement that any future state mandate on a city or town must be accompanied by state funds for implementation before it would be valid.

The state auditor, an agent independent of the administration, was made the enforcer of this codicil. He added a new Division of Local Mandates in his office. This made additional sense, given Auditor John Finnegan's own personal conviction from his days as House chairman of Ways and Means that the state cavalierly imposes programs on cities and towns but rarely foots the bill.

Since January 1981, therefore, as new programs have been enacted (or new regulations promulgated)–like keeping polls open longer; new rules for dog euthenasia, new suicide prevention procedures at police stations; bussing kids to private and parochial schools; etc.– state funding is included, up front. And the Supreme Judicial Court has upheld.

Seems that two years ago the Department of Environmental Quality Engineering ordered certain towns to secure their ailing landfill dumps by installing impervious liners to prevent leaching into underground water.

The Town of Norfolk dutifully compiled. After some research, it then handed its $144,000 tab to DEQE.

Finnegan consulted counsel and ruled that, yes, the orders to Norfolk fell under Prop 2½ so the state had to cough up.

No way was Dukakis' first reaction to the assertion. For the state to pay for pollution control might encourage local officials "not to carry out their responsibilities," an aide huffed. We'll appeal, others threatened. We are seeking power to assess polluters directly, including towns, still others warned!

Replied Finnegan calmly, it's clear as crystal; the law's the law. don't confuse this issue: it's not pollution; it's a state mandate a la Prop 2½, period.

More is at stake in this showdown than a mere $144,000 bill. Six more communities are planning to ship bills to the Commonwealth. The eventual pricetag for insulating existing landfills may exceed $100 million. Many dumps already bulge at their seams. Technology is exploring exotic new techniques to cope with trash. Each day of delay endangers vital groundwater supplies which, once polluted, are irretrievable.

Environmentalists are siding wih Dukakis; municipal officials side with Finnegan. Emotions are rising. Dukakis partisans call a bum rap the impression he is dragging his feet on pollution control.

The administration then shifted ground away from 2½, floating ideas like offering incentive grants to communities which improve their landfills or go regional.

But why duck the simple legal issue Finnegan is raising, that, like it or not, these landfill orders happen to fall under the category of state mandate, so the state must pay? Why pervert the issue defensively as an environmental one?

Finnegan stands tall against governor.
File photo

Why not, for instance, simply set aside some of the $290 million surplus revenue windfall of landfill liners as an unforseen expense– and get on with the job?

Any number of reasons to like Larry Bird

By Thomas J. Murphy

A refreshing rustic he is, unspoiled after six years in the big time. He is truly the hick from french lick. Unlike some egocentrics in the upper tiers of professional sports, he talks to the press. They quote him gratefully, loose grammar and all, a delightful commentary on the inner workings of the NBA.

This is Larry Bird, the likes of which Boston and the entire play-for-play spectrum has never seen. No more penetrating analysis of a star's performance anywhere can be found than in writings of the Boston Media Corps. Frequently they cut too deeply. SOme writers make a career of criticism. Overly sensitive athletes go into a shell.

But not Larry the Loquacious, a delight to the working stiffs who do the day-by-day chronicle. More importantly, he is a great benefactor to the fans. For the pro sports addict, being privy to the inner thoughts of a superstar is like those tell-all gossip stories from the entertainment world to another species.

Larry the Loquacious

The Indiana nonpareil tells it as it is. "Sure we were awful," he will say after a defeat like that in Cleveland. He doesn't spare himself or teammates when the Celtics go flat. Still, his optimism and confidence in himself are always there. "Come the fourth quarter, that's my quarter and that's when the shots start falling in," for example, his comment following the come-from-doldrums 106-98 win over the Sixers.

A remarkable fellow this man, Larry Bird, already in the Boston Hall of Legends with Ted Williams, Bobby Orr, Eddie Shore, Bob Cousy and Bill Russell. His greatness has another dimension. He plays while hurting, silently, even covertly reticent on this score, and adjusting to give maximum value to the team.

"Shucks," he might tell the press pursuers, "It's nothing to get excited about. That's what I'm paid for." Another reason for Boston Fandom's love affair with Larry the Loquacious.

Save Newton Centre Station

To the Editor:

It is not new news that the Newton Centre Railroad Station and the baggage and express building are listed on the National Register of historic places. Designed by the architectural firm of Shepley, Rutan, and Coolidge, successors to Henry Hobson Richardson's practice, these railroad buildings represent more than the Richardsonian Romanesque style. This station symbolizes the single most important historic trend that brought the development of Newton from a group of loosely connected villages to a united city.

It is ironic that during National Preservation Week, May 12-19, construction by right has begun on the baggage and express building. The proposed plans indicate that the building will be moved and doubled in size. Growth and change is inevitable in a desirable City like Newton but there are alternative ways to treat historic buildings such that their original scale and materials are not destroyed.

At a time when the public and private sectors are making efforts to work together, specifically in the examples of the restoration of the Newton Highlands Railroad Station and the proposed rehabilitation of the Newton Centre Station Building, it is unfortunate that public and private individuals and agencies could not coordinate efforts to preserve the entire complex at the Newton Centre Railroad Station.

Drive safely for her sake

To the Editor:

Summer is just around the corner!!! The beautiful weather of the summer months often accounts for the vast amounts of parties, proms and other social gatherings which become even more abundant as the summer draws nearer. With this in mind, I would like to address a very important issue which deals with all of these events — SAFE driving.

It is a known fact that each year many people are killed and seriously injured because of failure to wear safety belts as well as because of drunk driving accidents. Right now, drunk driving is the leading cause of death for people between the ages of 19 and 25. This horrifying statistic becomes even higher as the summer months approach.

On account of this statistic as well as many other horrible statistics of this nature, I would like to ask and urge each and every person who will be travelling on the roads in the upcoming months as well as in the future not to become a statistic!! Please buckle up and drive soberly because YOUR life, MY life and the lives of many others may depend on it!!

A posthumous perspective

The following letter from Vietnam was first published in October, 1970. On May 26, 1985, 15 years later, a monument with the author's name on it will be dedicated on Washington Street, across from Our Lady's Church.

To the Editor:

I am writing this letter to tell people how Vietnam is in the eyes of a soldier over here.

First, I would like to say that Vietnam is an experience you have to go through to understand. No one can write to you their feelings of happiness at a job well done, or fear during a firefight, or sorrow when your best buddy gets killed. You have to be there to know what it is like.

Vietnam is a beautiful country. The hills are so green. When it is not raining, the sky is so blue, birds fluttering all around and flowers of every color growing wild. The children are a world in themselves. When you ride by a village, children chase the tanks yelling, "Chop Chop" (food). You stop and give them crackers or candy and they smile a universal smile. Communicating with them is not difficult, even though they speak very little English. Often, at times, I'll put one of the kids on my knee or on the tank and everyone will laugh and joke.

My hair, being only half of an inch long, gets lots of laughs and comments.

The children give you souvenirs, back rubs and sometimes information in return, and everyone is happy, at least for a little while.

But then you wave goodbye and move back into the war. Sometimes it's hard to remember there is a war going on, but you see war's battered faces everywhere: burned out villages, blown up bridges, bodies lifeless as coal. Still you push on, and when it's all over, you're glad you were there.

You remember all the fellows, celebrating together, working together. You remember how amazed you were when you entered your first village and saw a lamp made from coke cans, houses made of clay and mud, tools of wood and beds of bamboo. Such is life to them and they're happy with it.

Vietnam is something different to everyone, but this is how it is to me — one lonely soldier fighting for peace.

'Not To Worry'

If you're choking on smog
in the city,
And the water you're drinking
is vile,
If you dine now and then
on carcinogen,
Don't worry about it,
just smile!
Remember that munition makers
Protect you from enemy stealth;
We must give our thanks
For nukes, subs, and tanks
And bury concerns about health.

Young to BC grads: Follow Flutie's lead

By Howard Altman
Staff Writer

NEWTON — With the sun shining overhead, 2352 Boston College students dressed in black caps and gowns marched against a stiff breeze onto the astro-turf carpet of Alumni Stadium to take part in the school's 109th commencement ceremony last Monday.

Accompanied by the school band's rendition of "Pomp and Circumstance," the grads filed into their seats to listen to commencement speaker Andrew Young give a pep talk about the future by talking about leaving his school, Howard University in Washington D.C.

"When I was driving down from Howard to my home in New Orleans," the Atlanta mayor said, "I was afraid to stop in Georgia, because back then it was the worst place for a young black man to be alone at night."

Young pointed to the irony of his memories, saying, "if someone told me back then that I'd represent Georgia in the Congress, represent the United States at the United Nations and then be mayor of the capital city of Georgia, I would have recommended them to the nearest mental hospital."

Referring to the man who made the BC football team a national obsession, Young asked the grads to "never give up hope for the future."

"If Doug Flutie could succeed before time ran out, you can too."

In addition to his pep talk, Young asked his audience if the type of long-term low-interest loans given by the United States to the governments of Germany and Japan after World War II could be applied to "people in our own cities, slums, deserts and barren wastelands to feed the hungry and put all of America back to work."

Young wasn't the only speaker to call upon the memory of former BC quarterback Doug Flutie. Before flying to Rome to meet with Pope John Paul II, Boston Archbishop and Cardinal-designate Bernard F. Law congratulated the grads and said he was "excited to play on the same field as Doug Flutie."

Flutie, who flew in from Denver where his New Jersey Generals played Sunday night, said he was "disappointed" at not graduating with his classmates.

"I have mixed emotions," Flutie said amid a mass of students clad in black gowns and caps pressing for the exit. "I was glad I made it here, because the hardest part about turning pro was not being able to graduate with all my friends."

Flutie, who will return to BC next fall to complete his requirements and join his old team as assistant coach, looked around the crowded stadium he called home for four years and said "it's good to be back."

While graduation is usually thought of as a time for men and women to leave the comforts of university life and enter society, it is no longer the exclusive domain of the young. 66-year-old Newton resident Mary O'Doherty proved that by earning a bachelor of arts degree in English from BC's Evening College.

After attending classes on and off for 11 years, O'Doherty said she was "thrilled" at finally graduating.

The mother of seven and grandmother of six said she enrolled at BC "because of my kids."

"I have four children who graduated from Boston College, and they urged me to try it myself. They said after helping them attend school that I deserved to do it for myself, so I did."

When O'Doherty took her first class back in 1974, she was already well aquainted with BC.

"In 1972 I became the first woman to work in the BC mail room. It was an exciting challenge, because I had to do the same work as the men, but you never know what you can do until you try it."

O'Doherty said that while it was difficult raising a family and going to school at the same time, her family encouraged her to continue.

"Everyone was great, my whole family helped out. My husband was so good to me that BC even gave him an award."

Synagogue permit is finally denied

Congregation President Dr. Alan S. Rockoff said, "They can vote against us, but they can't make us go away."

Alderman Wendell R. Bauckman, who has served continuously on the board since he was first elected in 1942, said he has seen many issues come and go over the last 43 years, "but none has been as difficult as this one."

Alderman Matthew Jefferson echoed him, saying, "I don't believe there has been a petition that's come before this board since I've been here that I've agonized over more."

Alderman Richard J. Bullwinkle said, "One can tell by the seriousness of the discussion that no one is not going to make a serious vote... This is not a case of good versus bad, but of relative goods."

The board's difficulty stemmed from a state law designed to prevent a municipality from discriminating through its zoning ordinances againt religious and educational institutions. The law basically said that the Board of Aldermen could not deny the congregation permission to build on a site most of the aldermen and many of the neighbors surrounding the site considered much to small for its intended use.

But the city has an ordinance requiring places of assembly to have one on-site parking space for every persons that hall can legally hold. In the case of Congregation Shaarei Tefillah, that would mean about 100 parking spaces on a site which could contain only a fraction of that number.

In trying to toe the legal line, the board last month decided to approve the site plan and drop the required amount of parking spaces to 30, knowing full well that the 9,000 square-foot site could not hold even that amount.

Ironically, the Orthodox congregation's members maintained throughout the controversy that the very reason the site was the only one feasible, from their viewpoint, was that their religious practices required them to walk to sabbath and high holiday worship services.

However, before the members cast their vote on the measure, a motion was made to recommit the matter to the Land Use Committee with hope that a workable compromise could be reached between the congregation members and their neighbors.

A number of committee members and area residents were concerned that on occasions when congregation members were not required to walk to the synagogue, parking and traffic in the area would be come become a problem, and perhaps a danger. They also said that members Congregation Beth El-Atereth Israel, another Orthodox synagogue in the area, drove their cars to services regularly and wondered how they could be sure that would not be the case with Congregation Shaarei Tefillah.

The congregation, which had split from Congregation Beth El-Atereth Israel in 1983 because of "differences in intensity of religious practice," according to Rockoff, countered by saying they were being unfairly singled out. They said that, aside from Congregation Mishkan Tefila, no religious institution in the city met the on-site parking standard to which they were being held.

Proposals in committee to limit the use of the synagogue either did not go far enough to satisfy those opposed to synagogue or went so far that congregation members felt the synagogue, as limited, would not be a proper religious center for them.

No compromise was reached and the proposal voted on last night by the board was basically the same as had been before them last month, except that the reduction in parking spaces from 100 to 30 was removed.

In debate Monday night, Jefferson said, "We've been called religious bigots and small-minded bureaucrats (by a Boston Herald editorial), but I don't see how we can make any compromises that are suitable. The neighborhood residents who opposed (to the synagogue) are also Jewish, and I do not believe they aren't sympathetic to this issue, but they have a higher priority."

Alderman George Mansfield, who had worked with the congregation in trying to find alternative sites, said he felt he "no longer has a choice, but regrettably feel I have to vote with the committee."

Mansfield said that, while the matter is likely to go to court, he hoped the congregation would continue to look for alternative sites.

"They're here. They're not going to go away. This is their home," he said.

Nurses haunted by the horrors our thoughts, experiences and concerns with the driver to show them what can happen."

Prior to the annual spring revelry — when students are tempted to indulge in alcoholic beverages — Bell's roadshow travels to high schools throughout the state carrying the message of safety. The program, Bell said, is designed to "shock" students into thinking.

"We want you to hurt in the safety of this room," Bell said. "We want you to be shocked, angry and hopeful. Or at least concerned enough to think."

"If we could do one talk and make one child think twice about getting behind a wheel drunk, we'd be successful," she added.

According to Bell, 2,000 teenage drivers are killed annually while some 40,000 more are injured or disfigured for life. Of the 25,000 persons who die each year in drunk driving accidents, 5,000 of those victims are teenagers. Studies also show that an estimated 60 percent of the fatally injured teenage drivers were found to have alcohol in their blood.

"That means that before this day is out 14 young men and women between the ages of 16 and 19 will die in driving accidents," Bell said, adding that 329 more will be injured. "Don't let you or your friends become another statistic. Don't drink and drive."

Listening to Bell's appeal, students sat in awe. The powerful speaking nurse flashed slides of blood stained, permanently paralyzed bodies on a large screen.

"This 40-year-old man hit a tree driving 90 miles an hour," Bell explained. "He has a blood clot on his brain."

Students let out a harmonious groan as they viewed a table that holds a person in traction — face up or face down — for three months at a time.

"This is the only way to heal the paralysis caused by the accident," she said.

Dee Akerly of Westborough, who survived a drinking and driving accident, accompanied the nurses to explain to students why she is strapped to and supported by crutches.

While driving with her two daughters on Jan. 6, 1983, Akerly's car was struck by a drunk driver, permanently crippling one of her legs.

"I'm not hear to ask you to feel sorry for me," Akerly told the assembly. "We would like to tell you to make a decision."

Akerly recalled her active life as the owner of a small plant business prior to the accident and her restrained activity following the collision.

"You take for granted the ability to take a walk," she said. "I can't do that or work anymore."

Students remained silent while Akerly explained the physical and psychological pain that has been inflicted on herself and her two daughters as a result of the accident.

"We all have such a tendency to deny that these things happen," Akerly said after the presentation. "Nobody wants to admit that it happened.

"But you can turn a real bad thing into a positive thing," she added. "Just think."

County tax down again

NEWTON — Mayor Theodore Mann, in his capacity as head of the Middlesex County Advisory Board, has announced that this year's projected county tax has come in under the state's prediction for the fourth year in a row.

The total county assessment, which shows up in the city's property tax bills, has dropped for the fourth year in a row, ever since the advisory board took the reins of the county budget.

This year's $15 million estimated levy supports a $40 million budget which provides for the maintenance of all services at the current level.

Court rentals, money the commonwealth pays the county for occupancy of county-owned courthouses, is being paid at the actual lease figure for the first time since 1978. Mann urged judges and clerk magistrates to lobby for payment of the past due rent, which totals more than $20 million.

Jewels & Gems

BY CAROL
THE GOLD LADY

SYNTHETIC AND IMITATION STONES

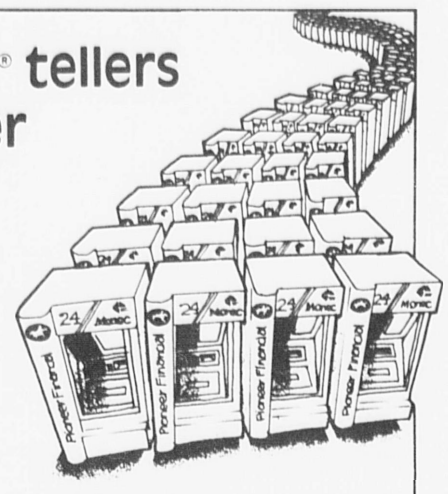

Natural stones have always been in relatively limited supply and hence, rather costly. As a result, man has tried again and again to produce them himself. The ancient Romans and Greeks used glass to imitate natural stones. Such reproductions are known today as "paste," a term derived from the Italian "pasta" or "dough-like." Today, the law makes a clear distinction between "synthetic" and "imitation" or "simulated" stones. For a stone to be called "synthetic," government regulations require it to possess the same physical, chemical and optical properties as the genuine stone. Moreover, it must always be identified as synthetic. An "imitation" or "simulated" stone is just that. It must also be identified as such.

Buying genuine stones can be a costly matter. However it is worth the wait if you want to save for that special gem that has stolen your heart. There are some imitations, though, that can be just as beautiful and be a good value as well. You need a reliable jeweler you can trust like CAROL "THE GOLD LADY," who can advise you on the gem, real or otherwise, that is best for you and your pocketbook. We display all gem stones, but have an exclusive on a 144 facet diamond which is 32% more brilliant than ordinary diamonds of 58 facets. Shop with us at 109 Dalby St., Newton. Tues., Wed., Sat. 10-6; Thurs. & Fri. til 9. Tel. 332-5935.

NEWTON — Two teachers from the Perkins School for the Blind who used sign language to convince a young, gun-wielding deaf mute not to hurt himself or anybody else were honored by the city today at Mayor Theodore D. Mann's office.

The police unit which apprehended the young man without firing a shot also received commendation yesterday.

Mann presented Good Citizen Awards to Karen Hern and Beth Packard "in recognition of your actions on March 13, 1985, when you, with calmness and courage, assisted members of the Newton Police Department in resolving a life-threatening situation."

On that night, 23-year-old Patrick Scott, armed with a .357 magnum revolver, engaged police in a three-hour standoff as the young man walked up and down Centre Street, waving his gun, in front of Mt. Alvernia High School.

At various times he pointed the gun at several police officers and at his own head. He fired four shots into the air before he finally threw down the gun and surrendered. No one at the scene was hurt.

During the tense situation, the police department contacted the Perkins School, looking for someone who could communicate with a deaf mute. Hern and Packard, who both work in the deaf-blind unit at the Perkins School, responded to the call, but did not know what they were getting into.

"At first we did not know he had a gun," said Packard at the time.

Hern added, "When I saw all the police there, I panicked."

But they calmly went to work, crouching behind a police cruiser 25 feet from Scott, while nearby police officers trained rifles on him. Using American Sign Language and Sign Exact English to communicate with Scott, Hern sent the signs while Packard used binoculars to read his responses.

Scott was agitated and nervous, but they kept telling him to drop the gun and no one would be hurt. He finally threw down his gun and lay down on the ground, where he was apprehended by police and taken to Newton-Wellesley Hospital. He was later sent to Bridgewater State Hospital for observation.

In addition to pins and citations from the city of Newton, Hern and Packard each received a Seiko watch, presented to them by Jay Moskow, chairman of the Newton Crime Commission.

Police Chief William F. Quinn also commended the police department's Civil Disturbance Unit, which handled the case under the command of Capt. Gerald Marchand, for "exhibiting great restraint and patience throughout the entire episode, until the young man was finally quieted down and taken into custody."

Richmond will not run again

By Edward Cafasso
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Edward L. Richmond, best known as the author of laws regulating the public's exposure to secondary smoke, will not seek re-election to an eighth term as the at-Large alderman from Ward 2.

Richmond, 58, of Farwell Street in Newtonville, last week confirmed widespread rumors that he would be leaving the Board of Aldermen in January 1986.

"I think that the time has come for me to move on and do other things in life. It's a personal decision. I think I accomplished what I wanted to accomplish on the board and now it's time to make room for other people," the Newton Centre lawyer said during a recess in the board's budget proceedings.

Richmond's decision to end his career as an alderman will open up that slot to a newcomer during this November's biennial municipal election.

During his 14 years of service, he witnessed a gradual shift in the board's political composition from Republican control toward a legislative body made up almost entirely of Democrats.

"Accompanying that was a deterioration in the decorum of the board. The conduct of the members toward each other is now less formal, less courteous, less respectful and more argumentative than it has been in the past. I regret to see that," according to Richmond.

His long-time colleague, Alderman Robert L. Tennant, blamed Richmond's decision to leave the board on the alderman most often associated with the body's "decorum" problems.

"The city has lost two of the best aldermen it ever had — (former Land Use Committee Chairman) Terry Morris and Ed Richmond — because of (Alderman Richard) McGrath," according to Tennant.

Richmond said he has noticed an increasing trend toward "personal politics" and cliques among his colleague.

"There are groups based on ethnicity, socio-economic background and geographical areas that shift and coalesce on certain issues," according to Richmond.

He said he is most proud of his successful drive for the creation of a "10 percent ordinance," a form of linkage designed to increase the housing stock available to low and moderate income families.

In 1970, Richmond chaired the Newton Fair Housing Commission and his efforts ultimately succeeded in convincing city officials and aldermen that more low-income housing was needed here.

Richmond is also the main author of ordinances that prohibit residents from smoking in supermarkets and from giving away free cigarette samples. Another Richmond initiative created smoking and non-smoking sections in Garden City restaurants. His most recent accomplishment in this area is an ordinance forcing local businesses to create separate sections for employees who smoke.

Richmond was the main mover behind the push to bring the "Farmer's Market" to city hall grounds every fall. During his career as a local legislator, Richmond served on practically every aldermanic committee and, at one time or another, chaired committees on Public Buildings, Design Review, Education and Finance.

"I think I will miss being an alderman initially because being on the board has become part of my life, but all good things must come to an end. I learned a lot about politics and people," Richmond said.

"You know, 14 years is a long time. It's almost a generation, but I think constant change in any organization gives it vitality," he added.

Moratorium spurs builders to seek protection against zoning changes

By David Weber, Staff Writer

NEWTON — A marked increase in the number of "perimeter plans" filed with the city's Engineering Department is a backlash from recent discussion of a city-wide building moratorium, according to Commissioner Paul Giunta.

Giunta said debate over the proposal has prompted many developers and property owners to seek protection against possible zoning changes.

He added the act of filing plans outlining boundary lines exempts that property from zone changes for three years from the time it is filed. Giunta said the plans are filed for various reasons, but that the rush to file in recent months may stem from the proposed moratorium. It emerged as one of the more prominent issues before the Board of Aldermen around the first of the year.

"A few of them (persons filing) have volunteered that they are protecting themselves, and with the others, you can usually see the reason why, depending on what's been in the news," he said.

The moratorium proposal was turned back two weeks ago by the full board, but supporters of the building ban say they will now try to bring the issue to the November ballot as a referendum question.

Meanwhile, board president Carol Ann Shea has said she will within the next week and a half appoint members to a special sub-committee set up to review the zoning ordinances and recommend changes.

The Engineering Department began keeping records seven years ago of the number of perimeter plans filed with the department.

The numbers have steadily increased each year, last year being the highest with 38.

Twenty-six plans had already been filed for the current year, with nine in the month of April, right around the time when the moratorium proposal was in the local news the most.

The totals for previous years stack up this way: 1984-38, 1983-36, 1982-31, 1981-27, 1980-22, 1979-21 and the last four months of 1978-17.

Giunta said that filing the plans does not necessarily mean that the property owner is planning to build something on his land. But after consulting with the city's Law Department, he said the act of filing the plans would allow them to build even if a moratorium were enacted.

Panel reveals new library plan

The Needs Subcommittee has concluded that a 76,600 square foot building is the "minimum size that would be acceptable for Newton" and "will be able to accomodate 500,000 holdings (books, tapes and other items) and 400 seats (360 adult spaces and 40 for children)."

"Despite concern about the conservative nature of its recommendation, the committee is confident that a library of 76,600 square feet will be big enough for the near future," the draft report notes.

However, the subcommittee adds, "The uncertainty of demographic projections makes it difficult to predict the city's needs beyond the next 10-15 years. An addition could be necessary at that time...(to) provide for eventual expansion to 90,000 square feet."

The group also rejected employing a mixed use or reuse as ways to create a new main library.

"The people of Newton need and want a good library — one that they can view with pride and pleasure. We deserve a library building that will have the presence, the design and the capacity to remind people that Newton is a very special place," the Needs Subcommittee concluded.

The Physical Feasibility & Construction Subcommittee reviewed 19 sites, including city property and recreational areas, before settling on the 90,000 square feet of undeveloped, unzoned city land across Homer Street from city hall.

The required parking, which the subcommittee estimated at about 100 spaces during the 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekday period, would "provided on the rear portion of the adjacent city-owned parking lot" at the rear of the Homer/Walnut lot.

The "positive characteristics" of this site are its immediate availability, central location in the middle of the city, easy access for private automobiles and public transportation, the possibility of joint Library/City Hall use and enough space to accommodate "some future facility expansion."

Because "several of the architects" on the Feasibility Subcommittee "felt comfortable with the Homer/Walnut site only if every effort is taken to maximize the preservation of open space in the final development," the group also recommended some site controls that will be detailed in later installments of this series.

"The Physical Feasibility and Construction Subcommittee believes that a new, well-designed and efficient library can be built on the Homer/Walnut site for a cost of between $8 and $10.2 million (in current 1985 dollars)," according to the draft report.

Although no specific site design or prices for materials exist, the group believes that "the $8-10.2 million range is useful and appropriate for planning purposes in that it covers the range of design assumptions from a very efficient and practical building to a more monumental approach to the building's design."

The final segment of the draft library report appears to fully resolve the most nettlesome problem standing in the way of a new building — money.

The Financing Subcommittee reached "two very important conclusions" on this aspect: "1) It is possible ... to finance a new main library with little impact on the city's operating budget;" and, "2) To have a new library will require the city to judiciously take advantage of the considerable resources that it currently possesses in the form of surplus properties."

The group came up with four specific recommendations to accomplish the mayor's goal of building a modern library at no cost to the city.

"The major source of funds for the new main library should be the proceeds from the disposition of the city's surplus properties," according to the draft report.

"In light of the Board of Aldermen's resolution to reserve all funds from the sale or lease of surplus properties for the construction of a new main library, the Board of Aldermen and the Mayor should take all actions necessary for the city's surplus properties to be disposed of for the highest possible value consistent with the reasonable development of these properties.

"To increase the funds available from leased surplus properties, the city should issue general obligation bonds, which will be serviced entirely from lease payments...," according to the report.

"As an indication of community support, fundraising efforts led by the Board of Library Trustees, Newton service organizations, the Friends of the Library, and individuals should be encouraged as an additional source of financing," the subcommittee concluded.

Digital thermometer stolen from truck

NEWTON — A digital, electronic thermometer worth $1,600 was reported stolen last week from a Shon's Refrigeration Service pickup truck, police said.

Police said the 1980 Chevrolet was parked at the company's 360 Watertown St. address. Entrance was gained into the pickup by forcing the left front window, according to police.

Tests better in the bar than in the car

The bright yellow machine then gives a digital readout of the drinker's blood-alcohol level. A score of .1 or above means the user is legally drunk.

One of three buttons to the side of the digital blood-alcohol reading also flashes. These lights correspond to: "Don't drive/You are illegal," "Caution/Getting tipsy," and "Sober/But be careful driving."

As a further reminder of the possible consequences of driving drunk, a gravestone is drawn on the lower left-hand corner of the machine with the inscription "DWI."

The machines are calibrated for accuracy once a week by the distributor, who splits the revenues with the bar, according to the area managers.

"It was put in for serious reasons and we feel it's a good thing. It's a reminder to people," DeFonzo said. "It's being used. People are aware Newton is strict on drunk driving laws."

"It gets an awful lot of use," Thompson said. "It's very helpful."

Thompson said the large number of people using the machine, which has been in the lobby of the restaurant-bar for about six months, is a result of an increasing awareness of the legal and physical dangers of drinking and driving.

Newton Police Chief William F. Quinn called putting the machines in bars, "a good idea."

"It allows people to see just how bad off they are. Anything that helps is good," he said.

One skeptic is Backyard manager Barry Gale.

"I don't think it stops people from drinking. I think they just check to see what they score," Gale said. "I'm a little skeptical, I guess." Whether it's used as a novelty or as a guide, the presence of breathalizers in bars is likely to spread, Thompson said.

Who wouldn't rather pay with two quarters in a bar than a 30-day loss of license in court?

In focus

'If you don't know enough about dancing, a big chunk is missing out of your life.'

Charles "Scotty" Farquhar

Ballroom dancers Barbara Davis and Charles "Scotty" Farquhar celebrate their dance studio's 25th anniversary this year

Dancing their nights away

By Susan Schneck, In Focus Editor

The phonograph needle lowers against the record, sending airy scratches hissing through the stereo speakers at Barbara's Dance Studio in Newton. Instructor Charles "Scotty" Farquhar stands in the center of the room, poised, waiting for the music to start. His motionless image echoes around the mirrored walls.

As the first notes filter through the studio, Scotty's arms encircle an imaginary partner and he takes off: hips start swiveling to the beat; feet begin tapping and shuffling with the lively tempo; and shoulders dip and sway with the rhythm. Swiftly and gracefully, he glides through the music, eyes sparkling, cheeks glowing and teeth shining.

Suddenly, he stops, drawing the demonstration to a close, and turns to his mesmerized pupil. "See, it's just different variations on the one, two, three," he says.

Dance has been the focus of Scotty's life for 42 of his 46 years. He can't conceive of an existence — his or anyone else's — without including dance.

"Dancing is the foundation of all culture and arts," he explains, in words tinged with a Scottish accent. "It's the most elemental of all the arts.

"If you don't know enough about dancing, a big chunk is missing out of your life," he adds. "I just can't imagine not having dancing in my life."

He hasn't had to. The nimble, medium-built Scotsman began dancing in his native country at the age of 4 and had won all his professional gold medals by the time he was 14. Since then, he's competed throughout the United States as a show dancer.

Today, along with Barbara Davis, another show dancer and national competitor, Scotty teaches social and competitive ballroom, latin and disco dancing in the basement studio of Davis' home. This year marks the 25th anniversary for Barbara's Dance Studio.

The two claim virtually everybody can and should enhance their lives with dance — regardless of their age, size or flexibility.

"I feel dance is the most important thing — everyone should dance," says Davis, a lithe, attractive grandmother who still "dances up a storm" when she goes out at night. "Nothing is more beautiful, more inspiring," she insists. "It's a great outlet, it relieves frustration and anxiety. We all need ways of releasing our anxiety and this is more fun than aerobics or exercising up and down. It's more fun than a lot of things.

She points out that aspiring ballroom dancers can begin at any age. "It's never too late to start," she says during a recent interview in her home. "I have a man who started at the age of 60 three years ago. He couldn't move then, but now, his whole personality has changed. He walks straighter and everything about him has improved as a person.

"Socially, it makes a person more graceful," she continues, stretching her well-proportioned body luxuriously. "It helps people who are introverted and it helps men and women mingle. If there was more dance in the city (of Newton), there would be less drug abuse. You could not take drugs, drink alcohol and dance.

"And it's the best way to stay in shape," she adds.

Scotty laments that the American socialization process deprives many males of the benefits of dance. "It's not unusual for a man to start dancing at a young age in the old country," he says. "Everybody dances in Scotland. But here, it's different. To be a man and dance here is to be a sissy. But at home, it's the exact opposite. If you're not dancing there's something wrong with you, you're really way out. My father was 300 pounds and light as a feather on his feet.

"It's one of the most necessary social graces and men who do not dance lack the most essential one," he insists, adding, "A woman will do anything for a man who dances well."

When Scotty came to the "land of golden promise" in 1963 he had no problem landing a job. "I arrived, walked into Arthur Murray's (Dance Studio in Boston) and just threw all my (gold) medals on his desk and that was it," explains the dancer, who, along with Davis, belongs to the Imperial Society of Teachers of Dancing in London, where they trained. "Oh, if only I was four years old and knew what I know now — I'd be the world champion for sure," he quips.

Like Scotty, Davis also began dancing at the age of four. "I was always dancing," she says. By the age of 25, Davis had opened her own business in her home. She holds an associate's degree in modern dance from England and, locally, teaches at Brandeis University in Waltham. "Teaching dance is a fun thing to do because you're bringing a lot of fun into people's lives," Davis says, adding that dance is also therapeutic.

"I could always dance off all my problems," she says. "If something bothered me, all I had to do was dance."

In addition to teaching, Davis used to travel throughout New England hotels, entertaining and working as a social hostess. Today, surrounded by family photos of her grandchildren, she says she went as far as she desired in her dance career. "I love to dance and entertain, but I could never do it at a steady pace," she explains. "It's very hard work. Summers, I'd do it three, four nights a week, but by the time August rolled around, I always wanted to come home and get back in the kitchen."

She and Scotty hooked up about 20 years ago and in addition to teaching together, they travel to New Jersey each month for a lesson with former American champion show dancers.

When he's not gliding across dance floors or shouting words of encouragement to his less nimble-footed pupils at Davis' dance studio, Scotty runs a halfway house in Brookline.

After he began teaching dance in Boston in the sixties, he enrolled in Boston University's School for Special Education and earned his Master's Degree. "I wanted an education, to do something other than dancing," he explains. "The dance business is a tough racket. If you want to survive, you have to do something else. But if dancing's in your blood, you have to do it — you just have to do something else also for your food and drink."

He'd like to see dancing recognized as an Olympic sport. "If that happened, I'd be a millionaire now," he says, referring to his teaching talents. "I'd buy a Rolls Royce right away."

One of Scotty's students, a senior citizen, took first place in the Professsional American Competition held at the Marriott in Newton in January. "One thing that's good about ballroom and social dancing is you can do it for your entire lifetime," Davis notes.

"Dancing is forever," Scotty agrees. "It's ageless."

Barbara Davis teaches social, ballroom and competitive dancing to students of all ages and abilities in her Newton studio

Both instructors have been dancing since they were 4.

We've got something new for you.

Our pharmacy has taken an important step to provide better, more efficient service to you and your family.

We have transferred our prescriptions and recordkeeping to a QS/1 Pharmacy System computer. Now we have all your records at our fingertips when needed. The system speeds up prescription filling and refilling, provides you with tax information, screens new prescriptions against interactions and prints precautions for you on a counseling handout. All this happens while the prescription is being filled — saving you valuable time.

Come by and ask us how our pharmacy system can help you and your family. We'll be happy to tell you all about it.

Home owners now seek functionality

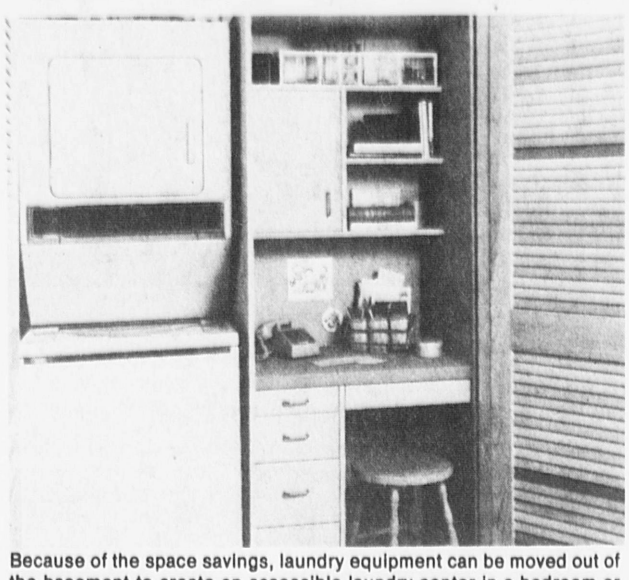

By Debra Cooper
Copley News Service

What do we want in our homes these days? Individual preferences may differ, but the majority of home owners seem to want functionality in every home aspect from floor plans to appliances.

The kitchen is an emerging star in the home, according to building industry veterans Jim Saivar and Robert F. Buie, who study buyers' wants and check on buyer satisfaction after purchase.

Some architects of custom homes say they are altering kitchen designs because people socialize there more and therefore want more room.

"People like to be able to have their friends join them in the kitchen when they're entertaining," Saivar said. "More people spend more time in the kitchen now. More time is being taken to prepare food."

Because of the space savings, laundry equipment can be moved out of the basement to create an accessible laundry center in a bedroom or bathroom, both logical accumulation points for soiled clothes.

But tasks are being performed more efficiently, thanks to microprocessor controls.

"A relative of the chip that powers a personal computer is doing tasks better and in less time in the form of microwave ovens and more recently some new model dishwashers with delay-start controls and diagnostic features," said Franklin D. Lindsay of Maytag, which now produces such high-tech appliances. "Increasingly, manufacturers will be using the new technology to make the kitchen work for you rather than you for it."

The kitchen is not the only area of the home that is being redesigned for functionality.

People are living in smaller spaces — in condominiums, town houses and more modestly sized single-family homes. This has led to the development of compact furnishings and appliances like stacked washers and dryers. Stacked washers and dryers are available in small- or full-size capacity units. They fit in half the space needed for traditional side-by-side washers and dryers.

New firm is featuring underground watering system

You have just finished renovating the inside of your house, and now, finally, it is time to move outside and concentrate on landscaping. "Should I seed or sod?" you're asking. "Maybe some Myrtle on the eastern side of the house?"

The charm of creating this ideal landscape plan, whether thought of by the self-taught owner, or the landscape contractor loses some of its momentum when one asks, "How am I going to tackle all of this ?" The question put in dollar terms is, "What if I spend $6,000 on lawn and plants and I lose it by August?

Maybe the first move outside should be an automatic underground irrigation system. "Water is the key ingredient, "says Paul Kenyan, vice-president of Boston Irrigation Supply of Dedham. Paul and John Ramey, president have opened their new company at 852 Providence Highway (Route 1), next to Boston Tile.

Boston Irrigation Supply is a distributor of most all irrigation equipment. John Ramey has worked in watering design, and contractor sales. Paul Kenyan's background is in golf course management. The third member is Tony D'Innocenzo, technical manager.

Lawns can be watered every day, or every other day with underground sprinkler systems. The water comes on at four a.m., and shut's off by six a.m. with no hoses to drag around in the evening.

With pop-up sprinkler heads, water can be applied when and where it is intended. "With a healthy lawn", says Paul, "weeds never have a chance to compete with good grass." No weeds mean a savings on chemical applications, and no costly lawn renovations.

The sprinkler system is an ideal insurance policy. It protects expensive plant material from drying out. These are a few of the reasons we are seeing more and more condominiums and commerical properties going to automatic systems according to Ramey.

In the new showroom, controllers, values, and sprinklers heads that make up the entire system are displayed.

Wolfpack hurts Newton South tourney chances

BRIGHTON — Newton South and Boston Latin bashed each other around for seven innings on Monday at Cleveland Circle, and when the slugfest was over, the Wolfpack was left standing with an 18-13 Dual County League victory.

The loss leaves the Lions with a 9-5 record (9-4 in the DCL), still needing two victories to clinch a tournament spot. It won't be easy to wrap it up this week, as Newton has to play in Weston on both Wednesday and Friday.

The Wolfpack showed absolutely no respect for South ace Kevin Houlihan, who lasted only eight hitters. By the time the first was over with, the home club had erased a 3-0 South lead with nine runs.

A hit batsman, two errors, and four consecutive bases-loaded walks contributed to Houlihan's demise. Leadoff hitter Nick Fabiano, who had four hits on the day, capped the uprising with a two-run double off reliever Tom McGary.

The Lions weren't through yet, however. By the fifth inning, they had climbed back to within two runs and came up with a pair in that frame to make it 13-13.

Darvell Huffman walked and stole second before Mark Maiocca singled him to third. Steve Altman grounded into a double play with one run scoring.

That made it 13-13, but Latin took the lead for good with three in the bottom half of the frame. Fabiano singled and went to third on an error (South made seven). After a walk, Chris Pappas replaced McGary, but Shawn Kennedy greeted him with a two-run single. Kennedy eventually scored on a sacrifice fly.

The big Lion inning was the third, when they came up with seven runs on five hits and an error. A walk and hit batsman, sandwiched around a Thirumalaisamy single, loaded the bases. After an out, Steve Stoller rapped a single to open the floodgates. Mitch Doren reached on an error for another marker, and Maiocca followed with a clutch single for a pair of runs. Doubles by Altman and Spengler (driving in two) capped the scoring.

Altman is leading the team in hitting at .392, as the Lions boast four batters above the .340 mark. Behind Altman are Thirumalaisamy (.366), Spengler (.356) and Maiocca (.340).

The Lions, 9-5 overall and 9-4 in the league, play Weston both Wednesday (at Weston) and Friday (at South), in a pair of games that will go a long way toward deciding the tournament hopes of the respective teams. South needs to win two of its remaining four games, while Weston needs three of four.

Glick tames Acton

Newton South senior Jon Glick rode the fruits of a quick-moving curve ball Friday to a 7-2 win over first-place Acton-Boxboro.

Glick, a righty, allowed just three hits in seven innings, striking out five along the way, as visiting Newton South got the runs needed to post the important victory.

Glick allowed a single in the first inning and a pair of base hits in the sixth to power South to the victory over A-B. The home team capitalized on the first-inning single to go up 1-0, but South came back to tie the game, 1-1, in the third.

Gary Collins and Darvell Huffman both walked to begin the frame for South, and two outs later Pillan Thirumalaisamy scored Collins with a single.

The Lions took the lead and the win in the fourth inning, sending 10 men to the plate, exhasting A-B's starting pitcher, and crossing the plate six times.

Judd Cohen led the frame off with a Texas-League double just over the shortstop's head, and advanced to third on Steve Stoller's single. Stoller stole second before Tom Rogers walked to load the bases with no outs. Collins walked to force in Cohen, then Darvell Huffman singled up the middle to score two more.

With runners at the corners, Mark Maicco walked to load the bags again. Matt Spengler struck out before Thirumalaisamy hit a sacrafice fly to center to score Collins. Greg Manthei then singled to drive in the sixth and seventh runs, forcing the A-B starter to the showers in favor of Scott Knox. Knox struck out Cohen to end the frame.

Cohen's HR clincher

Junior catcher Judd Cohen drilled a three-run homer in the fourth inning to boost Newton South past Lincoln-Sudbury, 4-3, under the lights at Feeley Field in Sudbury in Dual County League baseball action on Wednesday night.

The Lions were down, 3-0, going into the frame. A walk, single and error sent one run across and set the stage for Cohen, who came through with his big blast. He also had a triple in the game.

Righty Kevin Houlihan went the distance for the victory, pitching shutout ball after a shaky start. He gave up all three runs in the first inning, two coming home on a single by Jim Innocent.

Houlihan fanned nine and walked eight in the contest.

BOSTON LATIN(18)-Fabiano 5-4, Theodore 3-1, Kennedy 4-2, Griffin 4-1, Jackson 2-0, Kane 2-0, Dever 3-0, Duffy 3-1, McKenna 2-1. Tot. 28-10.

NEWTON SOUTH(13)-Huffman 2-0, Maiocca 4-3, Altman 5-2, Spengler 4-3, Thirumalaisamy 3-3, Manthei 2-0, Cohen 4-0, Stoller 4-1, Doren 3-0, Tsoumbanos 0-0. Tot. 41-12.

Outlasts Waltham for avenging 9-8 win

Tiger nine in tournament

WALTHAM — Newton North built a 9-3 lead but then had to hang on to defeat an onrushing Waltham team, 9-8, in Suburban League baseball at Jake Dennis Field on Monday night under the lights. The win put the Tigers into the Eastern Mass. Tournament with a 12-4 record (6-2 in the league). The Hawks, already safely in post-season play, dropped to 15-2 (7-2 league).

Greg Larson drove in four runs with a pair of doubles for the winners, while Bob Martin stroked a two-run homer (and picked up a save) and Mike Solomon hit a solo shot.

"Bob Martin and Greg Larson are really doing the job," said North coach Dick Walker, adding, "The table-setters are getting on.

"Offensively, these are two real good teams."

While Hawk mentor Al Scafidi was unhappy with some of his team's mental errors, he was quick to credit the Tigers, saying, "Newton played a hell of a game."

The home team turned a rout into a close game with four runs in the bottom of the sixth, keyed by Lee Wilcox' two-run double.

Giusti started things with a two-bagger. With two outs, Ed Sweet walked, and Rod O'Byrne singled for a run. Wilcox followed with his long shot off the right-center field fence, and when Jeff Lazzaro scored him with a single, it was 9-7.

Tom Casey, who had relieved North starter Sean O'Brien in the sixth, got the first out in the seventh, but Giusti followed with a blast to left-center that pulled the Hawks within a run. On came Martin for the Tigers, and he closed the door on the last two batters to wrap up the victory. It wasn't as easy as it sounds, however, as Sweet lined a ball to left that Alex DeNucci made a diving catch on for the final out of the game.

Early on, this was a see-saw battle. The Tigers took a 2-0 lead in the first, saw the Hawks come back with three in the second, then scored another couple in the third. North finally unloaded the big guns in the fifth and sixth to build a big bulge.

In the first, Aldo Calcagni (two hits, two RBIs), singled and Martin walked before Larson boomed a double to make it 2-0.

The Hawks answered with three in the second when Rod O'Byrne singled home DiVito (single), with two more coming home later on an error.

Larson struck again for the Tigers in the third, as he followed a Chuck Proia walk and Artie Aaron single with his second two-bagger.

That ended DiVito's work on the mound for the evening, but the Tigers weren't quite finished yet. They reached Dave Cristofori, in only his second mound appearance, for a couple in the sixth on a hit, walk and two-run single by Calcagni.

Though the respective hitting attacks were the big stories of the game, both coaches saw many other bright spots. Walker was pleased with the work of O'Brien, who gave the Tigers five strong innings before tiring.

"We really needed to have someone pick up that slack (for the hurting Larson on the mound)," Walker said.

On the other side, though it wasn't DiVito's night, the Hawks had to be pleased with Cristofori's relief performance.

Defensively, Newton turned a couple of key twin-killings and got a superb play from Larson at first that squelched a Waltham rally.

The Hawks also threw some leather, with left fielder O'Byrne coming up with a big diving grab in the first that saved a couple of runs.

Both teams have Quincy up next on the slate. The Tigers are down there on Wednesday, with the Hawks following suit on Thursday.

The summary:

NEWTON NORTH(9)-Aaron 4-1, Calcagni 2-2, Martin 3-1, Larson 3-2, Solomon 4-1, DeNucci 3-0, Ryan 3-2, LeConti 3-0, Proia 1-0. Tot. 26-9.

Antonellis slugs as Lion girls lose

NEWTON — Maria Crovo was throwing strikes and Katrina Antonellis was swinging a loaded bat but the Newton South Lions could not put it together Monday against Dual County League leading Acton-Boxboro in a 13-6 loss.

An on-going power-hitting slump continued to spell defeat for the Lions, who with two games remaining in the season have to win one to gain a post-season berth. Coach Larry Caranfa said he knows crunch time is no time to be caught in a singles-only slump.

Having not made the tourney in two years, South would like to make the most of the opportunity. The only player to compete in that tourney year was junior shortstop Antonellis.

The shortstop knows what it takes to win games, as Antonellis tried in vain to do against Acton. She blasted a two-run homer in the third and figured in all six of South's runs.

An Antonellis single in the first inning scored two South runners and put the home team in front for the only time in the game.

Acton tied the match in the second, then pulled out ahead with four runs in the third. Two runs in the fourth off four singles and a walk won the game.

Newton South had scored two runs in the bottom of the third when Antonellis got her round tripper with Dede Theodore aboard for the ride.

On the mound, Maria Crovo was tossing her weight in gold but to no avail. The ball was bouncing the Acton-Boxboro way. Crovo got hit for one more run in the sixth, and a big four in the seventh to drive the nail into the coffin.

"She (Crovo) pitched a very good game," Caranfa said. "We just didn't get the hits behind her."

South connected for 15 hits, but Antonellis' homer was the lone extra base hit for the Lions. Caranfa said the slump has been going on for about a week and a half and he hopes to break the hex against winless Wayland on Wednesday.

South, 9-7 in the DCL and 11-7 overall, will play at Wayland on Wednesday and will host Concord-Carlisle on Memorial Day at 10 a.m. If South wins both games, Caranfa said the Lions have an outside chance of finishing in second place behind Acton.

Bedford overtaken

Newton South trailed almost the entire game, finally scored five runs in the last two innings to tie the game at 9-9, only to see Bedford pull out a 10-9 decision in the bottom of the seventh in Dual County League girls' softball action at Page Field under the lights on Friday.

Leadoff batter Liz Doherty proved to be the catalyst for the Buccaneers, as her speed manufactured the winning run. She led off the inning by bunting safely for the third time in the game. She swiped second and third, and ended the game by racing home on a passed ball.

The Lions, though behind all the way, had several chances to take the lead and even blow the game open. They loaded the bases in four straight innings, and chipped away with single runs here and there, but never got the key hit that might have led to a big inning.

The final time the Lions loaded the sacks, they came up with two to tie the game in the seventh. Katrina Antonellis and Stacey Hackel singled and Sandy Bonazoli walked to fill them up. Jen Lerman came up with a two-out grounder to third that Bedford threw away as Antonellis and Hackel raced home to tie the game.

Lerman also figured in a three-run rally in the sixth that got the Lions close. A dropped third strike, and two walks loaded the bases for Michelle Meyers. She drew another free pass for a run, Lerman's grounder knocked in another, with number three scoring on a passed ball.

Theodore clouted a solo homer for Newton in the first.

Antonellis hits slam

A Katrina Antonellis grand slam homer in the fifth inning pushed Newton South over the edge and on to victory, a 17-10 stomping of Lincoln-Sudbury Wednesday at home.

Wendy Keselman also homered for South and added a double in three trips to the plate.

With South up 9-8 entering the bottom half of the fifth, Antonellis put the win on ice, capping a six-run surge with the most productive of her three hits in the game. Antonellis added a pair of singles to go perfect for the day.

Tigers down Raiders

Newton North's softballers downed host North Quincy Wednesday, 13-2, to move one step closer to qualifying for the state tournament. With four games remaining, Newton North, 6-3 in the Suburban League and 8-6 overall, needs victories in three games.

Eight runs in the first inning off North Quincy was all the Tigers would need. Jackie Kinsella drove in two runs with a double and Robin Silver, batting twice in the inning, singled in two more to lead the charge.

Silver had led off the game with a single and scored on a Maria Farra base hit. Beth Morahan singled home North's second run, then a series of walks and fielder's choices scored three more. Kinsella roped one to left-center for a pair and Silver ended the burst with her two-run hit.

In the inning, North knocked out North Quincy starter Ann Anderlionis before she could work up a sweat.

Junior second baseman Silver had three hits all total with two RBI's while Kinsella and Nula Horkin also drove in a pair of runs apiece.

Sharon Cullins pitched the first four innings to record the win and Michelle Bellevue mopped up.

DCL girls' track meet

Weston reigns; South's D. Hill captures shot put

ACTON — Weston was looking for revenge on Saturday and got it.

The Wildcat girls' track team had tied Acton-Boxboro during the regular season and had to settle for a tie for the Dual County League title with a 6-0-1 record. Weston wanted to settle that debt in the league meet, and did so with authority, outdistancing the Colonials, 146-98, for the crown.

Bedford finished well back in third at 58 points, followed by Lincoln-Sudbury (55) and Newton South (49). Wayland, Concord-Carlisle and Boston Latin brought up the rear.

For the most part, it was the familiar names which gave the Wildcats the title, though help from some unexpected sources helped create the wide margin of victory.

Julie Muccini had an outstanding day, with two firsts and a second. She won the triple jump and high hurdles, and was runner-up to teammate Robin Macdonald in the high jump.

Macdonald came up with third in the 400 with an excellent time of 64.1, in addition to her high jump of 5-4.

Junior Laura Paresky didn't take a first, but scored in three events. She was second in the high hurdles, third in the long jump and fifth in the triple jump.

Newton South came up with one first during the meet, thanks to a clutch shot put by Denise Hill. The senior lifted a toss of 31-10 on her final throw to win the event. She also finished second in the discus at 85-6 (tying her personal best) and fifth in the high hurdles with a PR of 16.9.

Lana Kim didn't get a first, but did set a school record. Her 53.7 was good for fourth in the 300 low hurdles and erased the mark that Hill set earlier this season. The senior also grabbed second in the triple jump at 32-6, and was part of the 4x100 relay which finished fourth.

Freshman Julie Goldenberg grabbed third in the 100 at 13.2, staying "right there with the top two," according to Coach Chris Omeltchenko. She also ran on the sprint relay.

Lisa Heck, another member of that relay (Leila Fergus rounded out the quartet), had a PR of 31-8 for fourth in the triple.

Hendi Crosby, a ninth-grader, was fourth in the mile at 5:48, smashing her personal record by some 16 seconds in the process. It was only her second time in the event. She also ran the 4x400 relay, which finished sixth.

The other members of the 4x400 were Fergus, Jill Goldberg and Liz Morrison.

Other sixths went to Kathy McCrory (two-mile) and Laurie Jackson (discus).

The Lions will be in Reading on Saturday for the Class Meet.

Beaver baseballers clinch 4th straight Eastern League title

CHESTNUT HILL — A 10-4 victory over Chapel Hill on Monday wrapped up the Eastern League baseball title for Beaver Country Day School. The Bulldogs own a 7-0 mark in the league, ahead of second-place Pingree which is 6-2. Overall, Beaver is 9-4.

Of course, success in the Eastern League is nothing new for Beaver, which is 39-1 in the circuit over the last four years, all of which ended in championships.

The win means the Bulldogs qualify for the New England Regionals in Providence over the Memorial Day weekend. That tournament features the winners of four different leagues.

Brian Gardiner picked up his eighth win of the season in the clincher. The sophomore has lost only once. He fanned eight hitters. Junior Steve Silverman struck out five in relief.

The Bulldogs showed they wanted the title badly by scoring nine times in the first inning.

They quickly took a 3-0 lead when Dan Kaplan (Newton) and Steve Silverman singled, prior to Gardiner's bases-clearing triple. The latter came home on Mark Lampert's (West Newton) fielder's choice.

Tom White walked, and after a double steal, Lampert scored on Noel Fennessey's squeeze bunt. Kurt Neumann (Newton) and Matt Caplice followed with RBI singles, Kaplan banged out another hit, and Steve Silverman capped the whole affair with a two-run homer that cleared the right field fence, 345 feet away.

Saturday, Beaver topped Concord Academy, 4-1, at home.

Gardiner, a sophomore from Dedham, fired a six-hitter. The righthander fanned eight and walked three.

Newton's Keith Jacobson led the way offensively with three hits and three runs batted in. Neumann also had a trio of safeties.

On Friday, the Bulldogs lost to Rivers, 4-1, as Eric Wildman held them to only six hits. Jim Borgman had a pair of hits for the winners.

Beaver's only run came on a Silverman home run.

Legion Post 440 to host boxing night

NEWTON — The American Legion Nonantum Post 440 will host an amateur boxing night Thursday, May 30 at 7 p.m. to raise money to send Gold Star parents of Newton Vietnam veterans to the Vietnam Memorial in Washington, D.C.

The Massachusetts State Police Boxing Team will head the list of boxing squads taking part in the fund-raiser, which is hoped to raise an estimated $6,000 to cover transportation and three days lodging costs for the parents of the 23 Newton veterans killed in action.

The State Police, invited by State Rep. A. Joseph DeNucci, will be joined by the Natick Boxers Club, the Nonantum Boxing Club, and former boxers Paul Pender and former Golden Glove Joe Nolan of Newton.

Tickets are $5 for adults and $3 for children and will be sold at the door. Advance tickets may be purchased by phone by contacting Pat Panaggio at 969-8317 or by calling the American Legion Post 440 at 244-0440.

Additional contributions can be made by check payable to Nonantum Post 440 Boxers and should be mailed to the Post at 295 California St., Newton, MA. 02158 or can be dropped off at the Newton City Hall's Department of Veteran's Services.

Post Commander Michael Volpe has appointed Harold DeWolf and Pat Panaggio as co-chairmen for the event and the two will be assisted by Nick Gentile. Other committee members include: Larry Kerr, George Reynolds, Roy Harris, Jerry Morrocco, Roger Morracco, Carey Proia, Paul Harris, Bob Vassalotti, Larry Civetti, Tom Medaglia, and Ed Boudreau.

MDC offers aerobics

The picturesque Charles River Basin area has always been regarded as a haven for athletes. This season, in addition to accomodating the many joggers, bicyclists and roller skaters that use its facilities, the Metropolitan District Commission will offer free aerobic classes beginning Tuesday at the Hatch Memorial Shell.

Designed to improve physical and emotional well-being, the Metrofit exercise program is open to all members of the community. Classes will be held every Tuesday and Thursday from 5-6 p.m.

Beginning in June, the MetroFit program schedule will be expanded to include classes on Fridays from 5 to 6 p.m. and morning classes on Mondays and Wednesdays from 7:30 to 8:30 a.m.

The MetroFit exercise program will also be offered at MetroParks beaches and swimming pools beginning June 23.

For more information on how you can join the MetroFit program, call Sharon Mahler at 727-9547.

Nugent homer rescues Stones

Ray Ball lost a no-hitter in the fifth inning and Todd Nugent cracked a two-run home run in the bottom of the seventh to boost J.C. Stones over Walco, 4-2, Monday in the Newton Men's Softball B League played at Albemarle Field.

Nugent's round tripper to left field snapped a 2-2 tie and boosted J.C.'s to victory. Ball completed the game after losing his bid for a perfect game and ended up allowing only four hits.

Lancers routed in softball, 12-3

NEWTON — Hudson Catholic scored three runs in the third and came right back for four in the fourth to safely tuck away a 12-3 decision over Newton Catholic in Catholic Suburban League girls' softball action on Thursday at Albemarle Field.

It was still a game through three when the Lancers answered Hudson's three-run outburst with a marker of their own. Susan Williams got things going with a single. After she moved up on a walk to Judy Jackson and a passed ball, Williams came home on a fielder's choice.

The Lancers picked up their other two runs in the seventh.

Sophomore Theresa Foley went the distance for the losers, giving up 13 hits and seven walks, while striking out seven.

The summaries:

HUDSON CATHOLIC(12)-Collins 5-3, Lalibert 3-2, Loureiro 5-5, Davis 3-1, O'Hara 3-0, M. Simpson 4-1, Toomey 4-1, K. Simpson 4-0, Veo 3-0. Tot. 34-13.

McMillen homer lifts Newton North frosh

WALTHAM — Pitcher Tom McMillen won his own game by crashing out a three-run homer in the seventh inning to give Newton North Freshmen an 11-5 decision over Waltham Tuesday at Leary Field.

McMillen was the starting pitcher and allowed six hits and fanned two and walked over five frames. Jerry Propia yielded two hist and one run in finishing up. Catcher Jay Capello had three singles and drove in a run for the undefeated Tigers (4-0).

Rod McGuire was the losing pitcher.

Flynn nets 3 as Tigers cop lacrosse tournament spot

Junior John Flynn scored three first-half goals and Paul Healey added two more as Newton North strolled past Framingham North, 15-7, to better its record to 9-5 overall and clinch a tourney berth.

The Tigers, 3-0 in the league, held an 8-3 lead at the half, compliments of Flynn's hat trick and Healey's two goals. Senior Kevin McGrath scored a goal and assisted on three others and Kevin Oliveto added his first of three in the half.

"We dominated from the start," said Newton North coach Rick Clark. "We expected to play a strong game, we're gearing up for the tournament."

The Lions geared up to the tune of 38 shots on net, 25 in the first half. At the other end of the field, goalie Matt Keegan stopped his share of rubber, making 22 saves.

Oliveto scored twice in the second half, along with Rich Clafin's two goals. John Boudreau, Josh Carpenter, and Dan Nardone each scored once in the half.

Tigers top Exeter

A "perfect" first quarter, in the opinion of Coach Rick Clark, gave the Newton North boys' lacrosse team the impetus to belt Exeter Academy, 10-6, on Wednesday at Exeter.

The Tigers roared out to a 6-0 lead before the home club could get on the board. The game didn't turn into a rout, however, as Exeter gamely fought back, closing the score to 6-5 early in the third quarter.

After taking the big early lead, the Tiger offense was shut down until Otto Mariano finally scored a big goal with 10 seconds to play in the third quarter to make it 7-5. North put the contest out of reach with three more in the final period.

The first period was a coach's dream.

Fran Yerardi gave the visitors a lead 40 seconds into the game off the fast break. Another fast break resulted in a Charlie Albanese goal less than a minute later.

Albanese then scored on a broken clear, and John Boudreau made it 4-0 on a cutting play from Dan Nardone.

When Tom Dalicandro tossed in two more, the Tigers were on the their way.

"It was unbelievable," Clark said. "Everything was like gold."

Late in the half, the Tigers got caught on a couple of defensive mistakes, giving the home team a chance to get back into the game.

When Exeter scored 35 seconds into the second half, it looked like things were going their way. Mariano stopped that momentum with his clutch goal.

Dalicandro added two more in the final period, giving him four goals and an assist. Kevin McGrath notched the final tally.

"He's been our money player," Clark said of Dalicandro.

The Exeter comeback might have been successful but for the work of Matt Keegan. The goalie made 19 saves to prevent things from getting out of hand.

Tri-captains (along with Dalicandro) Nardone and Paul Healey also gave the Tigers a good effort, as did Yerardi. At one point, Exeter switched its defense to try and control Yerardi.

South wins 6th

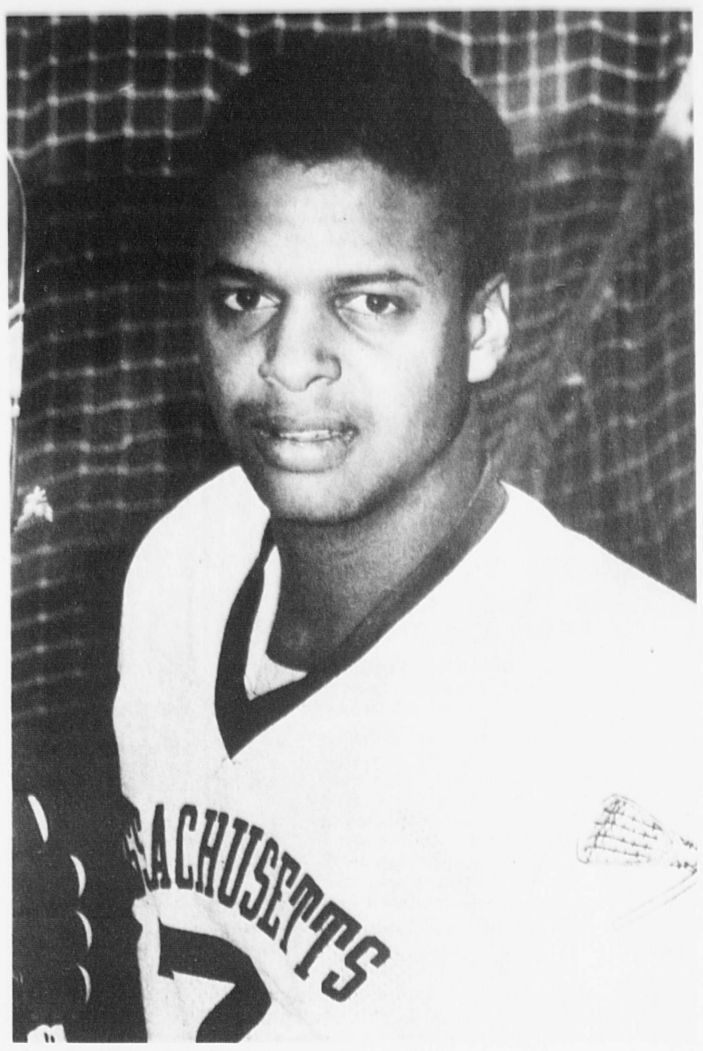

Garth Bloch and Whitney Dorf scored third-period goals to break a 5-5 tie and push host Newton South to a 9-6 win over Medford Tuesday in a non-league match. South has now won six in a row.

South held a 5-3 edge at the half before Medford surprised the Lions with two scores to open the third quarter. Bloch put South in front again, taking a feed in the crease area from Matt Ranen, who had dodged his man outside.

Dorf scored later in the period to put South up 7-5 going into the final frame. Neil Schwartz and Peter Murphy added a pair of insurance goals in the fourth quarter for South.

Senior Tri-Captain Dave Kowal played well for South, adding two goals and three assists. Kowal, a midfielder had a goal and an assist in the first quarter to keep South in the game. Mark Millender and Chris Murphy played well.

"We've been playing well and scoring a lot of goals," said South coach Paul Murphy. "Hopefully we'll keep it up."

Lacrosse star

Karl Hatton of West Newton is among the leading goal scorers on the University of Massachusetts varsity lacrosse team this spring. He has collected six goals and five assists thus far this season.

Sweep in javelin lifts North

NEWTON — David Blanch, John Carpenter, and Jeff Levy combined to sweep the javelin throw as host Newton North outgunned Brookline, 77-68, Friday in the final Suburban League dual track meet.

North's javelin trio swept its second meet in a row with a first-place toss from Blanch (160-10), and supporting efforts from Carpenter and Levy.

Carpenter also nailed his personal best in the 440, with a first-place run of 52.6.

Rooney hit gives Central A's 9-7 decision over West Braves

NEWTON — Two runs came home on Brian Rooney's hot smash to shortstop in the top of the seventh inning to give the Newton Central A's a 9-7 victory over the Newton West Braves at Lyons Field in a Little League game on Sunday.

The A's had gotten clutch hits by Richard Rosen and Bill Brennan for three runs in the sixth to tie the game.

Rooney, Brennan, Steve Sher and Sam Jodrey each had two hits for the winners.

Mike Carroll got the win, taking over for Rooney in the seventh.

The Braves had their big inning in the third, picking up six runs in a rally keyed by Doug Micciantuono's two-run double.

Mike Robertson scattered five hits and fanned five as the A's beat the Yankees, 10-4, in the Newton Central Little League played Thursday at Cabot Park.

Brian Rooney cracked out the only extra base hit, a double, as the A's also spread out their attack. Three runs in both the first and second innings and two runs in both the fourth and fifth accounted for the runs.

In the third, the A's loaded the bases with none out before going down for the count (three straight strikeouts) without scoring.

The A's also capitalized on seven walks by the Yankee pitching. Jon Rouffe, 12, took the loss, pitching the first three innings and allowing six runs on three hits. He had four strikeouts and four walks.

For the Yankees, solo runs in the second, third, fifth, and sixth innings told the story.

The Newton City Series will be held over the Memorial Day weekend. The top team from each of the five Newton divisions will meet at Lyons Field to play in a series. The A's will represent the Newton Central League.

West A's win

Brian Rooney smashed three home runs and a single in four trips to the plate to lead the Newton West Little League A's over the Newton Central Braves, 13-3, on Thursday at Lyons Field.

Rooney, a 12-year-old shortstop, clouted two blasts over the center field fence and another to right. He finished the game with six runs batted in.

Rooney had plenty of help offensively, as Sam Jodrey drove in four runs with a triple and single, while Steve Sher stroked a single a double, scoring twice.

The winning pitcher was Mike Carroll, an 11-year-old righty who allowed six hits and walked two.

Wednesday, center fielder Ryan Fitzpatrick stroked four hits in as many trips to the plate as the Newton West Braves hammered the Newton Central Phillies, 20-6, in inter-league action at Lyons Field.

Fitzpatrick included a double among his four hits, driving in a pair of runs. Righthander Doug Micciantuono picked up the win.

South girls in surprise tennis win over A-B

Leslie Semonian and Ellen Jacobs pulled off a surprise victory in first doubles Friday to boost Newton South to a 3-2 win over Acton-Boxboro in Dual County League tennis in Newton.

Even before winning the match in three sets, Semonian and Jacobs had to earn the spot of first doubles team. Normally junior varsity players, the girls were forced into action because South was missing part-one of its first doubles punch. The pressure was on for the girls to prove themselves, and after losing the first set, 6-1, they shot back to take the next two sets for the point.

Stacy Millender, who normally plays first doubles, was away and couldn't make the match. Partner Lisa Teuscher moved up to third singles to replace Kyla Upshaw, who was also missing. The summary:

Lion girls win tennis shutout

BOSTON — Mimi Kaufman and Nicole Jackson each shut out their opponents in straight sets Monday as visiting Newton South tore through Boston Latin, 5-0.

The Lions lost just three games in the whole match, but coach Bob Hoffman said he did not expect Latin to be such a pushover. The home team was missing its number one singles player, forcing the number two and three players up in the line-up.

Still, it was a much-needed win for the tourney-bound Lions. Newton South (11-2) will have to be in top form on Wednesday when Weston comes to town for the final match of the season. The Wildcats need the win to qualify for the tournament.

Stacey Milender won South's third singles, dropping her girl in two sets, 6-2, 6-0. In doubles action, the second team of Amy Freedman and Ellen Jacobs defeated the Latin duo, 6-0, 6-0. Wendy Goldenberg and Leslie Semonian also won in doubles play, 6-0, 6-1.

Ball brothers lead way as Stones romp in Newton softball

NEWTON — Ray Ball tossed a three-hitter while brothers Kevin and Pat both hit home runs as The Stones shelled Troubadour, 9-1, Monday in Newton Men's Fastpitch Softball 'B' League played at Albemarle Field.

Ray, a righty, was hurling a no-hitter going into the fifth inning before Troubadour's Jim Connors led off with a single up the middle to break the string.

Kevin smoked two homers, good for three RBI's, and Pat added a solo effort. Not to be left out, Ray connected for two singles and three RBI's.

4 Newtonites on County team

Five Newton boys have been chosen for the Middlesex County Select U-12 Team as part of the Massachusetts Olympic Development Program run by the Massachusetts Youth Soccer Association.

Doug Cobb, 11, of 31 Pleasant St., Newton Centre; Billy and Matt Fruhan, 11, of 44 Fairfax St., West Newton; Matt Laufer, 12, of 26 Mosman St., West Newton; and Stuart Savage, 11, of 110 Oxford Rd., Newton Centre, were selected after performing at tryouts in Andover on April 12 where they competed against players from all over Middlesex County.

The Select Team will play an eight-game schedule from July 10 through Aug. 10 and will compete in a tournament for their age group at the end of the season. Home field will be Emerson Field in Concord.

The Olympic Development Program is a development program for advanced players in which instruction and advancement of individual and team play is emphasized over winning.

Wilson, Proia boost The Place in softball

NEWTON — Steve Wilson and Armando Proia slugged back-to-back triples to account for the winning run as The Place edged Buff's Pub, 5-3, in Newton City Softball A League action at Cabot Park on Thursday.

Bill Flynn went the distance for the win in the fast-pitch circuit, allowing three hits.

On of that trio was a three-run homer by Jim Gamble which accounted for all of the Buff's runs.

Ad Tips...

PLAN AHEAD!

Save time! Plan your ad before you call. List the item for sale first, then the description, price, phone number, and hours to call. For Yard Sales, list the town, date, times, address, then special items or directions. It's that simple!

While Your Peers Are Pushing Pencils, You Can Be Managing A Million Dollar Business.

If you think pushing pencils behind a desk is boring, and lacks challenge, you're not alone. At McDonald's, we feel the same way, which is why in our Management Training Program we prepare you to handle every facet of the restaurant business. You'll learn all aspects of managing a million dollar business ... management, budgeting, marketing, personnel, training and community relations—to mention only a few.

Sure you'll push a pencil once in a while, but you'll be doing it for yourself, and a company you'll be proud of.

If you're serious about working with a Fortune 100 Company, that cares about your career as much as you do, then contact McDonald's.

At McDonald's, we offer an excellent starting salary, extensive training, health, life, and dental insurance, profit sharing, promotions based on performance, and more.

Pushing a few buttons on the phone now, could keep you from pushing pencils the rest of your life. For more information, call or send your resume to: Judie Stoebel, Dept. DT0520, McDonald's Corporation, 420 Providence Highway, Westwood, Mass. 02090; (617) 329-1450.

Police, fire briefs

Middleton man allegedly steals trailer

WEST NEWTON — A Middleton man entered no plea last week in Newton District Court after being arrested on Route 128 for allegedly stealing a flatbed trailer.

State police arrested Leon C. Rubchinuk after the owner of the flatbed trailer allegedly saw the 36-year-old Middleton resident driving with the trailer on Route 128 southbound in Lynnfield, according to court records. Court records show that police caught up with Rubchinuk in Newton.

Rubchinuk was charged with altering motor vehicle identification numbers and receiving stolen property, the trailer. According to court records, the trailer is worth $12,000.

The case was continued until June 6 for a pre-trial conference.

Church break-in try leads to charges

WEST NEWTON — A Roxbury man pleaded not guilty in Newton District Court to charges of assault and battery and breaking and entering in the day time with intent to commit a felony, according to court records.

The charges against Joseph R. D'Lorenzo, 19, stem from an attempted break into the United Methodist Church, 430 Walnut St., according to court records. A trial date for D'Lorenzo was set for May 30.

Bronco XLT stolen from JCC

NEWTON CENTRE — A 1983 Bronco XLT worth $15,000 was stolen Saturday from the Jewish Community Center, 330 Nahanton St., police reported. Police said the theft of the blue and silver vehicle occurred between 11 p.m. and 1 a.m. The car was stolen from the community center's loading dock, according to police.

Garage fire causes $10,000 damage

NEWTON CENTRE — The fire department is investigating the cause of a garage fire on Homer Street that caused $10,000 worth of damage last week, the department reported.

Chief William Dwyer supervised the three engine companies and one ladder truck that fought the blaze for close to two hours at the 64 Homer St. home of David Houseman.

The 20-foot square wood structure suffered heavy fire damage, the department reported, as the detached garage was fully enveloped in flames when firefighters arrived at the scene at 10:38 p.m.

No one was injured in the fire, firefighters said. Inside the garage at the time were bicycles, a motorcycle, a snowblower and a lawn mower, according to the report.

The Houseman home was not damaged by the fire but the paint on a GMC van parked in the driveway blistered in the heat, firefighters reported.

Newton's fire prevention bureau is expected to examine the site today.

Pharmacist foils illegal drug purchase

WABAN — An alert Rhodes Pharmacy druggist foiled an attempt last week to purchase prescription drugs, police said. Police said a white woman in her late 20s tried to buy 12 percosets with a prescription written for a Needham woman.

The druggist called the Needham address on the prescription, police said. When the woman for whom the prescription was written said she had nothing to do with the prescription, the suspect ran out of the drugstore, according to police.

She jumped in a two-tone maroon car and headed west on Beacon Street, police said.

Auburndale girl injured when hit by car

AUBURNDALE — A 15-year-old Auburndale girl, who wasn't looking when she ran across Rowe Street last week, was sideswiped by a car, police said.

Judy D'Ambrosio, 6 Freeman St., suffered minor injuries in the accident and was treated and released at Newton-Wellesley Hospital, authorities said.

Police said they did not cite the West Newton man driving the 1984 Honda sedan.

According to police, D'Ambrosio raced from behind a parked car into the street without looking. She collided with the side of the Honda, which was traveling 15 mph as it slowed for a stop sign at the intersection with Commonwealth Avenue, police reported.

Landscaper accused of local break-ins

WEST NEWTON — A Newton Highland landscaper accused of taking part in four break-ins at city businesses pleaded not guilty last week to all charges.

According to court records Burton J. Miller Jr., 22, of 16 Elliot St., pleaded not guilty to four counts of breaking and entering in the night time with intent to commit a felony and four counts of larceny of property worth more than $100.

Police say the breaks occurred in the last two months. Police are alleging Miller stole cash from the Gulf Gas Station, 1637 Centre St.; stole a safe and cash from Emack's and Bolio's, 80 Langley Rd.; and stole tools and cash from Wayside Cleaner's, 980 Boylston St.

Videotapes stolen from Flik's store

NEWTON HIGHLANDS — Videotapes were the targets of a theft reported last week from Flik's Video Store, 233 Needham St., police said. Police said an unknown number of videos were stolen from the front window of the store after a window at the rear was forced.

Women hospitalized from car collision

NEWTONVILLE — Two women required hospital treatment last week following a two-car collision at the intersection of Crafts Street and Linwood Avenue, authorities said.

Treated and released at Newton-Wellesley Hospital were Jacquline Dube, 55 Atwood St., Wellesley, and Michael Joly, 791 Tremont St., Boston, a hospital spokesman said.

According to police, Dube, was driving west on Linwood Avenue when her 1982 Datsun collided with Joly's 1978 Ford. Police cited Dube for allegedly failing to stop at a stop sign.

Both cars sustained front end damage, police said.

Judge orders payment of restitution

WEST NEWTON — A 22-year-old Newton man faces one year of probation and was ordered last week to pay restitution after being convicted of stealing $532 from Northeast Saving Bank, 241 Needham St., Newton Upper Falls.

Burton J. Miller, 16 Elliot Place, Newton Upper Falls, was found guilty of larceny of property worth more than $100 and uttering a forged instrument, according to court records.

Court records show that Miller is alleged to have taken the money from the bank in March.

Newtonville Library windows smashed

NEWTONVILLE — Four windows at the Newtonville Library were broken last week by a high school aged youth who fled on foot, police said. The red haired, white male is said to have smashed four windows on the east side of the building, according to police. Police said the suspect eluded one witness to the vandalism by running "in the direction of the high school."

Newtonville man charged with DWI

NEWTONVILLE — A 41-year-old Newtonville man was arrested on Lowell Avenue Friday night and charged with operating under the influence of alcohol and possession of a Class D substance, marijuana, police said. Police made the arrest at 10:50 p.m.

Senior Corner

Community offers 'Traveling Meals'

(Senior Corner is a regular feature compiled by the city's Department of Human Services.)

In this age of human services and consciousness-raising of thy neighbor's need, there functions an agency dedicated solely to the feeding and nourishing of the elderly, handicapped and convalescent: Traveling Meals of Newton, Inc.

It is a non-profit organization founded and sponsored by the churches and temples of Newton. Meals, presently at $3 per day, are delivered five days a week. Referrals are from doctors, visiting nurses, social service agencies, the Department of Human Services, family and friends. A doctor's prescription concerning the type of diet needed is necessary. Regular and special diets are available. Meals are prepared at Newton-Wellesley Hospital, Carroll Centre for the Blind and Mt. Saint Vincent Retirement Centre in Wellesley.

Three young mothers have recently joined the group. The surprising note about this is that they function as drivers, carrying their babies with them. They bring not only the hot meals, but a chance for a reunion of the "old and the young!" Aside from the satisfaction derived from the distribution of the food, a certain sense of responsibility goes with it, as witness the following scenarios:

A woman suffering from Multiple Sclerosis tries to get by with a little assistance from her husband. He cannot be the strength she needs to lean on, for he is recovering from a foot operation.

The driver places the food directly in the hands of a retarded recipient who is also lame–but his brother reaches out to confiscate all for himself. Poor fellow, he cannot be held to blame!

An 86-year-old senior lady is quite incapacitated with arthritis, but hobbles to the door with her walker leading the way. It is difficult to maneuver–but together they manage!

Another lady, of 70-year vintage, has her senses heightened by the aroma of a freshly cooked meal delivered straight into her eager hands. She reaches out carefully, for she cannot see at all. She is blind!

Mr. J., another member of this special group of human beings, in his 80's or thereabouts, confided to his "friend" the driver, "The children don't visit very often." His hunger stretches forward for companionship, as well as sustenance.

Lady X, age 90, a very independent woman, confesses, "She could not cope any longer," but reverses this statement by throwing the key out the window for the driver to unlock the door! It could very well be the high point of the day for her.

"Manna from heaven" is what Lady M calls it! She gives the whole scene a spiritual tone!

A frustrated daughter contacted the agency when she discovered her mother existing on sausages and potato chips; delicious for a teenage Saturday night party snack, but hardly nutritious for frail old bones!

We have touched on just a few of the cases, but each in itself can probably be duplicated somewhat. There have been in excess of 14,000 meals prepared and served in 1984. When you consider the energy and planning behind this production, you will agree, it cannot be too easy!

Last September, an appeal to prominent citizens who are humanitarians at heart, to contribute towards the balance of the costs incurred (the $3/day per recipient does not cover all.) The results were gratifying! People responded and the "wheels were kept in motion." However, eight months have gone by and the amount is getting thin. In September to come, another appeal will be made and hopefully, history will repeat itself!

In that way, "Traveling Meals" can keep rolling along!

Is there anyone out there who could volunteer a few hours a week, as a driver, or as a driver's companion? "Traveling Meals" will welcome with open arms anyone willing to contribute part of their time.

On May 13 the Board of Directors and their guests celebrated their annual Spring Luncheon.

The Honorary Board has as its members: Rabbi Samuel Chiel, Rev. William C. Coleman, Rev. John J. Connelly, Rev. Norman R. DePuy, Rev. Robert L. Griesse, Rev. Carl P. Ijams, Mayor Theodore D. Mann, Rabbi Richard M. Miller and Rabbi Richard Yellin.

The Treasurer is Howard F. Fowle and Coordinator, Thomas B. Brehm.

It is a comforting thought to know that in a city that includes 11 villages, we can sleep a little easier–knowing that not even one person need ever go to bed with "hunger" for a companion!

BC fills Gasson Chair for 1986

CHESTNUT HILL — Rev. Gerald F. Cavanagh, S.J., professor of management at the University of Detroit's College of Business and Administration, has been named Thomas I. Gasson, S.J. Professor in the School of Management at Boston College for the 1986-87 academic year.

The announcement was made by Rev. Joseph R. Fahey, S.J., academic vice president and dean of faculties at Boston College.

Fahey commented on the appointment by saying, "Fr. Cavanagh represents the type of Jesuit scholar we wish to attract to the Gasson Chair. I am pleased that he will be our first Gasson scholar in one of the university's professional schools. His scholarly dedication in the field of business ethics strengthens the commitment of Boston College to produce sophisticated and professionally skilled but who are also capable of fashioning a more humane and just society."

Inflated American Dream

By Neville Frankel

We all know that salaries don't go as far as they used to; that home mortgages are at significantly higher rates than they used to be, and that middle class parents can no longer assume an ability to finance their children's college education.

The American Dream has become available to fewer and fewer of us over the last two decades, for reasons that are both pervasive and subtle. We often hear, for example, about the changing demographics of our society, and about the increasing number of senior citizens.

What does this mean for those of us who were born during or after World War II–those of us who, because of the 1983 Congressional changes in Social Security laws, are denied access to our Social Security payments until we are 67?

For one thing, our plans for retirements have become more important. Because our lives are likely to last longer and cost more, it's become essential to find ways of living on retirement income for a longer period and at inflated prices. But more importantly, we must think now about protecting our retirement income and developing jobs we can productivly handle as senior citizens.

Some believe that the traditional dream of retirement, although deeply ingrained in the American psyche, has become economically impractical. On such is Jarold A. Keiffer, staff director of the 1981 White House Conference on Aging, and a former deputy Commisssioner of Social Security.

"In the near furture," said Keiffer recently in the Washington Post. "We will have radically alter our traditional views of a working life. The majority of us will probably find it desirable and perhaps necessary to delay our retirement and work many years longer than most people do now."

The original intent of Social Security was to provide a mimimal income, the expectation being that retiress would have funds from other sources. But a 1981 Louis Harris survey revealed the following:

–66% of people over 65 recieved no interest from a savings account;–78% had no investment income;–86% had no pension income;–95% received no financial assistance for their children.

According to Keiffer, the Federal Goverment, private industry, labor unions and the U.S. educational system should be finding ways to help older people remain in the work force, instead of pretending that there is no conflict between the promise of adequate retirement income–and the reality of insufficient funds.

At present, older workers are pressured to retire; most employees refuse to retrain workers, and most pension plans do not allow the build-up of additional retirement benefits if an employees works beyond the age of 65. As a first step, says Keiffer, we must remove these disincentives to delaying retirement.

In the 50's and 60"s, high U.S. productivity and low inflation made it possible to support a large retired population. But the growing size of our related population raised grave questions about the solvency of the Social Security system. In 1990, it is expected that only three working persons will be paying Social Security tax that supports each recipient of Social Security benefits.

Other retirement plans and pension programs have also been affected, with over 130 companies faulting on their pension obligations since 1980. And as a result of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act (ERSIA) and its many bureauaucractic provsions, thousands of smaller firms have terminated their retirement plans. This was not the intent of Congress, but is the result of poor draftsmanship and inadequate research on the part of its memebers at that time.

Keiffer maintains that leaders in both the private and public sector need to act rapidly and imaginatively in order to tap the social and financial resource that could accrue to a nation from the longer lives of its citizens. If no action is taken, he says, "our country could find itself preoccupied with...high costs of supporting many older people who would prefer to lengthen their productive years and earn more toward their own support.

Most people have some idea of the income they will need in retirement..but few know how much to set aside, and at what rate it needs to grow, to provide that income.

If you are not confident that you know how to plan ahead adequately, you should consider pre-retiremnt counseling. Your advisor should have the computer capacity to forecast predictable increases in your cost of living after retirement, and to relate that to the kinds and types of investment necessary to protect your standard of living at retirement, whether at 65, or 70 or later.

Memorial Day observances start at cemetery

NEWTON — The annual Newton Memorial Day observances will begin at the Newton Veteran's Lot, Newton Cemetery, at 10 a.m. Monday, May 27.

According to the Newton Veteran's Council, members of Newton veteran's posts and chapters will form in front of the cemetery office building at 9:45 a.m. and the combined units will march to the veteran's lot ten minutes later for the memorial observance.

The opening prayer will be given by Rev. William Lowe, Church of the Messiah, Auburndale. Among those presenting memorial wreaths after a roll call by Council Adjutant General Thomas Medaglia will be Mrs. Raymond J. Richard, presenting the Gold Star Mother's Wreath; Mrs. Hazel B. Brock, presenting the Widows of World War I Wreath; Newton Mayor Theodore D. Mann, presenting the City of Newton Wreath and Saul Klashman, presenting the Newton Veterans' Council Wreath.

Other wreaths will be presented by the Chaplain William J. Farrell Chapter No. 23 DAV commander Vincent J. DiGironimo and Chapter Auxiliary president Mary DiGironimo; Newton Women's Post 410 American Legion commander Betty Cunningham; Italian-Americans War Veterans Post 50 commander George Sementelli; Newton Post 211 Jewish War Veterans commander Philip Geller; Nonantum Post 440 American Legion commander Michael Volpe; Newton Post No. 1664 Veterans of Foreign Wars commander Joseph Fitzsimmons; Newton Fire and Police Post Veterans of Foreign Wars commander Anthony Penzo; George D. Carson Post No. 141 American Legion commander Mario D'Innocenzo; The Norumbega Council of the Scouts of America and the Newton Jaycees' Peter Coletti.

Following the presentations, Fr. Anthony Moore of St. Bernard's Church in West Newton will say the closing prayer.

The Memorial Day Parade will start at 1 p.m. at the Purity Supreme parking lot on Washington Street, Newtonville, and will proceed west on Washington Street to Newtonville Square, south on Walnut Street and along the Newton Veteran's Council's "Avenue of Flags" to Commonwealth Avenue, west on Commonwealth to pass-in-review at Newton City Hall, after which all units will form in front of the Newton War Memorial Building for a Memorial Day observance and an address by Mann at the "Living Memorial Garden."

Joining Mann in the parade's lead column will be Medaglia, former Newton mayors Howard Whitmore and Monte G. Babas and Newton Police Chief William F. Quinn, who will ride in a department cruiser.

Among those following them will be the 18th United States Army Band, Fort Devens, members of the Newton Board of ALderman and the Newton School Committee, the Joseph F. Hill Post No. 156 American Legion Band of Waltham, the Holy Name Veterans of Foreign Wars Band, the Newton North High School Martching Band, the North Reading High School Marching Band, and the Stuart Highland Pipe Band.

The observance at the "Living Memorial Garden" following the parade will begin with an opening prayer by Rev. Lowe and include a memorial day address by Mayor Mann. The ceremony will be followed by musical selections by the bands and will close with a Retiring of Colors, to be accompanied by the Waltham American Legion Band.

Nonantum Memorial Day parade set May 26

NEWTON — The Nonantum Children's Christmas Party Association's Memorial Day parade and observances will begin with the placing of wreaths at eight memorial sites throughout the city, Sunday, May 26 at 9 a.m., at the Pvt. Richard Forte Memorial in Allison Park, California Street.

At 11:30 a.m., the City's new Vietnam Memorial, bearing the names of 23 returned from the war, will be dedicated on Washington Street, across from Our Lady's Church.

The annual parade, which Chairman Anthony "Fat" Pellegrini touted as "the biggest" and best we've ever had," will begin at the Vietnam Memorial at 1:30 p.m., and end at the Hawthorn Park Field House.

This year's parade will feature the Alleppo Temple Shriners, the award winning American Legion Band from Waltham, the Syria Temple Band, the Pulaski Brass Band, the Legion Band, from Quincy, the Italian Colonial Band. The Watertown High School Band, Norwood's Union Brigade, the Holy Name Band, drum corps and drill teams. Leading the parade will be the Boston Police Motorcycle drill team.

Obituaries

Michael C. Bellofatto, 30

Employed as a painter in New Jersey

NEWTON — A funeral service will be held for Michael C. Bellofatto, 30, formerly of Newton, Thursday at 8:15 a.m. from the Andrew J. Magni Funeral Home, 365 Watertown St., Newton, followed by a funeral mass in Our Lady Help of Christians Church, Newton at 9 a.m. Burial will be in Calvary Cemetery, Waltham.

Mr. Bellofatto died Sunday in the Hackensack Hospital in N. J., following an auto accident.

He was employed by Electro Refinishing in N.J. as a painter.

The son of the late William Bellofatto and the nephew of the late Elizabeth Scrooc, he leaves his mother, Virginia (Wagner) Bellofatto of Newton; three sisters, Marie Kelleher of N.H., Evelyn Fahey and Michele Cetrone, both of Watertown; two aunts, Antoinette and Margaret Bellofatto of Newton; several nieces and nephews.

Margaret Dempsey, 86

Retired Herald travel writer

WABAN — A funeral mass for Margaret E. (Meighen) Dempsey, 86, of Waban, a retired travel writer for the Herald-Traveler, was held Tuesday at 11 a.m. at St. Phillip Neri Church, Waban. Burial was in Newton Cemetery.

Mrs. Dempsey died last Friday at the Wellesley Nursing Home, after a lengthy illness.

Born in Preston, Minn., she had lived in the Boston area since 1929. A volunteer with the American Red Cross during World War II, she was president of the organization's Newton chapter and organized the Grey Ladies at Newton-Wellesley Hospital.

She was chairman of the Daughters of the American Revolution committee on American Indian Schools and founder and past president of the St. Phillip Neri Guild. She was also active in the Harvard Women's Club and a member of the Massachusetts State Federation of Women's Clubs and the New England Farm and Garden Association.

She was a graduate of the Covenant of the Visitation School of St. Paul and later attended Emerson College and the University of Minnesota.

She leaves two sons, Earl and Thomas, both of Waban; seven grandchildren.

Mary F. Waters, 98

Retired music teacher

NEWTON CENTRE — A funeral mass was celebrated last week in Sacred Heart Church, Newton Centre, for Mary F. (English) Waters, 98, of Newton Centre, a retired music teacher.

Mrs. Waters died at home after a long illness.

Born in Newton, she had been a lifelong resident and was a graduate of the New England Conservatory of Music. She taught music in Newton for many years.

She leaves a daughter, Mary C. Waters of Newton; a niece, Gertrude English of Newton Centre.

Abraham Sandberg, 67

Has three children, five grandchildren

NEWTON — Funeral services were held last week for Abraham Sandberg, 67, of Waban, at Temple Reyim, Newton.

Mr. Sandberg died at Newton-Wellesley Hospital.

He leaves a daughter, Ina Willen; three sons, Martin of Havertown, Pa., Joel of Emerson, N.J., Lawrence of Waban; a sister, Diane Behrman of Falmouth; five grandchildren.

George F. Weir, 84

Former J. L. Thomson Co. employee

WEST NEWTON — The funeral of George F. Weir, 84, of West Newton, was held Wednesday at the Brasco and Son Memorial, 773 Moody St., Waltham, with a mass of Christian Burial at St. Bernard's Church, West Newton. Interment followed in Calvary Cemetery, Waltham.

Mr. Weir died recently at WalthamWeston Hospital, after a long illness.

Born in Waltham, he had been a West Newton resident for the past 60 years.

Mr. Weir retired in 1968, after being employed at the Judson L. Thomson Co. in Waltham for over 50 years as a draftsman and precision tool and die maker.

He was a graduate of Newton High School, Class of 1919 and a 1930 graduate of Suffolk Law School.

He leaves his wife Violette (Bockli) Weir; a daughter, Mrs. Susan Shaughnessy of Anchorage, Alaska; a sister, Mrs. Rose Hillson of West Newton; two grandchildren and several nieces and nephews.

Arthur Gabelnick, relative in Newton

BOSTON — A funeral service was held last week in Temple Israel, Boston, for Arthur Gabelnick, 79, of Jamaica Plain, a jewelry distributor and importer.

Locally he is survived by a stepbrother, Michael Millen of Newton. He is also survived by another stepbrother, Harold Millen of Florida; a niece, two nephews and six grandnieces and grandnephews.

The founder of Gable Distributors, an importer, distributor and wholesaler of costume jewelry, he sold the firm in 1980. He was a member of Temple Israel, Boston, the temple brotherhood and the Jewish Chataqua Society.

During World War II, he was a lieutenant commander in the Navy. Born in Russia, he settled in Boston and was a graduate of Boston English High School, Harvard University and Harvard Business School.

Denise Solomon, of Newton temple

BROOKLINE — A funeral service was held last week in the Levine Chapel, Harvard Street, for Denise M. (Menzer) Solomon, 64, of Los Angeles, a volunteer during the first five years of the WGBH-TV, Channel 2 auction and a former member of Temple Shalom, West Newton.

Mrs. Solomon died in Cedars of Lebanon Hospital, Los Angeles, after a brief illness. Burial will be in Mishkan Tefila Memorial Park, West Roxbury.

Mrs. Solomon used the experience she gained working for Channel 2's auction to become involved in establishing a similar auction for Los Angeles public broadcasting station KCET. She and her husband Jack, formerly of Brookline, moved to Los Angeles in 1970.

Born in Fontanelle, Iowa, she grew up in Creston, Iowa, and was a graduate of Stevens College, Columbia, Mo. and the University of Iowa.

Besides her husband, she leaves a daughter, Jan Simonson of Washington, D.C.; her mother, Henrietta Menzer of Los Angeles; a brother, Calvin C. Menzer of Los Angeles.

Porsche broken into at Marriott Hotel

NEWTON — A Porsche was reportedly broken into last week and a radar detector stolen while the red sports car was parked at the Marriott Hotel, 2345 Commonwealth Avenue, police said.

Police said the passenger's side window and door were both damaged in the theft, which took place sometime in the preceding four days. The robbery was reported at 1 p.m., police said.

Chapter I anniversary recognized in Newton

NEWTON — This year, Title I/Chapter I is celebrating its 20th birthday. On April 15, 1965, President Lyndon Baines Johnson signed into law the Elementary and Secondary Education Act (ESEA). Part of that law included funding for Title I/Chapter I programs.

The program is the largest federal aid to education program and the first and most important federal program assigned to the U.S. Office of Education to recognize that economically and educationally disadvantaged children need extra help - commonly called compensatory education - to do well in school.

Because of the legislation passed in 1965, 72,000 Massachusetts students in 1,000 schools have been receiving extra help in reading, mathematics and other basic skills.

Funding for each school system is determined at the state level. Individual school districts are responsible for identifying the particular schools that qualify to receive this aid. The program began in Newton in February, 1966 at Lincoln-Eliot and Emerson Elementary Schools. Today, over 200 Newton children benefit from Chapter I funding in programs that include a nursery school; reading and mathematics services at Lincoln-Eliot, Countryside and Underwood Elementary Schools and Brown and Day Junior High School; as well as support services from social workers and psychologists.

Birthday celebrations for Chapter I occured all over the country in April. Here in Newton, the staff and parents involved in the program are also pleased to recognize this occasion and honor those people who continue to provide this additional assistance to children.

Housing law examined

NEWTON — The Newton League of Women Voters has sent its recommendations to the aldermanic Sub-Committee on Housing. The committee meets late this week to try to further define the city's Ten Percent Ordinance, which requires housing developers to provide housing for low-income families.

The League recommends that the low-income housing be on the same site as the other housing developed. "This reinforces distribution of low-income housing throughout the city and avoids clusters of low-income development," said League President Ann Grantham in a prepared statement.

She also said the original intent of the Ten Percent Ordinance was to increase the dwindling supply of rental housing in the city.

"Rehabilitation of existing housing by developers to fulfill the 10 percent requirement appears to subvert the intent of the ordinance. It does not increase low-income housing and in many cases, forces low-income tenants out to allow for rehabilitation. We do not support this means of of fulfilling the ten Percent Ordinance."

Grantham said a cash payment in lieu of housing units from a developer when he is building a small number of units is a "sensible idea," but the money should be used only to increase low rental housing stock. She suggested a special fund be set up to insure the money on housing.

The League also suggested the Housing Sub-Committee look at the some of the city's surplus buildings, such as the Bigelow, Claflin and Warren schools, for possible use for subsidized housing.

Newscaster speaks to clinic

NEWTON — The Board of Directors of Region West announces that Tanya Hart of WBZ-TV 4 will be the guest speaker at Region West's 22nd annual meeting.

The meeting will be held on Wednesday, May 22 at the Wellesley Community Center, 219 Washington St., in Wellesley Hills. Cocktails will start at 6:30 p.m., followed by dinner and Tanya Hart's lecture.

She will be speaking about televison prgramming for minorities and children, two areas in which she has extensive experience and expertise.

Region West, a family counseling service and mental health clinic, serves nine communties — Brookline, Natick, Newton, Sherborn, Sudbury, Waltham, Wayland, Wellesley and Weston — from offices in Waltham Wellesley, Natick and Newton. The agency's core service is the provision of individual, couple and family counseling to residents of these communities.

Region West also runs nine programs which provide services to the elderly, the developmentally disabled and their families, preschool children, abused and/or neglected children, Waltham's hispanic community, employees of local businesses and, through support groups, people facing life crises such as divorce, retirement or the death of a spouse.

Persons interested in attending the annual meeting are requested to make reservations with Goldie Clifford at 965-6200. The cost of the evening is $15 per person with a $12 fee for significant others.

Hygeia Sciences moving into Newton

Dr. Elliott Block, President of Hygeia Sciences (formerly BTC Diagnostics) of Cambridge, Massachusetts, has announced that Hygeia is moving to 330 Nevada St., Newton. The company will occupy a renovated 45,687 square foot R & D, manufacturing, and office facility within Nonantum Office Park, a rehabilitated historic mill complex built primarily in the 1860's and originally occupied by the Silver Lake Cordage Company. Joseph Biotti is the owner and developer of the complex. The new space will enable the Hygeia to bring together into one facility its research and development, manufacturing, assembly, quality control, and office functions. This work is presently carried on in Cambridge and Woburn. The move will be accomplished in stages that began April 22 and should be complete by July 1985.

Hygeia Sciences was founded in 1980 to develop and manufacture diagnostic products in the areas of reproductive biology and infectious diseases using state-of-the-art technology. It began to market its first product, a pregnancy test kit distributed by Hoffmann-La Roche under the trademark Sensi-Chrome and sold only to clinical laboratories, hospitals and physicians, in January 1984.

Prayers for peace

By Kevin C. Kennedy, Staff Writer

CHESTNUT HILL — The Mayor's Community Prayer Breakfast, begun 11 years ago as non-denominational get-together vaguely aimed at raising consciousness and promoting a sense of community, has set its sights on brotherhood and peace through understanding.

That fact was very clear last week when Camelia Sadat, daughter of the late President of Egypt Anwar Sadat, embraced Rabbi Richard Yellin in front of nearly 1,000 delighted diners in McElroy Commons at Boston College.

"If Rabbi Yellin can kiss Ms. Sadat, anything is possible ... especially in Newton," Mayor Theodore Mann told the appreciative crowd.

Sadat, a graduate of Boston University's School of Public Communication who has just completed a book about her famous father, "Sadat: My father and I," exhorted the gathering to follow her father's lead.

She pointed to President Sadat's heroic decision to reverse history and attempt an accord that would end an age old conflict with Israel. And she encouraged each listener to have "the courage to change and go to his enemy and say, 'Let's make up.' We can change ourselves to better our community."

She pointed out that prejudice and bigotry are condemned in the tenets of her Muslim religion as they are in the scriptures of every religion on earth. "I am a Muslim who believes in her religion," she said. "All my friends are Jews or Christians."

She quoted from the scriptures and told the crowd, "You shall not hate your kinsman in your heart. Love your neighbors as yourselves."

Addressing the need to cast off traditional prejudices,

Final round in Wd 8

By Edward Cafasso, Staff Writer

NEWTON — About 75 residents watched Ward 8 aldermanic candidates Howard Passman and William Shaevel put on their boxing gloves last week during a debate at Temple Beth Avodah.

Their sparring match ended up a draw, thanks to some jabs thrown in Shaevel's direction by former Ward 8 alderman Robert Katz, who entered the fray occasionally.

If any winner emerged, it was Teresa Walsh, who simply promised "hard work" and then stayed in a neutral corner while her opponents tried vainly to deliver the knockout blow.

Passman fired off the first roundhouse during the rebuttal segment of the forum sponsored by the Temple's Brotherhood.

According to Passman, aldermanic endorsements of Shaevel's candidacy and Shaevel's claim that he possesses "the style" needed to "build bridges" among other aldermen will only lead to the creation of more cliques on the Board of Aldermen, not better government or more effective ward representation.

"I don't want to be part of any clique ... I'm not a deal-maker. That's the trouble with this city, everybody's making deals. The Board of Aldermen, ladies and gentlemen, has no leadership today ... I don't have to cow-tow to anyone," he said.

Later, Shaevel shot back, "You know why these aldermen endorsed me and not Howard? It's because Howard doesn't understand the issues. Government and politics are no different than running your home.

"You don't come home and bang your fist on the table and tell your wife, 'This is what I want done.' ... If you insult a person to their face, how do you go up to them the next day and ask them for their vote on an issue that's important to your ward. Style is what is going to be important on the Board of Aldermen," Shaevel said.

To counter Shaevel's previous claim that he had "dealt with all the problems" of the ward, Katz pointed out "the very key" role he played as the Ward 8 alderman in ensuring that the Oak Hill Park Community Center was built.

Trivial pursuit

NEWTON — Three of the four contenders for a seat on the Board of Aldermen last week failed an impromptu, factual quiz about the Commonwealth's largest municipal legislature.

William Shaevel, Teresa Walsh and Howard Passman were asked to name two ward aldermen during last week's "question and answer" segment. The fourth candidate, Robert Katz, was asked to name one ward alderman and the city's economic development director.

Walsh, a long-time neighborhood activist, was the only aldermanic aspirant who provided the correct answers.

Shaevel, who repeatedly touted his ability to argue effectively with his potential col-

He has a head for beer

By David Weber, Staff Writer

NEWTON — What makes a man with three Harvard degrees and a six-figure salary with one of the country's more prestigious management consultant firms quit his job in favor of brewing beer?

"That's easy to answer," says James Koch of Newton. "I'm the sixth consecutive oldest son in my family to be a brewer. Not being a brewer was strange. I've always wanted to be a brewer. I believed the timing was right and Americans were ready to appreciate a great beer."

So Koch (pronounced Cook) left his job with Boston Consulting Group in February and set out to brew the "best beer in America." He calls it Samuel Adams Boston Lager and it has been available in the Boston area since April 11, when the Bostonian Hotel first began serving it.

Little more than a month later Samuel Adams Boston Lager can be found in more than 60 restaurant and bars in the Boston area, including Abruzzi Via in Newton Centre. It can also be purchased by the case or six-pack at Murray's Liquors in Newton Centre, where it sells for $23.99 and $6.49 respectively.

Koch spares no expense in producing his beer, using what he says are the finest ingredients available for brewing a lager. The two-row summer barley malt is grown in the Northwestern United States and the hops comes from the Hallertau and Tettang regions of Bavaria. It comes in what he calls "the classic American bottle," the brown

Major changes set for School Comm.

By Howard Altman
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Because of job burnout and city charter-imposed limitations, the eight-member School Committee will have at least four new members following city elections in November.

Two members, Katherine E. Jones and Nancy W. Mann, already have served four, two-year terms — the limit any member can serve on the School Committee according to the city charter. Susan S. Silbey and James P. Mnookin are both eligible for re-election, but say they are leaving for personal reasons.

Newton residents vote for School Committee members every two years. New board members are seated in January.

Alderman Verne Vance Jr. successfully submitted a proposal to the Board of Alderman earlier this year that will open the question of limitations on the terms of School Committee members to voters through a referendum this November.

Reacting to her departure, Mann says, "While I think it unfair to impose a limitation on the terms served by School Committee members and not on alderman, a four-term limit is not necessarily a bad thing.

"I think it's time for me to get out for a number of reasons. My husband just died after a long illness and I was finding that after eight years some of the things you hear you've heard before."

Mann says that while she enjoyed being on the committee, the time involved was often demanding.

"It can take as much of your time as you're willing to give it," the Ward 3 representative says, adding her future involvement will "probably be confined to reading the newspaper."

Jones, also an eight-year veteran of school wars, is unsure of the merits of limiting a committee member's term, but says that for her, "eight years is long enough — it's time for some new people.

"I need some time to look at this issue retrospectively," the Ward 2 representative says. "Right now I don't think it would be appropriate for me to comment."

Silbey, representing Ward 4, said she hoped that by stepping down she could spend more time with her family.

"My oldest daughter is going to college in a few years and I want to be able to spend some time with her before she goes," she said.

She came through hell

By Howard Altman, Staff Writer

NEWTON — In many ways the young woman with swept-back hair and sad brown eyes is just like her classmates at Newton North High School. Being a senior about to leave school, she isn't quite sure what she wants to do in the future.

But, for Minh Ly, winner of this year's Stephen Bottomley/Murray Road Scholarship Award given annually to "an outstanding senior who has independently initiated and pursued a unique high school learning experience," the similarities begin and end inside the school.

The major difference between Minh Ly and her classmates is that the 23-year-old woman grew up not in the comfortable surroundings of suburban Newton, but in the rubble of war-torn Saigon.

"It was terrible," Ly said tilting her head to peer out the library window. "My whole family was separated. There were lots of soldiers all over the place - the bodies of many soldiers who were killed were left on the road."

Ly said that, while life during the war was tough, things were worse after the Americans left in 1975.

"Before the Americans left, we could see fighting still going on. It was a bad experience, but when the Americans left things got worse because the Viet Cong soldiers came into our house or where ever we were staying and forced us to move."

After five years of living under the communist regime, Ly decided she had to leave her homeland and come to America to find the

Grandma's a grad

By Howard Altman, Staff Writer

BOSTON — She was just one of 264 painters, sculptors, photographers and other artists who graduated from the Massachusetts College of Art (MCA) last week, but there is something different about Rosalyn Barron.

Maybe it's because when the 77-year-old grandmother of four first enrolled at the MCA, FDR was president, the Braves were still in Boston and swing was king.

Barron, known as "Ros" to her classmates, took her first night classes at the 112-year-old publicly-supported independent art school back in 1932. But, because of "obligations to husband David and my two sons," it has taken her 53 years to earn the right to put on the black cap and gown and receive her diploma.

"I remember my first course," Barron said in the school's Longwood Avenue parking lot before the commencement parade. "It was a fashion illustration course. I wanted to become a fashion designer - which I did, for a company called Hubrite Informal Frocks Inc., which went out of business a long time ago." Barron chuckled, then added, "The company's gone, but I'm still here."

Sadat quoted the words of one of Rabbi Yellin's addresses: "We can not ignore our history, because we are made of it. But we can not let our history destroy our future."

Yellin echoed Sadat's theme in his benediction at the end of the breakfast gathering when he prayed that the voice of understanding would triumph over the curse left by the Tower of Babel. "Remove from us the confusion of tongues, so even the prejudiced can hear," he said.

Mayor Mann joined in the spirit of the occasion with the announcement, "We are the world. Our children are the world." He told the crowd that, because of Boston College's generosity, several thousand dollars from the prayer breakfast's proceeds would be given to Protestant, Catholic and Jewish charities for distribution in Ethiopia. The Rev. J. Donald Monan, president of Boston College, presented Mann with a check equal to the food costs of the event, which the college absorbed.

"We're not having breakfast by ourselves," Mann told his audience.

When Fr. Monan gave Mann the check, the Mayor goaded the crowd to an outburst of laughter and applause when he commented, "Last year, I kissed a bishop (Bernard Law). This year, I get a check from the president of a Catholic College. What else could be in store for this little Jewish boy?"

Newton Centre resident Irving Usen, a living Horatio Alger story who started as a pushcart peddler and rose to the head of the world's largest independent fisheries company, won this year's Newton Centennial Medallion for his philanthropy. According to the Mayor, "every corner of the community" has benefitted from the generosity of Usen and his wife, Edythe, who have lived in the city for 60 years.

After Mann's moving testimony to his success and to his sharing it with countless others, Usen commented, "No one could get a better eulogy than this. Now, I've heard it. My rabbi won't have to say anything."

After reading the words of praise on the award citation, the man who started out as a delivery boy in his youth cracked, "This paper is wrong. I'm a dropout. It didn't seem to do me any harm."

In a brief repartee after the presentation of the award, Usen comforted Mann saying, "I'm not going to run for mayor." Regarding the medal, which hung around his neck from a multi-colored ribbon, Usen told Mann, "It looks good." The mayor responded, "It matches your suit."

The rest of the morning's program included the presentation of Student Community grants to Kimberly Baldi, for her community service, and Richard Forrest and Denise Hill for distinguished scholastic achievement beyond their schools' curricula.

The Newton North High School Concert Choir, under the direction of Raymond Smith and Richard Travers, serenaded the gathering with pieces by Mozart and Leonard Bernstein.

Josephine Simon, of the Newton Arts Center; Samuel Turner, of the Black Citizens of Newton, and Louise Taglienti, of the Thompsonville Community Association, offered a variety of scriptural readings and prayers.

Mayor Mann called for a moment of silence in memory of the late Robert Shuman, alderman from Ward 8, and Ernest Dietz, a former alderman from Newton Centre.

Benjamin Lipson, who acted as program chairman for the event, gave the members of the audience an unexpected treat when he ran through the names of this year's Prayer Breakfast Committee — a chance to express their appreciation to Ed Mandell. Speaking of the complications involved in organizing an event the size of the prayer breakfast, Lipson commented, "When you find a difficult job to do, you go after a busy man."

The applause that followed suggested there were many present who delighted in a chance to show Mandell their appreciation for the innumerable good works he manages to pull off without ever taking the slightest bit of credit.

BC's a big boon for Garden City

By Edward Cafasso, Staff Writer

CHESTNUT HILL — Boston College, its students, employees and visitors injected $67.3 million into the Garden City's economy from July 1, 1983 to June 30, 1984, according to the findings of the first economic impact study in the school's 122-year history.

The results of study, which details BC's financial contributions to both Newton and Boston during fiscal year 1984, were released last week by school spokesman Doug Whiting.

"We're hoping to show that, in many ways, the university does impact the community in a very favorable light. It should lead to a better understanding of the school's value to the cities in which it is located," Whiting said.

Although the study failed to include the cost of providing essential services to BC, like fire and police protection, the impact statement should provide school officials with potent ammunition to respond to persistent neighborhood concerns about traffic and parking problems and critics of the Catholic university's tax-exempt status.

Whiting said BC decided to undertake the analysis, as Harvard and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology have done for years, "particularly in light of the 10-year building plan" currently underway in parts of Newton and Boston.

In a prepared statement released last week, BC President J. Donald Monan, S.J., said the impact study "documents a conscientious and extensive program of support to both the public and private sector in our two host communities..."

The financial study, dubbed "A Working Partnership: Boston College and Its Neighbors," shows that BC's economic impact on both cities, at least during fiscal 1984, is surprisingly similar.

The direct monetary spending in both communities, based on employee payroll and school-related expenditures, totalled $145.5 million — $78.2 million in Boston and $67.3 million in the Garden City.

About 26 percent of BC's workforce, or 556 employees, live in Newton and received $13.1 million in pay during fiscal 1984, while 610 school employees live in Boston and were paid $9.8 million during the same period.

Roughly translated, those figures show that 47 percent of the school's total payroll went directly to residents in both cities in one year.

The university, its employees, students and thousands of visitors spent $54.2 million here during the year for goods and services and $68.4 million in Boston, according to the study.

The impact statement also shows that BC almuni living in Newton spent $101.2 million during fiscal 1984 on housing, food, transportation utilities, taxes and other expenses. The university's alumni living in the Hub spent $158.3 million on such items in the same period.

Time and demand deposits of BC's faculty, staff and students in Newton-based banks totalled $6.9 million for fiscal 1984, while the school's credit base in Boston reached $11.9 million for the same period.

In addition, the school brought $800,000 in federal, state and university financial aid to Garden City residents, according to the study. The financial aid figure for Boston residents totalled $1.4 million in fiscal 1984.

According to Monan's prepared statement, municipalities are becoming increasingly dependent on aid from both the public and private sectors.

"The more complex our society becomes, the more our local city governments and their communities have begun to look beyond their own resources for various means of support. New partnerships of public and private enterprises have devloped to address a broad range of problems.

"Hospitals, universities, churches and museums, though struggling to meet rapidly escalating costs of their own serivices, have generously contributed their expertise, their vision and their facilities to residents of the locality that both parties call 'home,'" Monan said.

"Indeed, private institutions of this sort have become to their communities not only a fund of human talent and resources; many have developed sufficient stature to have a critical influence on the economic base of their surrounding communities. Such is the case with Boston College," he concluded.

Life insurance

A simple test – one that's safe, swift and painless – could save your life. It's a mammogram, and it can detect breast cancer in the earliest stages, when it's still easy to treat and cure.

The American Cancer Society recommends that women have a baseline mammogram between the ages of 35 and 39 – younger if there's a family history of cancer – and one every year or so from 40 to 49. After a woman reaches age 50, she should have one every year.

So check with your doctor. Then come into Precheck/ The Mammography Center.

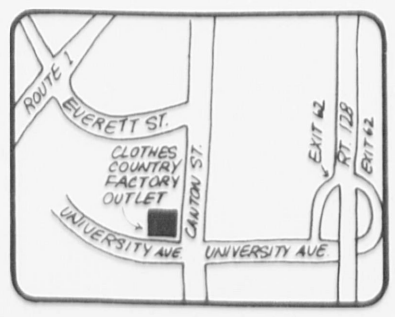

If you're a woman over 35, make it a policy to have a mammogram at Precheck – a life insurance policy.

'Day of reckoning' needed to finance new main library

(Editor's note: The following report is based on a draft document that is subject to revision in the future.)

By Edward Cafasso
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Financial experts on the Main Library Facility Committee are recommending, in no uncertain terms, that Mayor Theodore D. Mann and the Board of Aldermen start biting the political bullet in order to pay for the construction of a new building.

"...if the Board of Aldermen and the mayor are unwilling to take the actions necessary to receive high values from existing surplus properties which can result in the financing of a new library now, we doubt that such action will be taken in the future...," according to a draft report obtained recently.

"At some point, surplus properties must be sold for reasonable values, if Newton is to get the new library it deserves without affecting the city's operating budget. We see no reason to delay this day of reckoning," the report concludes.

Much of the Finance Subcommittee's 13-page draft is devoted to convincing the mayor and aldermen, often in terms bordering on direct criticism, that the time has come to stop giving away the city's land.

"We understand that there were many reasons in the past why the city has been willing to sell its surplus property at such low prices, including the fact that many of the uses ... serve excellent causes.

"But other factors have also led to these low values. They include the nature of the reuse process itself with an overemphasis on local rather than city-wide considerations, a failure to consider reasonable development alternatives that could lead to higher values, and a failure to recognize that high dollar values could also serve worthy public purposes — in this case, the construction of a new main library," the draft report states.

Underlying this stance is the long-vacant Warren Junior High School on Washington Street — a building the subcommittee sees as the key to financing a new main library.

"We cannot overestimate the importance of receiving a high value for this building. In a very real sense, if one does not favor receiving a high value for Warren, then one does not favor financing a new main library from the disposition of surplus properties," according to their report.

Of all the possible non-budget sources available to pay for a new building, Warren Junior High is "by far the largest," because its disposition for the most profitable resue possible would account for "roughly 40 percent" of the total dollar amount needed to finance a modern library, estimated at $8-$10 million.

"We believe it would be a travesty if substantial revenues were not generated from its disposition. Significantly, these revenues can be generated without resorting to the destruction of the existing building or the development of the surrounding property," the draft report states.

Based on this, the subcommittee will recommend that the Warren be sold as rental office space for a minimum price of $3.6 million or leased for annual payments of $540,000, which then could be used to service a 20-year general obligation bond of $4.32 million.

The sale proceeds from other surplus properties — the Auburndale Yard ($750,000), the former Hyde School ($300,000) and the Carr School ($90,000) — could be combined with the $509,000 currently in the city's surplus property account for a total library fund of almost $1.65 million.

The subcommittee will also recommend that the city use the approximately $200,000 it expects to earn annually from leased properties to pay off the debt on a $1.6 million bond issue.

The $880,000 in fire proceeds currently located in the Newtonville Library, Hyde and Meadowbrook schools insurance accounts should also be turned over to the library cause, the draft report says.

"We recommend a fundraising campaign only as a secondary source of financing and would set an objective to raise $1 million from this effort," according to the subcommittee's draft report.

"It is important, however, not to be naive about the possible impact of a fundraising campaign. Poorly done, it would be a disaster. Well done, it would generate enthusiastic public support for the new library project," the report noted.

DWI: A brutal, costly lesson

By Kevin C. Kennedy

In an instant, my title changed from "Editor" to "Idiot."

Two Newton police officers, at approximately 10:30 on a Friday night, wondered what a man was doing sitting in his car, parked the wrong way, on Lowell Avenue, in Newtonville. They did not know I was parked out in front of my house. They did not know I was taking a little nap before I got out of the car to go across the street to my apartment.

Nor did they know I was drunk, royally.

I had come a long way that night, and I had died on my doorstep. I had carried the ball from my own goal line, and I had run 99 yards, two feet and 11 inches before I fell flat on my face.

I was about to learn a very brutal, very important lesson.

The police woke me and started asking me questions. It's a dreadful feeling you get in a situation like this, where circumstances are changing quickly and you are desperately and vainly trying to catch up.

Actually, it took me several days to catch up with it — to grasp that the nightmare I had lived in dread of for so long had finally become reality. The editor of the distinguished, 113-year-old weekly "paper of record" for the City of Newton: arrested for driving while intoxicated.

I was handcuffed, thrown in the back of the police cruiser and carried off to the station. During the short ride, the young officers traded idle banter about fellow workers, sports, etc. They did not seem to realize or respect that they had speaking parts in one of the most dramatic scenes in the movie that has been my life.

I envied them the apparently routine, uneventful life their banter implied, while I deeply dreaded the horror show that was about to take place.

At the station, I was treated firmly but politely. Several days later, when I bumped into Chief Quinn, he shook my hand and asked me, "Did they treat you all right down there?"

"Chief, under the circumstances, they treated me just fine," I told him.

Lt. Marilyn Connell, the first policewoman in the state to be promoted to the rank of lieutenant, was in charge of the shift. Within the strict guidelines of her responsibilities in such circumstances, she was very understanding.

Sgt. Gregory Wright, who still holds the departmental record for bagging the most DWI's in one week (55), lent his considerable experience to getting me processed. Wright comes down with an iron fist on DWI's, but he can couch it in a velvet glove.

Advised of my rights, I decided to take the breathalyzer test. (There is a mandatory 90-day loss of license if you don't.) The results of the test were high enough to create "a legal presumption of intoxication."

I called my brother-in-law for counsel and assistance. Having just completed his second year at Boston College law school, I thought he might help me avoid tacking any little mistakes onto the big one I had just made. More important, I needed someone to hold my hand. He worked out some of the details I was having difficulty grasping at the station, and, after Magistrate Henry Schultz signed the necessary papers, I was released.

I thanked Mr. Schultz for driving in from his Needham home for the occasion.

It was not until the next morning — and all through the next several days — that the realization of just what had happened really hit me.

You wake up in the morning, and there is a short period of time before you remember the nightmare. It takes a little longer to realize that the nightmare was not a bad dream. It really happpened!

You pace your apartment on legs shaking so badly you have to sit down, and, in your stomach, there's a cold, dark knot you wonder if you will ever untie.

"After nearly five years living and working in the City of Newton — working yourself up from the position of correspondent to that of a reporter, and, finally to the editorship of the city's oldest paper, you have blown it badly, Kev," the parent in me harshly told the child who stayed out late that fateful Friday night.

"I could not be sorrier," the child told the parent after several days of not speaking at all. "What can we possibly salvage from this mess?"

I called an old friend, Joe DeNucci, to recommend a lawyer. He came up with a couple of names. Joe works in the area of "human services." He wastes little time being "scandalized" when someone takes a tumble. He encouraged me to find out what the lesson was in all this and learn it.

I went to St Bernard's to find out if there might be some way I had yet to see whereby all this could work out for the better.

After the original shock wore off and I began to think a bit more clearly about my predicament, I began to take a more positive approach. Disregard the fact that I came to within a hair's breadth of making it home safely again. Disregard those well-meaning friends who told me that, since I was parked in my car in front of my house and not about to go careening off through the city to create serious problems for other people, it was wrong for me to be charged with DWI.

"You are going to pay a very, very heavy price for this incident," I told myself. "You'd be more of a fool than you are if you don't learn something from all this."

Indeed, by then, I had already paid out several hundred dollars for bail, an impounded vehicle and lawyer's fees. There would be more bills to be paid in the near future. More than the money, I was afraid of the price I was going to pay in terms of integrity and reputation in the community.

So, what do I get in return for the price I will ultimately pay? I get a smack on the head that is supposed to wake me up. When I open my eyes, what do I see?

First, and most important, I see that 25 years of drinking and driving is at an end. Time and luck have run out on the 16-year-old who was the only one who could drive everyone else home after a wild keg party ... the 20-year-old who drove all his drunk, sleeping college buddies two and a half hours back home from some girls' school we had terrorized for a night.

I see that, on several other occasions when I thought I had slid out of a DWI charge, I really hadn't at all. What I had done was to set myself up for a bad fall when it counted most ... a humiliating nosedive in the harsh light of public attention that could affect my entire future.

If only that cop, six years ago in Soquel, California, had taken the time to get me in a lot of trouble, I might have avoided my present circumstances. He was busy, frantically trying to untangle a July 4th mess of traffic that had descended on a small beachside community for its annual fireworks display.

I had been partying all day, so when I stopped my car to ask the harried cop for directions, I forgot there was an open bottle of Heineken's between my legs. The cop started to give me directions while he shuttled cars around.

When he finally looked at me, and saw the beer bottle, he could not believe his eyes. He smacked himself on the forehead with the flat of his hand and offered up expletives deleted. He grabbed the bottle out of the car and told me, "Get the hell out of here and stop driving!"

I wish now he had taken the time to shake me up.

Same goes for the cop who gave me a break in New Jersey some nine summers ago. I was out bemoaning a demised romance with the customary rituals: many beers and sad songs on a juke box. Coming home, a young cop stopped me for driving without my headlights. When he found out who I was, he immediately sympathized with me. "I'm a friend of her brother's," he told me. "I know what she's been up to and I know what you must be going through."

He let me go, and I thanked him for that. Looking back on it from a different perspective, I realize that, if he had arrested me, I might have avoided my present circumstances.

To the guy who managed to avoid DWI charges in Newton later on the same night that my long career of drinking and driving ended, you did not slide out of anything. You were the guy with the carload of passed-out friends who was stopped around 2:30 a.m. You told the officer you only had seven beers that night. Actually, the correct number was 14.

Better for you he had caught up with you so you could catch up with yourself. The circumstances were relatively innocent. There were no violations like speeding or failing to stay to the right. There was no accident involved ... no property damage, no one hurt or killed.

If you're anything like me, you have known for a long time that drinking and driving will eventually get you in a lot of trouble. You have wanted to do something about it, but you will avoid it until you get smacked with DWI. That Friday night a week and a half ago would have been a good chance. Next time, you might not be so lucky.

As to the future, there's a tough road ahead. There are a couple of court dates. There will be a month in the summer when I will probably be hoofing it in the Garden City. People who have not heard what happened will ask me why I'm walking. I will hesitate before I tell them the truth.

I'll probably have to attend the state-run school they have set up for idiots like me. That costs $250. There will be a surcharge on my auto insurance amounting to a couple hundred bucks. I'll probably have to get a part-time job to mop up after this mess.

That's all right. Each added humiliation should firm up my resolve to avoid ever finding myself in such circumstances again. Hopefully, the words of the great Jamaican poet Max Romeo will hold true: "Humiliation is never in vain."

As to the larger picture, I will turn to the advice of a 72-year-old newspaperman who is one of my few remaining heroes. He pointed out the need for me to develop some other interests ... get involved in some other activities. "You can't just work and go to the bar. That's crazy," he said. As to the work ahead, he said, "It's easy. Moderate your drinking and get involved in something besides work."

Simple enough. And, as another old saying has it, "Wisdom is found in the simplest of things ... in the knick of time."

Oh, yeah. Another test, and another lesson to be learned: searching the car, the police found a windbreaker with a piece of pot in it. Someone who had been in my car earlier that evening apparently left without it. Add to the DWI a charge of "possession, Class D, controlled substance."

"Good God, almighty!" I thought when they showed it to me. "That too?"

Hopefully, the owner of the jacket will step forward and "do the right thing." If not, I can only hope that the jacket is of a size that makes it obviously not mine. That is a risk I do not want to run, but if the owner can not see his way clear to help me out of an already impossible jam, my options will be few.

"Great, Kev," my brother-in-law commented on my hopes that, once I try on the jacket, everyone will see it is not my size. "Then, any guy in downtown Boston who wants to move around large quantities of heroin ... all he has to do is put it in some clothing that is obviously not his size and nobody can touch him. Right?"

"Wrooong!"

Obviously, the class in "Lessons for Living" I signed myself up for that fateful Friday night had a larger curriculum than I first thought.

I could argue that I was parked out in front of my home when I was nabbed and miss the clear message that 25 years of drinking and driving is 25 years too much. Likewise, I could argue that only a rotten twist of cruel fate led to someone else's jacket, with contraband in the pocket, being found in my car. Then I would miss another obvious lesson: it is about time to grow up and stop hanging out with people who can get you into a lot of serious trouble with one minor mistake.

That one really burns. That one is still in someone else's hands. That one is very hard to come to terms with. I am hoping for the best.

The other one is easy: don't drink and drive. It's that simple. Are you going to take it from me, or do you have to learn about it the way I did?

Horse race in Wd 8

By Edward Cafasso

NEWTON — For the second time in three days, Robert Katz, Howard Passman, William Shaevel and Teresa Walsh gave Ward 8 voters the full political treatment, leaving their stands on the issues as clear as sunshine on a cloudless day.

With Passman and Shaevel knotted up in charges and countercharges, however, Walsh and Katz have been able to fill the void and are gaining important political ground.

Katz, who is pressing his advantage as the only one of the group with bonafide aldermanic experience, said prior to last week's debate that Shaevel is "likely to win" on June 4 because he is "spending a lot of money," but characterized his opponent's supporters as "more bent on getting this guy elected than they are about their own lives."

"My satisfaction comes from getting it done, not talking about how I did it," Katz added.

Indeed, if the best indicator of who the front-runner is in a political campaign is the number of times he is attacked, then Shaevel is leading this race as it enters the homestretch.

His campaign has been described by one observer as "a political machine," a description reinforced by the large number of influential community leaders backing his bid.

But the charges flung in Shaevel's direction are also having an impact on his campaign style, as evidenced by his decision to stop crediting himself as the sole mover behind all the projects that have had a positive influence on the ward.

So far, the most damaging mistake of Shaevel's bid has been to acknowledge Passman's presence. By responding with agitation to Passman's persistent attacks, often on issues which most voters would consider less than crucial, Shaevel is undermining his own claim to "effective style" and "bridge building," while lending credibility to Passman's criticisms.

Meanwhile, Walsh, whose candid remarks have distinguished her as the contender with the best sense of humor, appears to know the facts and figures of the city better than any of her opponents.

Last week, she rattled off the required lot size for single family homes, how much money it would take to add one dollar to the tax rate, the reason behind zoning problems in Four Corners, the difference between surplus and free cash and the approximate number of elderly housing units in Ward 8.

In addition, her door-to-door, "low budget" campaign proves her worthy of the hard-working, grassroots mantle she has quietly borne for many years.

For better or worse, however, the success of Walsh's campaign hinges on her ethnic backround and whether she can overcome her more visible ties with Newton Centre. It remains to be seen how well she will do in a neighborhood with the city's highest concentration of Jewish voters.

Passman's outspoken criticism of Shaevel provides ample evidence of his belief that the campaign has come down to a two-way race, an ambitious assumption that could spell trouble if his opponents are able to capitalize on it.

However, the dual thrust of Passman's campaign — preserving the ward's single family character at all costs and keeping taxes down — will appeal to voters who want a strong sense of parochialism from their elected representative.

Because these strengths and weaknesses are polarizing the four-way field, the weather and voter turnout on June 4 may go a long way toward creating a photo finish in what currently appears to be a horse race to succeed the late Robert L. Shuman.

Insure the safety of your children

By Michael J. Connolly

Of all the concerns facing our nation today, perhaps the most devastating is the problem of missing children. With up to two million children missing in America and as many as 4,500 missing here in Massachusetts, each of us has a responsibility to combat this frightening travesty. Thus far, we have failed.

The disappearance of two million children is nothing short of a catastrophe. In many cases, you have a better chance of recovering a lost dog or a stolen wallet than you have of ever seeing a missing child again.

The month of May has been proclaimed "National Child Safety Awareness Month," making it an appropriate time for us to reflect on the travesty of missing children. Each of us, personally, should do what we can to make the world safer for our children.

As the father of four children under the age of eleven, the thought of one of them vanishing without a trace terrifies me. I know how I feel when my son comes home late from baseball practice or when I lose sight of my daughter in a store. That panic and desperation that I experience for a relatively short time is what parents of missing children experience for a lifetime.

Every year, 5,000 children are found murdered. Nearly 2,500 of these children are buried unidentified, in "John Doe" graves, leaving their family members speculating about the safety of their children forever. In many cases, families spend their life savings searching.

New England K.ID.S. (Kids Identification Systems), the sole Massachusetts-based organization to deal with the problem of missing children, is working to combat this problem.

Last April, I signed the articles of organization giving birth to this non-profit corporation. I proudly continue to serve as its honorary chairman.

In this past year, New England K.ID.S. has become a nationally recognized organization. Numerous law enforcement organizations in the state, together with hundreds of volunteers, have worked with New England K.ID.S. to fingerprint over 30,000 children and to educate twice as many parents about the problem of child abductions and the precautions to take against such tragedies.

New england K.ID.S. works to make the public aware of the problem of missing children and to develop, with other community groups, safety and prevention programs for children and parents. The organization has become involved with specific cases and has been successful in returning several children to their parents.

the group also has developed self-help support groups, and has set up Safe Home projects in Massachusetts communities where children can go if they think they are in danger or if someone is harrassing them.

New England K.ID.S. is comprised of hundreds of volunteers statewide. But the group can't be successful if child safety isn't taught at home as well.

During National Child Safety Awareness Month, teach your children safety precautions. Make sure they know their full name, address and phone number, as well as how to use a telephone. Have some positive identification taken of your child. Be certain that your child knows never to go anywhere with strangers. Most importantly, never leave your child unattended.

You insure your home. You insure your car. Now do something to insure the safety of your child.

(Michael J. Connolly is Secretary of State.)

'Beware of Bill Shaevel'

Newton taxpayers should beware of Bill Shaevel, candidate for alderman from Ward 8. His past history shows that he is for higher taxes.

Shaevel told the audience at the debate on Tuesday, May 21, that he voted against Proposition 2½ in 1980 and that he contributed money to and voted to override Prop. 2½ in 1983. If elected — you know it — he will work to override Prop. 2½ and raise taxes for all of Newton.

Under the proposed new federal tax laws, local taxes will not be deductible. Fixed income families can't make ends meet now. Higher taxes will be a disaster for some homeowners in Ward 8, especially those in Oak Hill Park.

Don't let Shaevel do it! Vote against higher taxes on June 4.

Theodore Madfis

'Judge on accurate facts'

To the Editor:

During a political campaign, a candidate's position is often misread because of the enthusiasm of support for another candidate. However, in the marketplace of ideas, the voters must judge the accuracy and motives of a supporter' viewpoints; that is, look "from whence it comes."

The purpose of this letter is to respond to an inaccurate perception of my positions by Mr. Madfis, a publicly acknowledged supporter and active worker for one of my opponents.

On two of the issues that he has misread, my positions are clear. A) I have always favored using the Oak Hill School as a private school and keeping the playground areas as open space and playgrounds. B) I believe the city's tax needs must be satisfied within the limits of Proposition 2½.

Regarding the latter, first, my position is well known in Ward 8 because I have publicly stated, on numerous occasions, that I support staying within the limitations of Proposition 2½.

Second, under Proposition 2½, the Board of Aldermen cannot exceed the tax limit. By state law, that power can only be exercised by the voters at an election called for that purpose, as evidenced by the 1983 defeat of the library referendum by the voters.

Third, the Board of Aldermen cannot increase the city's budget. It is the mayor who sets the budget. The aldermen can only reduce the amounts requested by the mayor.

I ask the voters to judge my positions on accurate facts.

Bill Shaevel

Ly: 'an outstanding senior'

freedom she no longer had in Vietnam.

"It was terrible," she recalled. "We didn't have much money, and there were no jobs. There was no training, and even if I could go to school, I wouldn't have, because my parents are Chinese and they didn't want me to get a Vietnamese communist education. There was no hope, so I decided to make my escape by boat."

In December of 1980, the 18 year-old Ly and a brother packed what little they had and left by ship for Thailand.

"We had to pay a lot of money to get on the ship. It was awful. It took us 16 days to get to Thailand because the ship broke down."

Ly remembered conditions on the "small ship crammed with 148 people" as horrendous.

"The boat was very crowded. Some people had to stand up the whole time, some were lucky enough to sit on the floor. I thought I would die sooner or later."

"The first day out, we thought we might see somebody, but there was nothing in sight. We tried to make a fire to signal other ships, but there was nothing in sight and we were just drifting along while the men tried to fix a leak in the boat. We had no food or medicine, and the only water we had was rain water. People were getting sick and dying."

Finally, after 16 days, Thai fisherman spotted the ship and towed them to an island, where they waited for an American plane to fly by and rescue them.

After their rescue from the island, Ly and her brother began a journey across southeast asia that took the from one refugee camp to another, until 1983, when they made their way to Chicago.

"I felt very fortunate to be in America, because when I was back home, the Americans were very kind and generous to us. When the communists took over, before I escaped I didn't care if I lived or died, I just didn't want to stay in a communist country."

When Ly talked about the communist government that took over the south, the shy smile on her face turned into a bitter grimace.

"I hate the communists," she glared, "especially when I think of my brother who fought with the American army. He had to hide from the communists and tried to walk to Cambodia. I haven't heard from him in ten years - I miss him very much."

Because the new government in South Vietnam refused to let her study english as a child, things were very difficult for the shy teenager who came to this country "not knowing anybody or anything about the culture or language."

After working in a factory and taking English courses at night, Ly learned from a friend that there was a program at Newton North High School for foreign students to enter school no matter how old they were. After 11 months of living in Chicago, the two women moved to Massachusetts.

Once again, Ly found herself in a strange place with no family or friends to fall back on. She got an apartment, a job in a nursing home, and enrolled at Newton North. After her roommates moved out, Ly was taken in by the Cole family. Although things were difficult for her, it was not quite as bad as drifting off the coast of Vietnam with no food or water. After two years of hard work, Minh Ly will graduate from high school, an accomplishment she said she is proud of.

"Sometimes I feel proud of myself," she sighed, "but, sometimes I am so lonely, because while I concentrated on my studies, I don't have any real friends here and I think I would like to do the things other young people in this country do."

Grandmother is a grad

Since then, three wars, two generations and 155 credits later, Barron said that while art hasn't changed much, the budding artists have.

"Kids today are so much freer," she said. When pressed to explain what that meant, Barron squinted her eyes and said, "You know what I mean."

She was talking, of course, about "moral" attitudes of today's youth. While Barron was reluctant to comment on it, one of her classmates, Julie Blade, said that while it was great having Barron in class, she was always a little worried about how she would react at some of the student functions.

"Sometimes," Blade said holding a bunch of helium-filled balloons, "the way kids act today - the way they dress and behave - I wondered how Ros must have felt, but she's a great lady with an open mind, so I guess it really didn't bother her that much."

Blade also said that Barron was an "inspiration" to her.

"It's great to see her, because now I won't be afraid to go back and do something I really want to accomplish when I'm older."

Another MCA student, Kathy Latus, echoed Blade's opinion.

"I suppose you could say she gives me inspiration," Latus said. "She showed me that, if there's something I don't do in my life, I can always go back and do it if I really want to."

"Ros is really a hot ticket," she added with a smile.

Barron said that when she was at the MCA, the kids there reminded her of her three granddaughters, who came to see their grandma graduate.

"Take a look at those three beautiful kids," she beamed. "Missy is 15, Nichole is 12 and Samantha is 10, but they look so much older. When I looked around my classes, I saw a whole school of Missys, Nicholes and Sams."

"Even with the age difference," she added, "I had no problem getting along with my classmates, they were wonderful and I learned a lot from them."

Looking back, Barron, who made the decision to study in earnest after her retirement from Polaroid in 1980, said that what kept her going through all the years was her love of art.

"Art is not something I just picked up as a hobby," she said proudly, "art is and always has been my real love in life."

"I like to paint - especially women because they're so beautiful. The way they dress is a lifestyle."

With the sun beating down overhead and students - many dressed in bright colors ala Cindy Lauper - milling about the parking lot, Barron put on her cap and gown and readied herself for a gift from her classmates, a ride in a 1930 Model A Ford.

"I'm a little nervous," she said. "But everyone has been so wonderful to me that I feel very comfortable."

To help ease her nerves, husband David and sons Richard and Ken gathered round the blushing grad and told her how proud they were.

"This is marvelous," grey-haired David Barron said somewhat bewilderedly. "She's quite a woman and this never would have happened if she didn't have the initiative to go out and get the degree."

"I'm going back to get my masters," Barron asserted.

When?

"This fall."

Lead hazards worst at Bowen

NEWTON — Preliminary results from analyses by the Health Department of lead hazards in the city's schools indicate that the Bowen School needs the most immediate attention regarding chipping lead paint, according to Commissioner Bernice Joyal.

The city's Health Department expects to finalize the results of its complete lead hazard analysis in the city schools by the end of the month, Commissioner Bernice Joyal told the aldermanic Sub-Committee on Lead Hazards last week.

She said the Bowen School contains a lot of chipping paint in areas used by children under six years of age. At present the problem is being handled by custodians who have been instructed to vacuum any loose chips and wash the area where they came from, she said.

Building Commissioner James Cameron was asked if the problem would be taken care of over summer vacation, and he said he didn't know whether it would be possible.

Committee member Dr. Charles Gunnoe said, "That sounds unacceptable. It sounds like we have a lead problem at Bowen and we ought to deal with it as soon as school is out."

New Japanese 'Super Pill' Insures Rapid Weight-Loss

No Dieting — Eat All You Want, Pill Does All The Work

BEVERLY HILLS, CA — An exciting new "all natural" weight-loss "Super" Pill developed by the JMA (Japanese Medical Association) has just been approved for distribution in the United States. Reportedly, it can guarantee that you will lose more than a pound a day without dieting, from the very first day until you reach your ideal weight and figure. News of this "Super Pill" is literally sweeping the country. It's called Amitol and there has never been anything quite like it before.

"Flushes Calories Right Out Of Your Body"

What makes Amitol so thrilling and unique is its reported ability to flush calories right out of your body. Amitol is completely safe, it contains no drugs whatsoever. Its ingredients are derived solely from the Konjac root which grows primarily in Northern Japan.

Why the Konjac root? It has been used in Japan for over 1600 years to produce rapid and natural weight-loss!

Japanese studies verify that Konjac root actually prevents fat producing calories from being absorbed into your system. They say it does this by surrounding much of the fats, proteins and carbohydrates you have eaten with a protective viscous coating which is then gently flushed out of your system. And according to Japanese research this produces absolutely amazing results.

And who can disagree! Amitol (although brand new to this country) is already being called by many people, "the most exciting weight-loss breakthrough of the century." In fact, everywhere there are reports of easy and fast weight-loss from formerly overweight people (in all walks of life) who are now slim, trim, and attractive again.

Company Offers Extraordinary Guarantee

You now can purchase Amitol direct from the North American distributor, and it comes with an extraordinary guarantee.

If you place your order now and then follow the simple instructions for a period of 30 days, you must be completely satisfied with the dramatic visible results or just return the empty container and Dyna Labs will immediately send back your entire purchase price. This guarantee applies regardless of your age or current weight level. What could be better than that! It's just that simple. If you've tried to lose weight before and failed you no longer have an excuse. Amitol is available, it's easy and it works without dieting!

$19.95—30 day supply, or $35.95—60 day supply. Order immediately by sending a check or money order to DYNA LABS, 270 No. Canon Dr., Ste. 1255 (Dept. U-11) Beverly Hills, CA, 90210. (Enclose your return address). Credit card holders can order by simply dialing toll free: (1-800-367-2400) 24 hrs a day, 7 days a week. Either way your order will be promptly sent. Please don't wait. You really do deserve to be thin.

Regan will not run again in November

NEWTON CENTRE — James Regan, alderman-at-large from Ward 6, has announced that he will not run for re-election in November.

Regan, who defeated veteran alderman Joseph DePasquale in the 1983 race for the seat, claims that he is leaving the board to devote his energies to a new business he has started.

James Regan

"In my two years as alderman, I have worked hard and conscientiously to represent all the citizens of Newton," he wrote in a May 24 letter to President of the Board of Aldermen Carol Ann Shea. "I am establishing my own high tech recruiting business, which will consume the majority of my time for the next two years. In fairness to the citizens of Newton, my colleagues on the board and my family, I have made this my top priority.

"Thank you for giving me the opportunity to serve you," Regan concluded.

Newton Centre resident Tom Paulini, prime mover of the moratorium proposal, and Highlands resident John Amicangioli have already announced they will run for the seat Regan is vacating.

DePasquale, the ward alderman from Nonantum for years, commented Tuesday that, given Regan's announcement, he is contemplating another plunge into public life. "I've had a few calls in the last few days," he said. "I'm taking a long hard look." DePasquale said he would make a decision "within the next month."

He's bringing Boston its own brew long-neck, and the label features a picture of Samuel Adams over the caption, "Patriot — Brewer."

The beer is named after the famous founding father, who also was a brewer, though Koch said he probably brewed ale instead of beer.

Koch was able to raise $400,000 in investments from friends, relatives and former clients to start his business, which consists of himself, Rhonda Kallman, his account manager and a former secretary with Boston Consulting Group, and two truck drivers.

He said he sat down with his father, who was a brewer for several small breweries in Cincinnati, where Koch grew up. They looked through about 25 recipes and settled on one used by his great-great grandfather, Louis Koch, made in St. Louis in the 1870s, not far from the original Anheuser-Busch brewery.

Koch theorizes that Budweiser beer may have at one time tasted like his beer, since his great-great-great grandfather, Jerome Koch, brought his beer recipes over to this country from the Bavarian region near the town of Budweis.

Finding a place to brew his beer was a problem. He found nothing appropriate for his needs in New England, so for the time being, he is renting a portion of the Pittsburgh Brewing Co., which produces Iron City Beer.

He currently rents the original section of the old Haffenreffer Brewery in Jamaica Plain as a warehouse. But he hopes to eventually refurbish it and brew his beer there. The Haffenreffer Brewery closed its doors in 1965, leaving Boston with no active breweries.

Koch's duties with his new company are varied. Some of his time is spent opening new accounts, which he said is a bit strange for him "since I never sold anything in my life until six weeks ago."

He also holds beer tastings for staff members of restaurants serving his beer, telling them how it is made and showing them what bad beer tastes like. He says some of the more popular imported beers often taste "skunky," but people don't recognize it because they don't know what a fresh, high-quality beer tastes like.

Koch also travels to Pittsburgh every five weeks to oversee the brewing of a new 250-barrel batch of beer. He said he follows the process step-by-step to make sure his recipe is precisely followed.

Koch stresses that his operation is very small and drives that point home by saying, "I've sold as much beer in six weeks as Budweiser sells in four seconds."

On the other hand, he says, "I've got no competition. There is nobody doing what I'm doing. How often does the actual brewer of a beer come in to a store or restaurant to open an account and talk about beer? "People have helped us because we're from Boston, we're personal and we're a small business, which many of them can relate to. I can't begin to express my appreciation."

Koch does not advertise his beer, relying on word of mouth to increase sales. He compares his operation to Steve's Ice Cream.

"A lot of people weren't ice cream eaters until Steve's Ice Cream came along."

Asked if he thought the high price of his beer might limit his sales, he said the typical Samuel Adams Boston Lager drinker could be anyone from "gourmets to yuppies to construction workers who like good beer."

Koch said he doesn't drink wine, "but I understand a good bottle of wine costs about $30. Well, for the price of a mediocre bottle of wine, you can go out and buy a six-pack of the best beer in America."

He lives in a Newton Centre house formerly owned by gourmet chef Madeleine Kamman and says with a chuckle, "Her wine cellar is now full of my beer."

A Memorial Day celebration fit for a vet

Sunny day for a parade

By David Weber
Staff Writer

NEWTON — The city celebrated what many consider to be the unofficial opening of summer Monday with its Memorial Day parade, honoring the men and women who died defending this country.

The weather was perfect for a parade, warm and sunny, with a fairly steady breeze to refresh some of the weary marchers. Uniformed honor guards, high school bands, baton twirlers, ice cream and balloon vendors provided all the trappings of a festive occasion.

The parade began around 1 p.m. in the Purity Supreme parking lot on Crafts Street and proceeded up Washington Street to Walnut Street, then straight down to the Newton War Memorial at City Hall.

Two city policemen on motorcycles led the procession, followed by 20 more motorcycles ridden by the Blue Knights Law Enforcement Honor Guard.

Mayor Theodore D. Mann and U.S. Rep. Barney Frank (D-Newton) walked behind them, waving to onlookers of all ages. They turned the corner onto Commonwealth Avenue and walked up to the War Memorial to take their places at the reviewing stand. Twelve of the city's aldermen were also present on or near the reviewing stand.

Members of Nonantum American Legion Post 440 and Waltham American Legion Post 156 filed past, followed by a group Italian-American War Veterans and the W.J. Farrell DAV Post Chapter 23.

Two Vietnam veterans marched past the stand, one carrying the black and white flag of those soldiers classified as Prisoners of War of Missing in Action (POW/MIA). They eschewed the dress uniforms worn by veterans of other wars, in favor of blue jeans and camouflage fatigues, which have come to recognized as the uniform of the Vietnam veteran.

An identical POW/MIA flag flew on one of the tall flagpoles flanking the entrance to the War Memorial.

As the bands and honor guards gathered around the circle in front of the War Memorial, the five honored guests of this year's parade lined up in front of the steps to be recognized by Carleton Merrill, the city's Veterans' Agent and master of ceremonies for the parade.

They were Ellen Richard, mother of Army PFC W. Wallace Richard, the first son of Newton to fall in the Vietnam war; Hazel Brock of Newtonville, past state president of the Widows of World War I; and Gloria Cohen, an Air Force nurse in Korea, whose plane went down in 1953 while she was helping to airlift wounded soldiers, leaving her wheelchair-bound.

Army Lt. Leslie M. Feldstein and Sgt. Richard Mills, both veterans of Vietnam were also among the honored guests.

This year marked the 10th anniversary of the ending of the Vietnam war and the 40th anniversary of the end of World War II, and Mills said he felt proud to be part of yesterday's activities.

Commenting on Merrill's special recognition of the POW/MIA flag in his opening remarks, Mills would later say, "This is not only for Vietnam veterans, but for veterans in general," he said. "We Vietnam veterans have been tending to forget that this day is for all veterans, so I think it's time we opened up."

The band music stopped and the chatter of the crowd ceased as Mayor Theodore D. Mann escorted Mrs. Brock and Mrs. Richard to the center of the grass circle in front of the War Memorial to present the official city wreath honoring Newton's fallen veterans. Only the snapping of the flags in the stiff breeze could be heard as the three slowly walked back to their places in front of the War Memorial steps.

Mann told the crowd, "If we have learned our lessons, we as a nation will play an effective role in reducing world tensions. If we continue to learn, we can truly turn our swords into plowshares, so that calamities such as the Ethiopian famine can be prevented.

"And perhaps, we can gather on this day 10 years from now, or even 40 years from now, without having to add one name to the list of those whom we honor for having sacrificed life."

Stone honors Vietnam vets

By Howard Altman
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Overdue. That was the word many of those attending Sunday's memorial ceremony used to describe the dedication of a stone honoring Newton men who died in Vietnam.

Finally, ten years after the last helicopter took off from the roof of the American Embassy in Saigon, surviving veterans of that war unveiled a monument to the 23 Newton men who didn't make it back from the jungles of Vietnam.

The monument — a simple granite marker on city-donated land along Washington Street and across from the Jackson Homestead in Nonantum - marks the culmination of efforts by the Newton Vietnam Veterans Memorial Committee to remember their fallen brothers.

"It's about time," committee chairman Charles "Buddy" Cerone said stoically as he stood in front of the as-of-yet unveiled monument.

"My brother-in-law John Magni and I started planning for this about a year ago," the camouflage-clad Cerone said, "after four of us took a trip to the Wall in Washington D.C. We saw that and wanted to do something for the kids that died over there when we came back."

Cerone said that after the decision to set up a memorial was made, raising funds for a stone was the next step.

"We put jars in stores, clubs and other places and asked for donations. We asked veterans groups, the police and fire departments, the Knights of Columbus and the Kiwanis Club for help. We raised about $3,000. The stone cost $2,300 and the rest went to today's dedication ceremony."

Saying that the memorial is an example of vets "taking care of our own," Cerone explained that while the city donated the land, the veterans did all the legwork for the memorial.

"It's been a long time in coming," Cerone said, "and it took the vets to do it."

Among veterans attending the ceremony, many expressed feelings of bitterness at having to wait ten years for a memorial to those who died.

"It's very long overdue," Vietnam veteran Richard Learned said of the memorial. "There's a lingering bitterness that it's taken so long to recognize the fact that these men died for their country, just like veterans of World War I, World War II and Korea."

Learned, who saw action in Chu Lai with the First Cavalry Division between 1969 and 1970, said that to him the memorial is especially important because of how he was treated when he first came home.

"When we got back to the states," Learned recalled, "people were calling us 'baby killers' and all that bull. That's why a lot of the guys took part in this thing — we hope that the memorial will make the American public see our side of this."

One group who did see that side of the war were the families of the men who died fighting it.

John Rice of Newtonville, whose son James died picking up a wounded friend 11 days before he was scheduled to come home, said that while "it was a bit late, the memorial will hopefully make it easier for the relatives of those who died and for those who survived to cope with what happened."

Tricia Donlon and Dot Collura, sisters of John M. Sullivan — who died in Vietnam on January 14, 1967 — both said that the memorial to "those who gave their lives for their country," was "long overdue."

"It's a shame that it's taken so long to remember the kids who died for their country," Donlon said.

Collura credited the veterans who worked to get the memorial in place.

"The vets did a tremendous job," Collura said after the ceremony. "They did this for themselves because they desired a quality memorial. They went to the people for donations. It was like the Wall (the Washington D.C. memorial to the Vietnam veterans) — the vets put it together, not the government."

In addition to the vets and the families of those to whom the memorial was dedicated, many local politicians took part in the ceremony, including Newton Mayor Theodore D. Mann, State Representative A. Joseph DeNucci and Congressman Barney Frank.

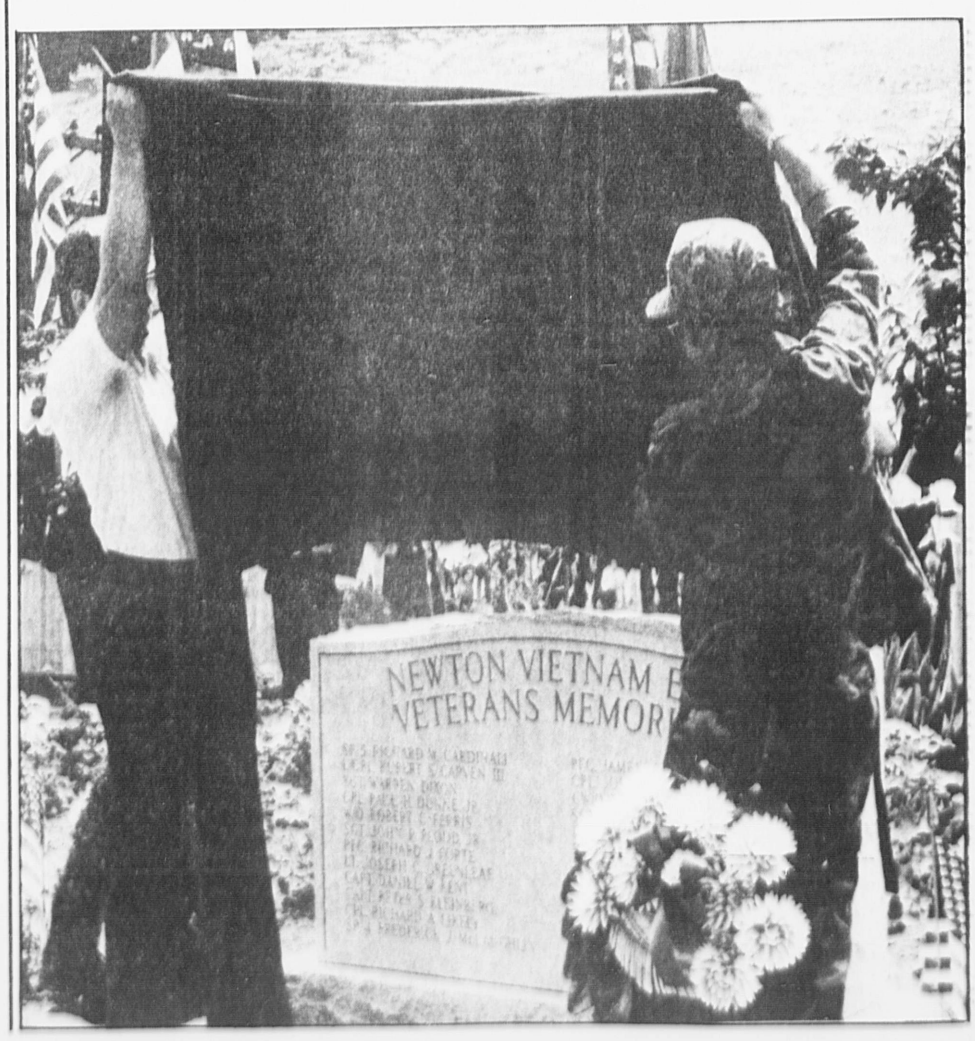

Frank, who helped read the roll call of the names on the stone, repeated the day's theme — that the memorial was long overdue.

"Not enough is being done for the veterans," the tanned and trim congressman said. "We still have a long way to go."

Mann praised the "outstanding effort and cooperation between the community and families of the veterans" and Parks and Recreation commissioner Russell Halloran for their part in putting together the memorial, including the trees and benches which the city provided.

The following is a list of the 23 Newton men who gave their lives in Vietnam and were remembered by Sunday's ceremony.

SP/5 Richard W. Cardinali - U.S. Army; L/CPL Rupert S. Carven III - U.S. Marine Corps; SGT. Warren Dixon - U.S. Air Force; CPL Paul H. Dunne Jr. - U.S. Army; W/O Robert C. Ferris - U.S. Army; SGT John P. Flood Jr.- U.S. Army; PFC Richard J. Forte - U.S. Army; LT Joseph G. Greenleaf - U.S. Navy; CAPT Daniel W. Kent - U.S. Marine Corps; CAPT Peter S. Kleinberg - U.S. Army; CPL Richard A. Likely - U.S. Army; SP/4 Frederick J. McLaughlin - U.S. Army; PFC James H. McMahon - U.S. Marine Corps; CPL John B. Murray - U.S. Marine Corps; CW/O Walter J. O'Neil - U.S. Army; SGT Enrico H. Pagnano Jr. - U.S. Marine Corps; PFC James J. Rice - U.S. Marine Corps; PFC W. Wallace Richard - U.S. Army; L/CPL Robert T. Steinsieck Jr. - U.S. Marine Corps; PVT Arthur Stroyman - U.S. Army; SGT Francis X. Turbert - U.S. Air Force; MAJ Ralph C. Wight Jr. - U.S. Army and COL Blair C. Wrye - U.S. Air Force.

Memorial Day moments . . .

Counterclockwise from top left, Justin Turner, 2, waves his flag at the parade as it marches by toward Newton's City Hall. Spectators view another march, the Nonantum Memorial Day parade, from a lofty location on Watertown Street. Back at the city parade, best friends Emily Clancy, Ariam McCrary, and Or Chapman, are wowed by a policeman on horseback. And three more friends enjoy the Nonantum parade from their pick-up truck.

At right, a war memorial, listing the names of 23 veterans, is unveiled on Washington Street across from the Jackson Homestead. And, Yana Lim, Newton junior girl scout, stands at attention as the veterans in the city parade pass by.

Police, courts, fire briefs

Indicted on rape charges

DEDHAM — A West Newton man has been indicted on charges that he allegedly raped a Quincy boy and indecently assaulted the boy and his sister.

Russell M. Lahti of West Newton was indicted by a Norfolk County Grand Jury last week on five counts of forcible rape of a child and three counts of assault and battery on a child under 14.

According to the indictments, Lahti allegedly raped the boy four times between August 1982 and November 1984 and a fifth time on March 11 of this year.

Two of the alleged indecent assaults took place between 1982 and 1984 and the third on March 11.

All of the alleged incidents took place in Quincy, according to the indictments.

Lahti will be arraigned on the charges in Norfolk Superior Court.

Woman sentenced for drugs

BOSTON — A 25-year-old Chestnut Hill woman who pleaded guilty to conspiracy to distribute cocaine received a $2,500 fine and two-year suspended sentence last week in Federal District Court in Boston, a U.S. Attorney spokesman said.

Leslie K. Grover was also ordered to attend a drug and alcohol rehabilitation program and placed on three years of probation, the spokesman said.

Grover was one of 16 Boston area residents accused of bringing 880 pounds of cocaine into the country annually, an operation worth $200 million a year, according to U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration (DEA) officials.

DEA agents combined with state and local police conducted a 24-month investigation that led to the arrests in December.

Newton police assisted in arresting Grover from her luxurious Chestnut Hill Towers apartment on Hammond Pond Parkway, police said.

Those arrested were residents of Boston, Brighton, Brookline, Norwood, Somerville, Cambridge and Malden.

House ransacked, lines cut

WEST NEWTON — A Valentine Park home was ransacked Friday night or Saturday morning and the telephone lines cut, but nothing is known to be stolen from the home, police said yesterday.

According to police, entrance was gained into the home through a window in the master bedroom between 7:15 p.m. on Friday and 9:45 Saturday morning. Every room of the house was ransacked, police said.

Breaking and entering arrest

NEWTON CENTRE — Police arrested a 21-year-old Newtonville man and an 18-year-old Waltham resident early Friday morning after allegedly catching the pair inside Capucino's Restaurant, 1114 Beacon St.

The two men were charged with breaking and entering in the night time, according to police.

An alarm alerted police at 2:49 a.m., police said. Police reportedly found a basement window at the rear of the building broken and the two men inside.

Fire causes $50,000 damage

NEWTON CENTRE — A fire Friday morning caused by a carelessly discarded cigarette caused an estimated $50,000 damage at a Pleasant Street home, firefighters said.

All of the occupants of the 112 Pleasant St. home, who were in the house at the time, escaped unharmed, according to the fire department report.

Firefighters said the fire started on a living room couch in the two-and-a-half story wood-frame home, owned by Duncan Vanderklish.

Both the living room and the stairway sustained fire damage and the entire first and second floors suffered heat and smoke damage, firefighters said.

Assistant Chief Karl Meinhart supervised the one ladder company and three fire engines at the scene. Firefighters reported spending an hour, 10 minutes fighting the blaze.

Porch fire investigation set

NEWTONVILLE — Fire investigators are expected this week to be looking into the cause of a porch fire at a Harvard Street home Sunday, said firefighters.

Firefighters have termed the origin of the early morning blaze at 101 Harvard St. as "suspicious," according to the fire department report.

Assistant Chief Bernard Goulding supervised three fire engines and one ladder company that spent 20 minutes extinguishing the fire, which started when a burning wood pile spread to the porch, firefighters said.

Injury incurred in line of duty

CHESTNUT HILL — A Newton firefighter suffered a minor injury Sunday battling a brush fire off Hammond Street that spread to a carriage house, firefighters said.

Treated for a cut lip at Newton-Wellesley Hospital and released was Firefighter John Colella, according to the fire department report.

The brush fire was apparently caused by a carelessly discarded cigarette, firefighters said.

A ladder company and four fire engines spent an hour battling the small brush fire that spread to the wall of the carriage house, which was separate from the 501 Hammond St. home, according to the fire department.

Jewelry, electronics stolen

NEWTON — A total of $19,000 worth of jewelry and electronic equipment were reported stolen last week from a Peabody Street apartment, police said.

Among the items stolen were a 25-inch color television set, two video casette recorders, a portable organ and keyboard recorder and a 35mm camera, according to police.

Also reported stolen were two gold bracelets, two mens diamond rings, two women's diamond rings, two gold rings and a gold pendant with diamonds, police said.

Police said the apartment was broken into after the lock to the front door was pried off.

June 8 car wash set

NEWTON — The Eliot Church Junior High Youth Group has scheduled a car wash for Saturday, June 8 from 9 to 11 a.m. at the church parking lot in Newton Corner.

Small cars will be charged $3; large cars and station wagons, $4; and vans, $5. Minute waxing will be offered for an additional sum.

Money raised by the wash will benefit the Ethiopian Famine Relief.

Chief Quinn advises:

Party time requires thought

NEWTON — It is the time of year for graduation parties and proms, and Chief William F. Quinn is reminding citizens that end-of-school-year festivities can mean tragedy when teenagers drive home drunk. With this concern in mind, Chief Quinn issues an advisory for those who are either hosting a party or attending one:

Pre-plan all facets of a party. Parents should go over the invitation list and know who and how many are invited. Some teens may feel that this reflects distrust. However, open parties, at best, are difficult to monitor. There is always the danger that it will grow too large too quickly, resulting in the the host losing control of the party.

Call the host in advance. Parents whose children have been invited to a private house party should call the host in advance to inquire about the nature of the party and the ground rules being set. Receiving an invitation does not mandate an acceptance.

Plan for supervision. Parents should either plan to supervise a party held in their home or have another responsible adult present and visible. Although not always willing to admit it most teens do not want to accept full responsibility for their party and would rather rely on an adult for organization and guidance. The chief points out that Newton party givers may engage a police officer for a nominal fee, whose presence alone can help maintain order.

Be aware of legal age limits. Any party should be well monitored to prevent alcohol consumption by persons who are not of legal age, which in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts will be 20 until June 1, 1985, and 21 thereafter. Party givers should be aware that they can be held liable if a mishap should occur to any person (adult or minor) after he has left the host's home in an intoxicated state. Incidents have also been cited where teenage guests have brought alcohol to a party without the knowledge of the host. Parents should take precautions to insure that alcohol will not be present at high school parties.

Chief Quinn says the same guidelines should be utilized for end-of-school-year functions held away from home, such as junior and senior proms. It is advised that parents know the location of the function, who their child will be with, and what the transportation arrangements are.

As in past years the Newton Community Center, 492 Washington St., West Newton, 969-5906, will be offering transportation, free of charge, to any high school student who does not have a safe ride home from a prom. This year's public high school proms will be held on May 29 at the Hyatt Regency, Cambridge - Newton South High School and on June 3 at the Park Plaza, Boston - Newton North High School. The Newton police, the MDC and the State Police, as well as other Municipal Departments will be patrolling all major highways, particularly after the proms have ended.

Stephen R. Drew, son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Drew, 19 Cloelia Terrace, Newton, was awarded the Mitchell N. Pappas Memorial Prize at Honors Day Ceremonies on May 10 at Trinity College in Hartford, Conn.

The Mitchell N. Pappas Memorial Prize is awarded to the senior student who shows special promise in the area of studio art.

Drew, a senior at Trinity majoring in studio art and history, was awarded the Esther and Lloyd Cooper Prize in Fine Arts in his junior year and the Fern D. Nye Award for Graphic Arts in his sophomore year. He is President's Fellow in Studio Arts signifying his outstanding achievement in his major. Drew is a member of AIESEC, an international business club, and the track team.

He is a 1981 graduate of Newton North High School.

The Society of Distinguished American High School Students announced that Angela Bove of 42 Dalby Street, Newton; Thomas Goodale of 45 Albert Road, Auburndale, both seniors; and Michael Dorr of 282 Kenrick St., Newton, a junior from Newton Catholic High School have been selected as members in its honor society for 1985.

The students' sponsor, Sister Maureen Thompson, was presented with The Society's National Appreciation Award for "assiduous devotion to the development and encouragement of student leaders."

Membership in this national honorary is designed to be not only an honor but also an incentive for those exhibiting top performance while in high school. To be accepted, students must have excelled in academics, extracurricular, or civic activities.

Eileen Carme, a junior at Mount Ida College, Newton Centre, has recently completed her internship in the marketing department at Boston Systems Office. She will be graduating from Mount Ida this spring with an Associate Degree in Communications and will be continuing her education at Emerson College in the fall.

Scott Buchanan, 25 Cabot St., Newton, received a B.A. Management and Neil Sherring, 23 Peach Tree Lane, Newton Centre, received a B.A. Physics cum laude at Curry College's Annual Commencement Exercises on May 19.

Tips on moving

Do not open the beer until the truck is unloaded

By Ken Franckling
UPI Feature Writer

So you've bought that new house or are ready to trade your apartment for a condominium across town.

Do you leave the moving to professionals or do it yourself?

That depends on how adventuresome you are, how precious you consider your goods to be, and, in many cases, whether you have some energetic friends willing to trade a day's work for a few cases of beer.

In a long-distance move, don't lift a finger if your present or new employer is paying for your trip. Let the movers do the work. In many cases, the employer will pick the mover, saving you that headache.

If you are moving to another city on your own, you can move yourself — and save considerable dollars — if you only have a few roomfuls of furniture.

Be wary, however, if you have a bad back. Even in a cross-town move, it sometimes is best to bring in a moving firm to at least handle bulky appliances and things like convertible couches, and delicate possessions. They are insured against damage. You probably will not be.

Question: Going the do-it-yourself route, how do you pick a truck rental firm?

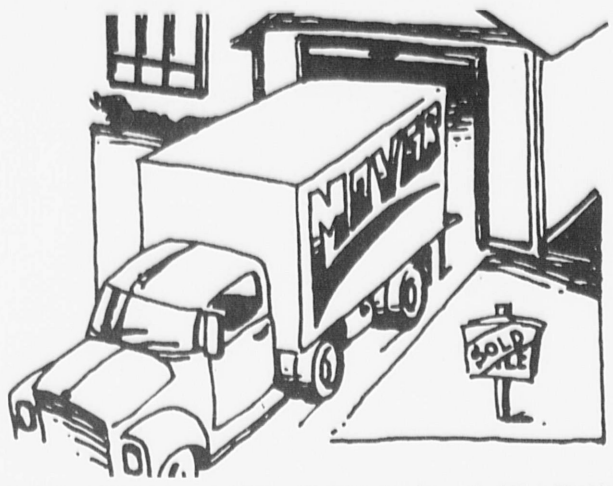

Answer: By comparison shopping. In other words, don't go to the nearest or most advertised truck rental firm and plunk down your bucks in haste.

The move-it-yourself truck and trailer rental business is cut-throat when it comes to competition. They all want your business and are willing to bargain for it — sometimes at substantial savings to you.

One major rental firm advertises that it will match any lower rate quote from a competitor. When shopping around, you find its basic quotes tend to be higher because it plans on coming down. It makes up the difference on customers who pay the first quote, no questions asked.

When it comes time to pick up the truck, local dealers may also throw in a few extra days or a few hundred extra miles on your trip limitation, if you ask.

Most dealers also have on hand an array of materials to assist with the move ranging from hand trucks to help lug appliances and furniture padding to boxes of all shapes and sizes.

If you decide to move yourself, with the help of your buddies. Here's one hint. Keep the beer on ice until after the heavy stuff and the most precious of possessions are off the truck and into the new abode.
UPI photo.

They also have, free of charge, booklets with tips on estimating the size of the truck you will need, packing and handling hints. Many also offer optional insurance that cover not only damage to the vehicle, but carry $100 deductible coverage on your possessions.

Also, when comparision shopping for a truck rental truck, to check the general age and condition of the fleet available. The older the truck and inferior the upkeep, the greater the chances of a frustrating and sometimes costly breakdown.

If you don't want to move yourself, and don't even care to get involved in shopping for a moving firm, there are businesses that make such arrangements for you. Check the Yellow Pages for "relocation" services.

One such firm, the Homerica division of Home Equity Inc., specializes in arrangements for corporate transfers of employees from one city to another.

Gary Gaylor, director of moving services at Home Equity's Danbury, Conn., office, provided some general tips on what to look for in a moving firm.

"More than anything, look for a carrier with the ability to pack, load and haul, unload and unpack. This way you have one supervisor for that moving process — the driver. Any labor he selects, he is responsible for," Gaylor said.

"That provides a move of a much better quality, simply because the people who start at the origin see what happens at the destination. It makes them more responsible about damage, and not being late on delivery. That's the prime objective," he said.

Gaylor suggested calling other carriers and asking about the reputation of the firm you are interested in.

"Know what kind of moves they do most of the time. If you are an individual, you wouldn't want someone who consistently does military moves," he said. "Military moves are low cost moves. Low cost suggests less service. It's more mechanical than personal and it is meant to be that way."

He also recommended sticking with a major van line. "Should a claim occur, should the load be late, there needs to be a resource within that organization that can solve the problem," Gaylord aid.

There are two ways movers can figure prices under deregulation. One is the traditional method of charging interstate tarrif rates based on actual weight of the load.

The other is a binding estimate, in which the agent is bound by the price he quotes you when checking your household, regardless of whether the actual weight is over or under the estimate.

"The problem with this is taking someone's opinion for what the weight of that shipment is," Gaylor said. "It has always been our procedure to use a weigh ticket on every shipment. That's recommended for an individual, too."

Lowering your taxes

By Neville D. Frankel

Most people I know put in a good weeks work to earn a living–out of which the IRS then takes a huge bite. Being taxed for the right to work is one of the prices we pay for the privilege of living in this great country. But another privilege we all have is the right to lower our taxes–and all it requires is the ability to do some smart planning.

In the last few months we've been inundated by ads from financial institutions encouraging us to open IRA accounts in order to save for retirement. Many people do take advantage of this savings vehicle provided by the government–but too many who should, don't. The idea of tying money up until the age of 59½ frightens some people away; others find themselves cash poor when contribution time comes; others simply never get around to it.

Here's an idea that will appeal to many, and will perhaps encourage some to take the plunge.

For someone in the 40% bracket, a $2,000 IRA contribution (which will lower taxable income by $2,000) is a saving of $800. Most people have to earn $2,000 in order to make an IRA contribution. But it makes a lot more sense to lower one's taxable income by making a contribution with dollars that don't increase one's after-tax income. In other words, if you have to take $2,000 out of your taxable income in order to achieve a savings of $800, you will be left with $1,200 less to spend.

Where would you get $2,000 if not from the income you earn? The answer is: from tax-free income.

The most obvious way to accomplish this is through the purchase of tax-free municipal bonds. An investments of $28,000, in municipal bonds with a yield of 7% will generate tax-free interest of $1,960 each year until the bonds mature. Each year, you will have $1,960 to contribute to your IRA. By taking this path, you will be using tax-free dollars to decrease your taxable income.

There are numerous ways to generate tax free income–municipal bonds are only one way. Another attractive method involves investing in a leasing partnership. Like any partnership, these should be thoroughly evaluated before any investment is made. But the return on as good partnership is currently far more attractive than the return on municipals. In fact, some are generating 13½ or 14% annually–in after-tax income.

This return is not guaranteed–but in the right partnership it can be relatively secure. And for people able to afford the slight risk, the higher return is worthwhile.

The way leasing partnerships work is relatively simple. Take, for example, a transportation leasing partnership. Most major corporations today don't purchase the trucks, airplanes, specialty type railcars and marine cargo containers they use to transport goods. Instead, they lease, which allows them the use of the equipment without a high initial cost. On the other side of the equation, equipment manufacturers prefer to sell their products outright. Leasing companies (and leasing partnerships) provide the funds that satisfy the needs of both users and producers.

Computer school adds accounting to program

WEST NEWTON — Grumman Data Systems Institute's campus in West Newton, has added an accounting program to its curriculum of career-training programs.

The Institute has also reduced the tuition for its computer progranmming course by 17 percent, a change that will remain in effect at least throughout the summer.

The 13-week accounting course prepares graduates for entry-level positions in the field. To reflect the growing use of computers in accounting, the course also includes instruction in personal computer applications.

The West Newton campus, at 429 Cherry St., has been a part of the Grumman Data Systems Institute since 1983. GDSI, which has been training students for careers in computer-related fields since 1970, also has two campuses on Long Island, N.Y. About 1,000 students are enrolled currently.

For more information about the programs at West Newton, call (617) 969-2700.

Students and seniors invited to African art lecture May 31

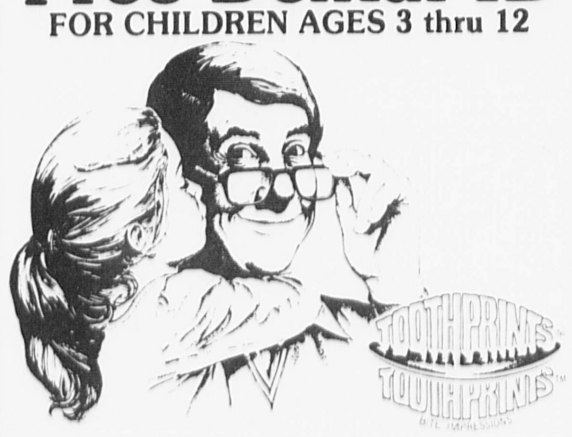

NEWTON — Lincoln Eliot School students and seniors from the Newton Corner Drop-In Center are invited to an African art lecture in the school cafeteria May 31 at 2 p.m. Sheila Nutt-Birigua, a Boston University graduate student who has lived in Africa, will discuss her collection of African masks and costumes. Ward 8 is prepped for June 4 election

"I was in the position to do something for the community and I did it," Katz said. Near the end of the debate, he took another shot at Shaevel by telling the audience, "If it's important to have your friend on the Board of Aldermen, then vote for your friend."

He also blamed the Board of Aldermen's long hours on the large number of lawyers on the body, all of whom have endorsed Shaevel's candidacy.

"You know how these people can be," Katz said.

In the meantime, Walsh took her case directly to the voters.

"I'm the type of person who likes to get things done ... What I can offer you is hard work. We have to do it and stop talking about it," she said.

During a question and answer session, each candidate was asked to rate the competency of the Board of Aldermen on a scale of one to 10, with 10 as an indication of the highest competency.

Shaevel called the question "too simplistic" and said each aldermen brings "their own skills" to the body. Walsh decided to "be generous" and gave the board an "8," while Katz ranked the group's competency at a "7" and Passman called it "a mediocre 5."

When asked about the future of elderly housing in Ward 8, Passman, a strong defender of single family housing, replied, "It will not fit in Ward 8 and cannot fit in Ward 8."

Katz, Walsh and Shaevel said such housing could be provided within the ward with careful and balanced planning.

On the issue of whether an entirely new main library should be built or an existing building should be renovated for the cause, Shaevel sided with the city's library experts by saying that the difference in the cost of the two alternatives was minimal, while his three opponents favored reusing an existing building.

Newton Taxpayers Association member Sam Robbins, who moderated an earlier encounter, attacked Shaevel for contributing money to the 1983 campaign to override Proposition 2½.

Shaevel deflected the charges by admitting that he was "wrong" about his initial opposition to the tax-cap law and by saying that he "trusted" city officials to be financially prudent if the override movement was successful.

Katz appealled to the largely Jewish audience by noting that, as an alderman, he had sponsored a unique aldermanic resolution recognizing Israel's air raid on an Iraqi nuclear reactor as "an act of defense."

Walsh won strong applause by using her summation to thank her husband for helping with her door-to-door campaign.

Noting the fact that last week's debate was the second such forum in three days, she added, "I think we must be the four most screened candidates in history."

Trivial pursuit

leagues on the full board, was asked to name the city's Ward 1 and Ward 2 aldermen.

He said the current Ward 1 alderman is Bruce B. Carmichael and identified the Ward 2 representative as Ronald A. Marini.

In fact, Marini is the Ward 1 alderman and Elaine M. Gentile is the legislator from Ward 2. Carmichael is an at-Large alderman from Ward 1.

Walsh, who was asked to name the legislators from Wards 3 and 4, correctly identified both as Richard J. Bullwinkle and Carol Ann Shea, respectively.

Passman was asked to name the ward aldermen from Wards 5 and 6. He correctly identified Michael A. Malec as the Ward 5 representative and then gave two names — Rodney Barker and James Regan — in response to the query about the Ward 6 alderman.

In fact, George E. Mansfield is the city's Ward 6 legislator. Barker and Regan are the at-large aldermen from Ward 6.

Katz correctly identified W. Arthur Reilly as the city's Ward 7 alderman, but balked on the identity of the economic development director.

"I have absolutely no idea," he replied.

City planner Alison Cohen was promoted to the position of economic development director early this year to fill the vacancy created when Donald Silverson left the Planning Department.

Liquor permit is suspended

NEWTON — The city's Licensing Board voted at a hearing last night to suspend for three months the liquor license of Bay State Discount Liquors on Centre Street, Newton Centre, for selling alcohol to minors.

The board voted to delay the effective date of the suspension until June 3 so that store proprietor, Joel Bornstein, could take advantage of the traditionally lucrative Memorial Day trade.

The suspension stemmed from violations occurring on Jan. 12 and Jan. 15. On the first night, Newton Police Sgt. Travis said he observed two young-looking boys each carrying a case of beer out of the store as he drove by. Travis said he stopped and asked the boys to produce some identification, which they promptly did. Their driver's licenses showed them both to be 18 years old.

Travis said he took the boys back in the store and asked Bornstein, who was behind the counter, what identification the two boys had presented. He said Bornstein started to say something, then simply said, "What, they're not 20?"

Bornstein testified that he thought he had asked them for identification.

Three nights later, Detective Sgt. William Whalen was in the store when four boys and two girls came in to buy liquor. He said one of the boys used tried to use a fake Illinois identification card to buy liquor for his group, and that one of the girls each used an expired Illinois driver's license to make her purchase.

Major changes set for School Comm.

Silbey agrees with Mann that being on the committee is very demanding.

"Depending on how serious you are," Silbey says, "it can take 10 to 20 hours per week of your time. I don't want to make that investment anymore."

Though Silbey will not be back with the committee next year, she has yet to close the door on future participation.

"I am commited to public education and I might look for another political job in the future — after my kids grow up," she said.

Mnookin, after two terms on the committee, says that "business and family obligations" are the main reasons for his decision not to run in November.

"I'm head of a company, Dietrich Hides, and that takes up a lot of time and travel. Also, I'd like to spend more time with my family — I'm finding the demands of doing all that and being on the committee very hard. Something has to give, and it will be the committee, even though I wouldn't say I'm burned out."

The Ward 7 representative says that he thinks placing a limit on the number of terms a committee member can serve is a good idea.

"Change is good," Mnookin says. "I don't think after eight years you can be any more effective at this job. Many of the issues we deal with do not have absolute answers — right or wrong — and I think it's a good idea to get new opinions and ideas."

Although half his board will be replaced come January, School Committee Chairman Leonard J. Gentile says the change "won't be insurmountable."

"It's hard to tell," Gentile said. "Just because four of the present members are leaving doesn't mean the School Committee won't be effective."

Gentile says that the key to making next year's committee effective will be "how the remaining members work with the new people."

"Any new committee member will take some time to get their feet wet and learn things about the committee," he said. "Things may move slower, but it's not something I think will cause a major problem, especially if the present members work with the new people."

Jones, the vice-chairman, goes one step further, saying that when she came on eight years ago, there were only two returning members. "I think we did a pretty good job, even with six new members."

Mayor Theodore D. Mann says "it is unsettling to think about the four members leaving" because "it has been historically difficult to get people to serve on the committee. Even though we now have a wage consideration, it will be difficult to get people to give the time the committee requires."

Earlier this year, the board of alderman passed a resolution giving School Committee members $3000 compensation — similar to that received by alderman — starting in 1986.

As mayor, Mann acts as the committee's ninth member with full voting rights.

At Mutual Bank, it doesn't take a lot of bucks to have a financial plan prepared.

In fact, it only takes 50. For just $50, you'll receive a personal financial plan—a plan that can help you to realize both your short-term and long-range financial goals.

We're able to offer this service—the Money Action Plan—through our affiliation with First Nationwide Network. Here's how it works:

You complete a confidential questionnaire about your current financial situation, family composition and financial objectives. That information is analyzed by computer, and the results are evaluated by our financial counselors.

You then sit down with a counselor to review objectives and determine how to attain your financial goals. You will receive a printed "Action Plan" that outlines specific recommendations for attaining those goals. Our counselor will recommend appropriate investments, insurance and other financial products, and work with you to implement them.

For just $50, you can't go wrong.

For more information, visit any of our 22 branches. Or phone 482-7530.

Births for area families

Edward and Joan (Glynn) Nelson of Newton announce the birth of their son, Ronald Edward II. He was born at Newton-Wellesley Hospital on March 1, 1985, weighing in at 7 lbs. 1 oz.

Maternal grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Glynn of Waltham. Paternal grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Edward Nelson of Framingham and Mr. and Mrs. William D. Carmichael of Wellesley. Paternal great grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Charles Keaney of Billerica.

Shelley Fine is married to Gary Robert Goldman

Leonard and Pauline Fine of Newton announce the marriage of their daughter, Shelley Beth, to Gary Robert Goldman, son of Dr. William and Shirley Goldman of Leominster.

The wedding and reception were held April 27 at Temple Israel in Boston.

The maid of honor was Phyllis Guiliano, friend of the bride, and matron of honor was Leslie Fine, the bride's sister-in-law.

Best man was James Goldman, brother of the groom, and ushers were David Fine and Eliot Goldman. Linda Goldman was the bridesmaid.

The bride attended Boston University and is currently employed as director of training at Meldisco in New Jersey.

The groom went to college at the University of Massachusetts, Amherst, and is currently a financial analyst at Meldisco.

The couple will reside in Fort Lee, N.J. following a honeymoon in California.

Audrey Lezberg plans to marry Stephen Lyke of N.Y. in August

Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Lezberg of Newton Centre announce the engagement of their daughter, Audrey, to Stephen Lyke, son of Mr. and Mrs. S. Ellis Lyke of Buffalo, N.Y.

The future bride and bridegroom live in Richland, Wash., where they are employed by the Battelle Memorial Institute.

A wedding date has been set for August in Newton.

Robyn Lee Yaffe plans to wed Scott Evan Lebowitz in the fall

Mr. and Mrs. Cyrus A. Yaffe of Newton, announce the engagement of their daughter, Robyn Lee to Scott Evan Lebowitz, son of Mr. and Mrs. S. Jason Lebowitz of Andover.

Yaffe received her bachelor of science degree in broadcasting and film from Boston University. She is currently working towards her master's in public relations at Boston University Graduate School of Public Communications.

Lebowitz received his bachelor of arts degree in education from Lake Forest College, Chicago. He is vice president of S. Jason Lebowitz, Real Estate Developing and Contracting.

A November wedding is planned.

Garden clubs view conservation areas

The Chestnut Hill Garden Club, a member of both the Garden Club of America and the Garden Club Federation of Massachusetts, held its fourth Spring Garden Tour on Sunday, May 19. Enthusiastic members of many local garden clubs had an opportunity to view five private gardens in Brookline along with the Houghton Gardens in the Webster Conservation Area of Newton. Co-chairmen of this year's event were Mrs. Gerald W. Blakeley III and Mrs. Peter Wilde, both of Brookline.

This year, as in the past, proceeds went towards two of the club's community projects — the Houghton Gardens and the Chestnut Hill MBTA Station. The ten-acre woodland tract, once belonging to Mr. and Mrs. Clement Houghton, is now owned by the City of Newton and jointly maintained by both the Newton Conservation Commission and the Chestnut Hill Garden Club. Since 1974 the club has donated its time, expertise, and money for professional services to restore and preserve its woodland park.

The other civic project, the Chestnut Hill "T" Station has been a concern of the club for the past several years. Besides a semi-annual weeding, pruning, mulching and planting, a subway committee undertakes a weekly cleanup of litter from the parking lot and surrounding area.

Concetta Sinopoli was married to Salvatore Costa November 11

Mr. and Mrs. Antonio Sinopoli of West Newton announce the marriage of their daughter, Concetta, to Salvatore Costa, son of Mr. and Mrs. Calogero Costa of Waltham. The couple were married Nov. 11, 1984 at St. Bernard's Church by the Rev. Anthony Moore. A reception followed at the Hillcrest.

The bride was attended by her sister, Franca G. Sinopoli of West Newton; her sister-in-law, Teresa Costa of Waltham; her niece, Lidia Fragale of Waltham; and four friends, Rina Bonadio of Waltham, Rosa Gigliotti of West Newton, Lisa Schraffa of West Newton, and Debbie Kelley of Holliston.

The bridegroom was attended by his brother, Joseph Costa of Waltham; his brother-in-law, Francesco M. Sinopoli of West Newton; two cousins, Joseph and Salvatore DiStefano of Waltham; two friends, Dino Iafrate of the North End, Boston, and Carmine Martignetti; and a nephew, Eduardo Fragale of Waltham.

The bride graduated from Newton North High School and is employed by Waltham Savings Bank.

The bridegroom attended Waltham High School and is currently employed by Lytron, Inc.

Following a wedding trip to Aruba, the couple will live in Waltham.

Lions capture tourney berth

ACTON — When Jon Glick's curve ball is working, watch out. The Newton South senior again had "the stuff", breezing through a seven-inning, 6-1 contest over host Acton-Boxboro and clinching a play-off spot for the Lions with just one game remaining.

Glick, a righty, raised his personal record to 5-3 and dropped his earned run average to below one (0.95), allowing only two hits in the game and striking out seven.

A Bill Rosenfield triple led to Acton's lone run off Glick, an unearned score in the third inning with South up 2-0. Glick allowed the bases-empty three-bagger, than balked home Rosenfield for the run.

South put the game away in the sixth with three runs to take a commanding 5-1 lead. Steve Altman scored on an error, Steve Stoller grounded into a fielder's choice with the bases stacked to force in one run, and Chris Pappas beat out an infield single that scored two.

Newton South had scored two runs in the top of the third on a wild pitch and a Matt Spengler fielder's choice.

Coupled with Friday's beating of Weston, South upped its league record to 11-5 and 11-6 overall. The Lions will host Wayland in the season finale on Wednesday.

Friday against Weston, the Lions buried any memories of a 4-1 loss to the Wildcats earlier in the week and slid by with some late-inning surges, 6-4.

Weston jumped ahead, 3-1, after three and a half on a Paul Garcia two-run triple to right. An unearned run also crossed the plate when South catcher Judd Cohen threw a force-out attempt at third into left field, allowing Cronin to score.

The Lions responded in the bottom of the frame with three runs of their own to take the lead, 4-3, highlighted by a sucide squeeze pulled off by Mitch Doren. Matt Spengler singled home Steve Altman to lead-off the inning before scoring himself on an error.

Newton South and Boston Latin bashed each other around for seven innings on Monday at Cleveland Circle, and when the slugfest was over, the Wolfpack was left standing with an 18-13 Dual County League victory.

The Wolfpack showed absolutely no respect for South ace Kevin Houlihan, who lasted only eight hitters. By the time the first was over with, the home club had erased a 3-0 South lead with nine runs.

A hit batsman, two errors, and four consecutive bases-loaded walks contributed to Houlihan's demise. Leadoff hitter Nick Fabiano, who had four hits on the day, capped the uprising with a two-run double off reliever Tom McGary.

Steve Stoller had a pair of hits in Friday's win

The Lions weren't through yet, however. By the fifth inning, they had climbed back to within two runs and came up with a pair in that frame to make it 13-13.

Darvell Huffman walked and stole second before Mark Maiocca singled him to third. Steve Altman grounded into a double play with one run scoring.

Matt Spengler started the ball rolling again with a single, taking second on an error. Pillan Thirumalaisamy cashed him in with one of his That made it 13-13, but Latin took the lead for good with three in the bottom half of the frame. Fabiano singled and went to third on an error (South made seven). After a walk, Chris Pappas replaced McGary, but Shawn Kennedy greeted him with a two-run single. Kennedy eventually scored on a sacrifice fly.

The big Lion inning was the third, when they came up with seven runs on five hits and an error. A walk and hit batsman, sandwiched around a Thirumalaisamy single, loaded the bases. After an out, Steve Stoller rapped a single to open the floodgates. Mitch Doren reached on an error for another marker, and Maiocca followed with a clutch single for a pair of runs. Doubles by Altman and Spengler (driving in two) capped the scoring.

Yerardi's 5 goals pace North win

FRAMINGHAM — Fran Yerardi tallied five goals and two assists, and Newton North held off a late Framingham South rally for a 13-12 lacrosse victory on Friday.

The Tigers were up 13-9 in the fourth period before the Flyers began chipping away at the lead. But by the time they scored their 12th goal, only nine seconds were left and Newton had the victory in hand.

It was a big win for the Tigers, avenging last spring's loss which knocked them out of the tournament. North doesn't have much time to savor it, however, as it faces an even bigger challenge this afternoon.

Weymouth North, 11-1 overall and 4-0 in Division I South, comes to Dickinson Stadium for a 3:30 contest. The Tigers are 11-5 and 4-0, so this one is for the number one ranking in Eastern Mass. and the league title.

Though pleased with Friday's win, North coach Rick Clark wasn't too happy with his team's inability to put the ball in the net. The Tigers had 50 shots in the game, including 17 in the first quarter, which wound up in a 3-3 tie.

"We could have put the game away," said Clark of the initial stanza.

To their credit, the Flyers seemed to take advantage of just about every Tiger mistake. That carried them to a 6-5 lead at the half, which resulted in some strong words for the Tigers from their coach during the intermission.

That must have had some effect, because in the third, the Tigers "came out smoking," according to their coach.

Though Framingham scored first, the Tigers responded with four unanswered goals to take charge.

John Flynn picked up the first, but it was the tying goal which perhaps turned the game around. Kevin McGrath (three assists) made a great 50-yard pass to Yerardi on the fast break, resulting in the goal.

That sparked the Tigers, and McGrath also assisted on the go-ahead score, with Flynn finishing it off. Another Yerardi fast-break goal made it 9-7, and after a Framingham score, John Boudreau answered, again on the break.

McGrath had one more killer assist up his sleeve. With 33 seconds left in the third quarter, he hit Boudreau for a goal that seemed to take the wind out of the Flyer sails.

Though not big in the scoring department, Pat Poon and Tom Dalicandro also had exceptional games. Poon dominated the faceoffs and did score once. Dalicandro did his sanitation department routine, cleaning up every ground ball he saw.

Goalie Matt Keegan also played well, with 22 saves.

Clark was delighted with his young defense, led by David St. Germain. Scott Lancelloti, Scott Hamblett and Doug Proia turned in good efforts as well.

Concord routed

"We're peaking when we have to."

Those were Newton North lacrosse coach Rick Clark's words after his team had pounded Concord-Carlisle, 15-5, on Tuesday at North. It was a sweet victory, as it guaranteed the Tigers a tournament berth with a 10-5 record.

The Patriots and Tigers annually are among the best, if not the best, lacrosse teams in Eastern Mass. They've had some epic battles in the past, but Tuesday's affair wasn't one of them. Nonetheless, it did ht

North charged out to a 5-0 lead in the first period, opened that up to 10-2 by halftime, and was never challenged. Goalie Matt Keegan only had to make eight saves in the game, as the Tigers controlled the contest from the opening draw.

Offensively, the Tigers benefitted from a balanced scoring attack as nine different people potted goals. Kevin McGrath came through with a clutch performance. He scored only one goal, but added three assists, and all four points came in the first half when it was still a game.

Co-captain Dan Nardone and John Boudreau were the top snipers on the day, each netting three goals and two assists.

John Flynn and Fran Yerardi each notched a pair of tallies, while Josh Carpenter, Paul Healey, Charlie Albanese and Chuck Leone each had a singleton.

Clark certainly didn't expect such a rocking-chair day going in: "I was leery (of the Pats)," he said. "They had some good sticks but they're not putting it together."

Newton's fast break was a big factor in putting the game away early. The Tigers scored six goals off the break.

"We were just rolling," Clark said.

The coach singled out Scott Hamblett for a nice job on defense, and praised Carpenter, who is "coming along." Pat Poon also came in for kind words from Clark for winning 11 faceoffs. "He's tough," noted the coach.

Lions clinch

Newton South also came up with a big victory, routing host Hingham, 12-6, to clinch the Division II South championship. The Lions upped their league record to 4-0, and are 9-3 overall, after their seventh consecutive victory.

Their only league game left is against Waltham a week from Friday.

Senior attack Peter Murphy led the way for the Lions on Tuesday with five goals. Murphy had plenty of help, with seven different players scoring.

Matt Ranen, the league's leading scorer, notched two and added a couple of assists.

The number two scorer in the circuit, Dave Kowal, fell a little bit further behind Ranen despite his goal and assist. Senior Garth Bloch also had one and one.

Some people who aren't so used to scoring also chipped in. Chris Murphy got his first goal of the year, while Adam Rudikoff picked up an assist for his first point.

Rounding out the goal-scorers were Whitney Dorf, Dave Abrams and Dean Soltanian.

Led by Murphy, the Lions wasted no time in putting away the home team. By halftime it was 9-3, with that margin going to 11-3 after three periods.

Junior goalie Alex Levine was a key to the South performance, as he made 17 saves and started a bunch of fast breaks.

Newton North netmen continue undefeated

NEWTON — It was tougher than usual, but the Newton North boys' tennis team rolled up its 11th victory without a defeat on Friday with a 4-1 decision over Brookline. It was only the second time this season the Tigers have not shut out their opponent.

Despite that perfect record, the Tigers wound up with a rather difficult draw in the Eastern Mass. Division 1 Tournament, which begins on Wednesday. North will be hosting perennial power Lexington (3:30 p.m.), which finished second in the Middlesex League with an 11-2 mark.

Friday, the Tigers faced their stiffest Suburban League foe. The Indians have an outstanding number one player in Marc Schwartz, and he came up with the visitors' lone point, taking a 6-2, 6-4 decision over Tom Gruber.

The rest of the matches went to Newton, though not without some hard work. At number two singles, Brett Sibley got into a dandy match before rallying for a 2-6, 6-4, 7-5 victory.

The rest went in straight sets. Scott Sewall took a 6-2, 6-2 win at number three.

In doubles, Eli Berg and Greg Roberts, and Paul Shea and Rob Allan had little trouble.

In their previous match, the Tigers dropped host Quincy, 5-0, while earlier they beat Waltham by the same score.

Resting some of his regulars, North coach Clark Taylor moved Sibley up to number one, and Sewall to two. Frank Butera played third. All three players won rather easy matches on both days.

Against Quincy, Shea and Allan played first doubles, while Scott Glickman and Steve Calechman handled the chores at number two.

The lineups were a bit different against the Hawks, with Berg and Glickman at one and Shea and Allan at two.

The Tigers will wrap up up the regular season this afternoon when they host Brockton in a 3:30 match.

In the individual tournament, the number one doubles team of Berg and Roberts advanced to the South Sectionals quarterfinals before being ousted in a three-set match.

Tiger girls clinch on Tormey's hit

BROOKLINE — A Diane Tormey run-scoring bloop single in the top of the seventh snapped a 14-14 tie as Newton North slipped away from Brookline, 19-14, Thursday, guaranteeing a spot in the State Tournament come next week.

North, at 11-6 overall and 9-6 in the Suburban League, has one game remaining and even if the Tigers were to lose, they would still earn a berth in the tourney under the new 59 percent ruling.

Losing was not on the minds of the Tigers yesterday afternoon though. After a shaky first three innings, in which starter Sharon Cullins was hit for all 13 runs, the Tigers settled down to play shutout ball for the remaining four frames.

Meanwhile, it took North six runs in that span to tie it, 14-14, entering the seventh. With Brookline ahead, 13-8, after three complete, the North Tigers produced a run in the fourth, three in the fifth, and two more in the sixth to knot the score.

In the seventh, Nuala Horkin walked and Jen Quigley beat-out an infield single before Tormey knocked home the eventual winner with a Texas-Leaguer over shortstop. Jackie Kinsella stepped up and deposited a single in right field to score an insurance run and the ball was really rolling for North.

A three-base error on Brookline's part cleared the bases and allowed two more runs to cross. Newton North loaded the bags up on a Maria Farrar walk and singles by Beth Morahan and Wendy Rogers before the final run came home on a wild pitch.

Cullins was relieved by Nancy Sullivan after four innings but came back into the game in the seventh. Sullivan was yanked from her JV start, in which the sophomore was hurling a no-hitter, to aid the varsity. Debbie Visco relieved Sullivan in the JV game and finished off the game and the no-hitter.

Morahan homers

Thanks to three-hit pitching by sophomore Nancy Sullivan (her second three-hit outing this season) and home runs by Beth Morahan and Robin Silver, North easily slipped by Quincy, 7-1.

Morahan's three-run homer in the first inning set the stage for the ambush. Jackie Kinsella walked to lead off and Robin Silver bunted her way on to first, sending Kinsella to third. A Marie Farrar single up the middle brought home Kinsella and set the table for Morahan, who sent a shot over the right fielder's head for a 4-0 North lead.

The Tigers stayed in control of the game, going up, 6-0 after three innings before allowing a lone Quincy run in fourth.

Silver, a junior, stroked a solo homer in the sixth down the right-field line to round out the scoring.

In the game, sophomore Farrar had two hits and two RBI's while Nula Horkan also connected for a pair of hits.

Kinsella paces romp

Jackie Kinsella connected for three hits, including a home run, to boost host Newton North over rival Waltham, 16-2, Tuesday in a rain shortened Suburban League softball match.

Kinsella cracked a one-out homer in the second inning off Waltham starter Sandra Plourde to spark a three-run outburst that put Newton North in the drivers seat, 5-1.

A big six-run third inning put this one in the books for Newton North. With one out and the bases full, Marie Farrar walked to force in a run, then Beth Morahan singled up the middle to score another. Robin Silver, who was on second after a walk, was thrown out at the plate trying to score on Morahan's safety by Waltham's Dina Pallone.

Pam Vaughan replaced Plourde on the mound for the Hawks with two gone and runners on second and third base. Wendy Rogers then initiated Plourde into the infield, cracking a grounder to short that was misplayed, allowing two runs to cross.

With Rogers on second, Nula Horkin tripled, then came home on a Jen Quigley single up the middle to round out the inning for Newton North.

The Tigers added three runs in the fifth to put the victory on ice. Debbie Visco poked a two-run single and Kinsella hit a sacrafice fly to center to score Diane Tormey, who had walked.

Waltham got solo runs in the second and third innings, both with two outs. In the second inning, Plourde doubled to left-center with two gone and went to third on a wild pitch before coming home on a Brenda Hart single up the middle. North catcher Horkin then threw Hart out trying to steal second base to end the frame.

In the third inning, Kelly Vaughan scored sister Pam from second base with a single through the infield.

Lancers win finale

Theresa Foley knocked home two runs and also struck out 7 as Newton Catholic held on to an early lead to post a 9-6 win over Mt. Alvernia on the road in the final season of the game.

Four runs in the first and three in the third decided the outcome, as Foley held the hosts at bay despite walking 13. Foley was struck for three Mt. Alvernia runs in the bottom of the third and two in the next inning to narrow the edge to 7-5.

Newton Catholic finishes the season at 7-5 in the league and 7-6 overall.

Tigers' Jim Proia leaves hospital

Jim Proia, standout shortstop for the tourney-bound Newton North baseball team who underwent surgery recently for a bleeding ulcer, was discharged from the Newton-Wellesley Hospital Thursday.

The 18-year-old senior was stricken two weeks ago after playing in a Suburban League game at Brookline. That same evening, while at home, he became ill and taken to the hospital. He was medicated for several days, but when the bleeding failed to stop he was operated on the following Tuesday.

Jim Proia

Jim has been making excellent progress since then, and although he will miss the remainder of the high school season, the doctor's have assured him of a complete recovery. He has been put on a bland diet and he'll have to take it easy for the next few weeks. After that he's looking forward to playing summer baseball in both the Newton Twilight National League, with Steve Smith's Boys' Club entry, and for the George Sherman-coached Newton Post 440 Legion team.

Proia is one of the leading candidates for the Suburban League All-Star Team at shortstop, both on the basis of his superb fielding and his robust stickwork. At the time he was shelved by illness, Jim was sticking a lofty .549 (17 for 31). He had one homer this spring, against Somerville. Dave LeConte, a junior, has taken over the shortstop duties during his absence.

Jim has been deeply involved in baseball ever since his Little League days. He started out as an infielder with the Newton North Orioles under Coach Manny Connerney and then moved up to the International League (Babe Ruth) with the Boys' Club. Proia was 15 when the Clubbies won the league championship.

A two-year starter in baseball under Coach Dick Walker at Newton North, Jim also played hockey and skated on the first line with Jimmy Marchand and Paul Healey last winter.

Since his ailment, Jim has shed quite a bit of weight, dropping from 180 to 154 pounds. He has received plenty of encouragement from his teammates and they were frequent visitors during his hospital stay.

He is the son of Dominic and Catherine Proia of 17 Peabody St., Newton Corner, and has a brother Joey, 15, who is a pitcher-infielder for the Newton North freshman team.

Jim is due to graduate in June and has been accepted at Bentley College. He is certain to make a valuable additon to the Falcons' baseball program.

Andrea Jay Casson, a graduate of Newton South High and a student at Atlanta, Georgia's, Emory University, is currently participating in the 1985 NCAA Division III National Track & Field Meet being held this week at Granville, Ohio's, Dennison College.

Andrea, who qualified in the 400 meters, is a freshman making her first trip to the nationals. Casson plans on majoring in business and attending law school.

Matthew Flynn, an 11-year-old from Waban, placed first "all-around" in Class IV (ages 10-12) at the State Championship Gymnastics Meet held at UMass-Amherst recently.

So stiff was the competition, that the top six "all-around" scores were all within a one pointmargin. One hundred and ten boys from 19 teams competed.

Matthew's coach at Woodland Gymnastics in Natick is Paul Gilbert, head of the boys' team program tehere and a former member of the Newton North High gymnastic team. Other Woodland boys who are from Newton who competed in the State Meet were Jeremy Baryza, Michael Stern and Luke Reusser.

Matthew also received medals for placing third in the pommel horse and floor exercise, and fifth in the parllel bars. He is in the fifth grade at the Angier School.

Sherman top Lancer athlete

By Roy LeBlanc
Staff Writer

NEWTON — The format was new for the Newton Catholic athletic awards banquet, but most of the names were very familiar to anyone who follows the various Lancer sports.

In recent years, the event has been held at the school's auditorium. This year, it was moved to the Nonantum Post 440 American Legion Hall, and included a full dinner and music.

First and foremost among the familiar names were two hardwood stars who walked off with the two top awards of the evening. Jeff Sherman capped the ceremonies when he was given the school's Outstanding Athlete trophy by Athletic Director Don Dabenigno. That presentation came right after Frank Censullo had walked off with the Scholar-Athlete Award.

Still only a junior, Sherman was the top scorer in the Catholic Suburban League over the winter, averaging over 21 points per game. As soon as the hoop season ended, the forward traded in his sneakers for cleats and stepped in to play first base for the baseball team. He's the number two hitter on the squad (which is tournament-bound after Tuesday's win over St. Patrick's).

Dabenigno, who coaches both basketball and baseball, cited Sherman's "excellent attitude," calling him "a pleasure to coach," and "a leader."

Censullo didn't get the recognition that Sherman did on the court, but was a vital cog in the Lancer scheme of things. He moved from the point guard slot to the off-guard position with a lot of success. That success, combined with Censullo's number three rank in the senior class, earned him the award.

Though the biggest, those were only two of many awards given during the course of the night. Each varsity team handed out an Unsung Hero and Most Valuable Player Award as well.

There was one new award, a scholarship named after Shirley Leger, an official in three sports who died over the winter. Leger helped start the girls' athletic program at Newton Catholic, and the hoop officials' association chose to remember her with a scholarship given annually to a member of the Lancer squad. The first recipient of the $150 award was Angela Bove, who will continue her education at Bentley College this fall.

The spring awards were the final ones to be given out, but perhaps the toughest to pick, since the seasons aren't over yet. In baseball, Frank Battista and Nick Abruzzi were the top winners.

Battista, a catcher/pitcher/shortstop, was named the team's MVP by Dabenigno and assistant Sean Delaney. On the mound, he boasts a 1.12 earned run average with a 3-0 record and two saves, one of which came against St. Pat's in the clincher. He got off to a slow start at the plate this year, but has pulled his average over .300 of late. In addition, the sophomore discovered his power stroke, clubbing seven extra-base hits in the last five games.

Leadoff hitter Abruzzi tops the team at the plate with a .451 mark and has driven in 15 runs. On the mound, the lefty is 3-0. He's a junior.

Another 11th-grader, Susan Williams was the main honoree for the softball team. She leads the team in batting and hits, and was called "our most consistent player" by assistant coach Bob Hill. Hill was filling in for head coach Bob MacDougall, who had a personal obligation and couldn't attend the affair.

Joining Williams as a trophy winner in softball was junior Cheryl Chagnon. Installed at shortstop midway through the season, Chagnon responded by making only one error, earning her the Unsung Hero Award. Her effort is one reason the Lancers still have a chance to make the Catholic Tournament, depending upon what second-place Ursuline Academy does.

Sherman was the only athlete to come away with two major awards. In addition to his Outstanding Athlete trophy, he picked up the MVP for the basketball team. The Lancers went 7-11 last winter.

Mark Pulsifer was that club's Unsung Hero. The slender center (one of three tri-captains for next year with Sherman and Scott Roberts) "played well for us," said Dabenigno. "He was there all season long."

The girls' basketball team also finished under .500, at 5-7, but did feature several outstanding performers. Leading the way was sophomore Theresa Foley. She shared the Catholic II South Most Valuable Player Award, so it's only fitting that she was named the Lancer MVP as well. She averaged more than 19 points per game.

The Unsung Hero was Andrea Fremault. Chosen by coach Joanne Mirabito and assistant Susan Calabro, Fremault "came through under the basket," according to Mirabito.

Last fall, Newton Catholic only had one sport, thanks to the demise of the football program. The Lancers made it a successful one, however, as the volleyball squad took the Catholic Suburban South League title with an 11-1 mark, and finished 12-2 after losing in the Catholic Tournament finals. In the Eastern Mass. Tournament, Newton was downed by Bishop Fenwick in a close match.

The MVP of this outstanding unit was Shari Calabro. She was thrust into the setter's position in the early stages of the preseason and really responded.

Coach Rose Bertucci called Calabro "a natural...the best player in the league."

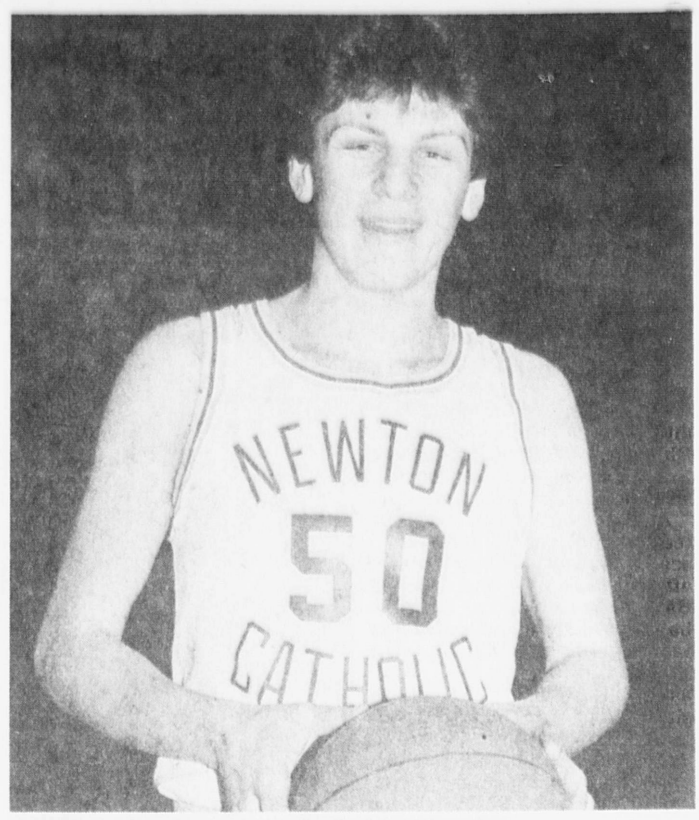

Joanne Abruzzi, a junior, earned the Unsung Hero Award. Bertucci noted that Abruzzi always "gave 100 percent...She was dedicated to a team sport."

The cheerleaders also had their moment in the spotlight, led by Coach Maureen Finn. Michelle Palkey was the squad's MVP, with Heather McIsaac taking home the Unsung Hero trophy.

Eight athletes also received special recognition, along with jackets, for lettering in five different seasons. They were:

Ann Marie Kling (cheerleading, softball), Nick Abruzzi (football, baseball), Chagnon (cheerleading, volleyball, softball), Sherman (basketball, baseball), Joanne Abruzzi (volleyball, basketball, softball), Fremault (volleyball, basketball, softball), Kerry MacDougall (volleyball, basketball, softball) and Angela Canty (volleyball, basketball, softball).

Dabenigno also distributed plaques to each senior varsity athlete, and thanked the parents who organized the evening, along with the Newton Catholic Athletic Association.

Newton youth booters win

NEWTON — The Newton Cosmos, an entry in the under-12 boys' Greater Boston Youth Soccer, defeated the Burlington Red Devils, 4-1, Saturday at Brown Junior High Field.

Burlington scored early in the first half, but Cosmos forward Krister Johnson tied the game with an unassisted goal. Right wing Alex Reisen headed a goal of a cross-field pass by left wing Billy Fruhan to put the Cosmos ahead for keeps.

The toher Newton goals were registered by forward Peter Kassakian, with an assist by Fruhan, and Fruhan's direct penalty kick.

The Cosmos also defeated the previously unbeaten Natick Stallions on Monday, 3-2, in Natick. With eight minutes remaining in the game and trailing 0-1, Reisen scored off a long pass from Fruhan to knot the score. Less than a minute later, the same play clicked for a go-ahead goal.

Natick tied the score again before Reisen notched his third goal of the day with an assist by Fruhan.

Goalkeeper Jean Pierre Paquin and 12 saves. The Newton Cosmos, with a season's record of 3-1-1, have been invited to play in the Needham Invitational Soccer Tournament on Memorial Day weekend and will travel to Toronto, Canada in June to play in the St. Thomas Soccerfest.

Ball brothers pace Stones to lopsided win

NEWTON — Ray Ball tossed a three-hitter while brothers Kevin and Pat both hit home runs as The Stones shelled Troubadour, 9-1, Monday in Newton Men's Fastpitch Softball 'B' League played at Albemarle Field.

Ray, a righty, was hurling a no-hitter going into the fifth inning before Troubadour's Jim Connors led off with a single up the middle to break the string.

Kevin smoked two homers, good for three RBI's, and Pat added a solo effort. Not to be left out, Ray connected for two singles and three RBI's.

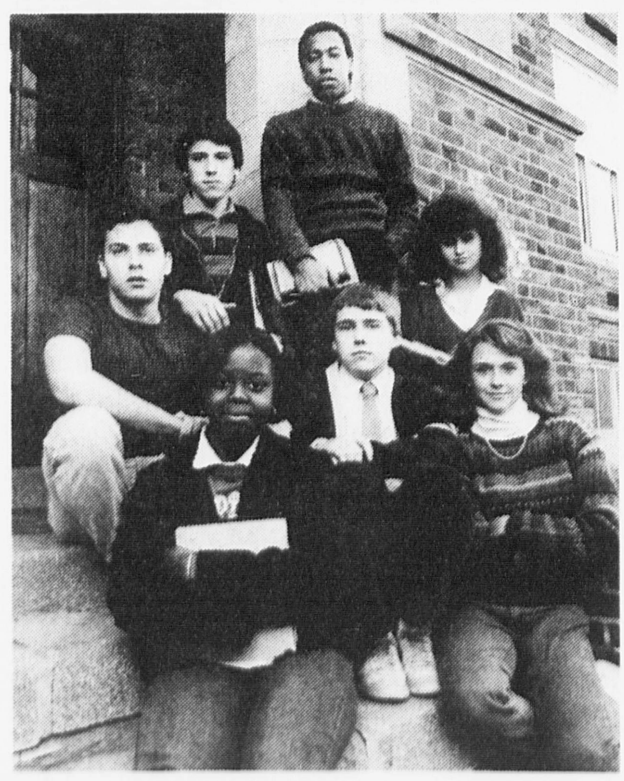

Extend Youth Soccer deadline

The Newton Youth Soccer League will extend its fall-registration period to June 10 for boys and girls grades 2-8. Mail-in forms can be picked up at any of the Newton schools.

For further information, call The Soccer Number at 244-1650 between 4:30 and 8 p.m.

Keselman belts 2 homers in vain

NEWTON — Wendy Keselman smashed two homers and drove in six runs in a losing effort Monday as Newton South dropped a 13-11 contest to Concord-Carlisle in the final game of the season.

South finishes up at 12-8 overall and 10-8 in the Dual County League and awaits the State Tournament which should start next week.

Despite Keselman's two shots, Coach Larry Caranfa blamed poor hitting for the loss. That, and the fact that freshman Julie Blankstein had an off-day on the mound (12 walks), ruined a season-ending win.

A wild second inning by both teams resulted in 10 of the 24 runs scored. Concord had gone up, 1-0, after one inning before Cheryl Babban let the horse out of the barn with a grand slam homer in the top of the second.

What better way to answer, asked South, than with a grand slam of our own. Kessleman did so, making her first homer of the game count in the bottom of the frame, scoring Blankstein, Diane Sostilio, and Liz Shiman ahead of her to make it a one-run ball game again.

Concord capitalized on South's shaky pitching and scored seven runs in the next four innings to put the game away.

Four runs in the fifth and a Keselman two-run homer in the seventh made for an interesting assault. Shiman singled home Stacy Hackell, Sostillio tripled home a pair, and Keselman scored her third run of the game on a fielding error.

Tourney clincher

Newton South scored five first-inning runs and held off a sporadic Wayland attack to slip away with a 14-12 tourney-clinching victory in a Dual County League softball game.

The Lions were in control after two and a half innings with a 8-0 lead before Wayland snuck up behind them and came up with four unanswered runs of starter Julie Blankstein.

Wayland would do this twice more in the game, closing the gap to as close as 9-8 after four innings. In the fourth, Blankstein walked three in a row and gave up three hits for four runs as the winless Wayland nine came close to an pulling off an upset.

Maria Crovo took the mound in favor of Blankstein, and after walking her first opponent, she struck out the side to end the threat.

"It got kind of hairy there in the end," admitted South coach Caranfa, who in his rookie season has led the Lions to an 12-7 record thus far with one game remaining. "We've had a lot of luck this season. But we'll take a win any way we can get it."

Wayland grabbed the bats for the final time in the bottom of the seventh and, down by six runs, scored four to make things interesting.

The home team capitalized on four singles and a throwing error to pull within two runs with two outs and runners at the corners.

Then, Caranfa's luck came in handy. Wayland's Beth Rosenbkitt grounded to short but the ball was misplayed and overthrown on the attempt at first base. Luckily, the ball hit the Wayland base coach and remained in fair territory. Rosenbkitt, on the other hand, casually strolled to second on what she thought was a free base and was thrown out by first baseman Liz Shiman to end the game.

Crovo throws strikes

Maria Crovo was throwing strikes and Katrina Antonellis was swinging a loaded bat but the Newton South Lions could not put it together Monday against Dual County League leading Acton-Boxboro in a 13-6 loss.

An on-going power-hitting slump continued to spell defeat for the Lions, who with two games remaining in the season have to win one to gain a post-season berth. Coach Larry Caranfa said he knows crunch time is no time to be caught in a singles-only slump.

Having not made the tourney in two years, South would like to make the most of the opportunity. The only player to compete in that tourney year was junior shortstop Antonellis.

The shortstop knows what it takes to win games, as Antonellis tried in vain to do against Acton. She blasted a two-run homer in the third and figured in all six of South's runs.

The summary:

CONCORD-CARLISLE(13)-Murphy 3-1, Farren 4-2, Thomas 4-3, Babbin 5-2, Haroing 4-3, Redmond 3-1, DeMocnes 5-0, Harris 5-1, Chall 2-0. Tot. 35-13.

NEWTON SOUTH(11)-Shiman 2-2, Sostilio 4-1, Keselman 5-3, Theodore 3-1, Antonellis 5-1, Hackel 4-1, Bonazoli 2-0, Olansky 1-0, Chao 2-0, Baumberg 2-1, Blankstei 0-0, Crovo 2-0. Tot. 32-10.

Donna Yaffe

D. Yaffe heading for Maccabiah

Donna Yaffe of Newton and Brown University has qualified for the Women's Basketball Team that will represent the United States in the 12th World Maccabiah Games in Israel, July 15-25, announced Robert E. Spivak, U.S. Maccabiah Committe general chairman, and Alan Sherman, All Sports chairman.

Donna has received numerous rewards while playing the last four years at Brown. She was twice Ivy League Player of the Year, twice a Kodak District I All-American selection, a a three-time All-American selection, this year's New York Post and Opinion's National Jewish Player of the Year, and twice voted Brown's Outstanding Woman Athlete of the Year.

Despite missing almost half her junior year due to injury, she is Brown's all time leading scorer (male or female). She will be graduating with honors in pyschology this week.

The World Maccabiah Games, which are held every four years in the year immediately following an Olympic year, pit Jewish athletes from all over the world in competition similar to that of the Olympics. More than 4,000 world-class athletes from 38 countries, including 500 from the U.S., will vie for medals in some 31 sports ranging from basketball to swimming.

Gymnast Mitch Gaylord, swimmer Mark Spatz, basketball stars Ernest Grunfield and Dan Schayes, tennis player Andrea Leand and Brad Gilbert, and golfer Corey Pavin are some of the recent U.S. Maccabiah champions who have achieved worldwide fame in their respective sports.

Loss at Brookline hurts Tiger league title hopes

NEWTON — It's been a remarkably consistent season most of the way for the Newton North baseball squad, so perhaps the lapse in Friday's 10-3 loss to Brookline is understandable. Understandable or not, the lapse came at the wrong time, with the Tigers in pursuit of Brockton for the Suburban League championship.

The Tigers can still tie for the title. They have two games left (the first being at home today against Brockton at Ferguson Field) and must win both. Meanwhile, Waltham must also beat the Boxers on Wednesday. That scenario would create a three-way tie at the top, with North, Waltham and Brockton all sharing the honors.

It might have been the Tigers' spot alone, but for Friday's contest.

"We really put together a stinker," was the way North coach Dick Walker put it.

Walker's club managed only five hits, none coming after the third inning.

The Tigers also made five errors, not counting the numerous mental mistakes.

"It was really a disappointing outing," continued the coach. "We were in striking range of Brockton...Now it's not entirely in our hands."

Ray Gladu was the Newton starter and though not overpowering, deserved a better fate. He was pitching under the gun more than he should have been, due to the defense behind him.

On the brighter side, Greg Larson hit a solo homer in the second inning, his eighth of the season. The run batted in was number 30 for the senior first baseman/designated hitter. Perhaps even more important, he threw on the sidelines and his shoulder seems to have improved. Getting him back on the mound for the tournament would be a big boost for the Tigers.

North is is 13-5 overall and 7-3, with two games remaining.

Outlast Quincy

Newton North scored four runs in the first inning and never relinquished the lead thereafter, though a stubborn Quincy team hung tough all the way in a 9-7 Tiger win on Wednesday.

The Presidents came as close as 5-4 before the Tigers pulled away again with three in the fifth. The closest the home team would come again would be the final score.

The Tigers started off the game the way every team would like to open on the road, with a leadoff single by Artie Aaron. After a strikeout, a single by Bob Martin (three hits) and walk to Greg Larson loaded the bases for Mike Solomon, who responded with a two-run single. Solomon had a great day, stroking three hits in as many trips to the plate and driving in a trio of runs.

Colin Ryan later drew a two-out walk off of Joe Conti, who went the distance for the losers, and Ron Coppola drilled a hit to make it 4-0.

Quincy chipped away at that bulge until the fifth, when the Tigers exploded again. This time singles by Larson and Solomon, along with a walk to Alex DeNucci, filled the sacks for Colin Ryan. The senior catcher responded by drilling a three-bagger to give the visitors some breathing room.

Martin started for the Tigers and lasted only 1⅓ innings, as he was plagued with wildness. The lefty surrendered six walks in that short stint.

Tom Casey took over and went the rest of the way. Though not invincible, striking out two and walking three, he pitched just well enough to stay ahead of the Presidents.

The summary:

NEWTON NORTH(9)-Aaron 4-1, Calcagni 4-1, Martin 4-3, Larson 3-2, Solomon 3-3, DeNucci 2-0, C. Ryan 2-1, Casey 3-0, Coppola 1-1, Collela 4-0. Tot. 30-12.

QUINCY(7)-Draicchio 4-1, Logan 4-1, Calabro 3-1, Ciardi 4-0, Conti 2-0, Lestasio 2-1, Durante 4-1, Taglieri 3-0, Patenelli 1-1, Tocchio 2-0. Tot. 29-6.

Rooney clout wins

NEWTON — Two runs came home on Brian Rooney's hot smash to shortstop in the top of the seventh inning to give the Newton Central A's a 9-7 victory over the Newton West Braves at Lyons Field in a Little League game Sunday.

The A's had gotten clutch hits by Richard Rosen and Bill Brennan for three runs in the sixth to tie the game.

Sluggish Lancers lose to North Cambridge

NEWTON — With a tournament berth wrapped up after Tuesday's win over St. Patrick's, Newton Catholic came out flat on Thursday and it proved costly, resulting in an 8-3 loss to North Cambridge Catholic at Cabot Park. North Cambridge was only 4-10 going into the game.

The visitors scored five runs in the top of the first before the Lancers got their act together, too late.

Newton starter Jeff Sherman had all kinds of control trouble, was was victimized by some sloppy fielding behind him, and failed to get out of the inning.

The trouble started with one out. Sherman issued a walk, then promptly picked the runner off first. The only trouble was that the Lancers threw the ball away during the rundown, and the pickoff went for naught.

Another walk and another error loaded the bases for Tom Card, who drilled a single. While the Lancers kicked the ball around some more, three runs came around. After yet another free pass, Jim Long's single and a bad throw made it 5-0.

That was all for Sherman, as Frank Battista took over and got out of the inning, but the damage had been done.

Battista was the lone bright spot, as he went 6⅓ innings, allowing only one earned run. He also had two hits, including a double, and drove in a run.

Now 11-6 overall and 9-6 in the Catholic Suburban League, the Lancers wrap up the regular season Thursday at St. Clement's.

The summary:

NORTH CAMBRIDGE CATHOLIC(8)-Rodes 3-0, Betz 3-0, Francis 3-0, Fazzalori 4-1, Card 4-1, McManus 4-1, Bennett 3-1, Long 4-3, Francois 3-0. Tot. 30-7.

Plan and layout work to be formed, sheared and pierced, and set-up and operate all hand and powered sheet metal machines such as shears, presses, brakes, notchers and spot welders to cut, form, weld and stamp sheet stock to close tolerances, where set-ups are exacting, unusual and difficult. Qualified candidate should have 3-5 years' experience.

SET-UP OPERATOR SHEET METAL
(First Shift)

We have several positions available on both first and second shifts for Sheet Metal Set-Up Operators with 2-3 years' experience setting up and operating a wide variety of sheet metal machines. Interested candidates should be able to work from drawings, specifications and layout and be able to use various types of precision measuring instruments.

MAINTENANCE HELPER
(Second Shift)

Qualified candidate should have one year of experience performing various duties. As the Maintenance Helper, you will assist the electrician, pipe fitter, maintenance mechanics and other trade people in the performance of general maintenance work.

STOCKKEEPER
(First Shift)

Qualified candidate should have one year of recent experience performing various checking, counting and sorting duties along with the moving of materials within a stockroom area. This individual will also prepare daily shortage reports, count material to check inventory records and participate in periodic cycle counts and physical inventories. Forklift experience is a must.

SUB-ASSEMBLERS
(First Shift)

A number of positions exist for sub-assemblers to perform simple sub-assembly duties of mechanical, electrical, plastic and other materials on a wide variety of parts. Some manufacturing experience preferred but not necessary.

PLASTIC ASSEM. OPERATORS
(First Shift)

Perform a variety of duties to visually check mechanical and plastic parts for obvious defects, as well as assemble necessary plastics, rubber and metal parts. Some experience helpful but not necessary. Use hand tools, hand truck, stapling machine, router, drill press, screen printer and related equipment.

All of the above positions provide excellent opportunities for advancement. We offer a good benefit package including medical, dental, life insurance, savings plan, tuition assistance and more. If you qualify for any of the above and are interested in applying, please contact Sharon Costa at 769-7500, extension 246, to set up an interview.

Mt. St. Helens spews a 60,000-foot plume of steam and ash during its 1980 eruption, which left 60 people dead or missing. UPI-Reuters File Photo

TOUTLE, Wash. (UPI)— Gary and Brenda Roggendack learned some lessons five years ago: Never trust a sleeping volcano and always live on high ground.

Gary was sound asleep when Mount St. Helens blew its top May 18, 1980. He had been up until 3 a.m. catching frogs at Silver Lake on the Toutle River and at 8:30 a.m. on that sunny Sunday morning, his phone rang.

"I wasn't about to get out of bed," he said. "But I changed my mind when they said the mountain had blown."

Before the day was out, he and his pregnant wife would lose their house and nearly all their belongings to a gooey mudflow sent cascading down the Toutle by the angry peak 30 miles away.

Five years later, the house is still buried to the window sills in mud alongside the ash-caked river. Bedposts and the top of a washing machine stick up through the gray crust in a private monument to the most destructive volcanic eruption in the recorded history of the United States.

"There is a pair of skis buried in there under the bed," said Gary, 32, a Washington state highway worker. "I've dug down twice, but I can't find them."

The Roggendacks were lucky compared to others. The cataclysmic landslide and eruption left 60 people dead or missing under nearly a cubic mile of debris and ash.

It made a $1.1 billion mess across the countryside and created problems for the residents of Washington and Oregon that will continue for at least the next half-century.

The Toutle, Cowlitz and Columbia Rivers still run heavy with volcanic silt and must be constantly dredged by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers at a cost of $235 million to date. The Corps wants to build a 177-foot-high containment dam on the Toutle to control the silt.

Corps workers have just completed an eight-mile tunnel through a mountain to provide an outlet to Spirit Lake, the once-beautiful resort lake famous for its reflection of Mount St. Helens. Its natural outlet, the Toutle, is clogged for 15 miles with volcanic debris averaging 150 feet in depth.

Without the tunnel, the lake would have kept filling until it broke through its volcanic plug and flooded the homes of 40,000 to 50,000 people downstream, said Alene Jacques, a Corps spokeswoman.

The smoldering volcano itself still poses a threat. It has erupted 18 times since the catastropic 1980 explosion that tore 1,300 feet off the top of the mountain.

A team of 70 volcanologists from the U.S. Geological Survey constantly monitors the mountain. Scientists also have stepped up their studies and monitoring of a dozen other volcanic mountains in the Cascade Range, including Ranier, Adams, Hood, and Baker in Washington and Oregon, and Shasta and Lassen in California.

St. Helens has been quiet for more than eight months, its longest period of calm since the big explosion. But it has been steadily building a lava dome in its horseshoe-shaped crater.

The dome grows at a rate of 35 million cubic meters per year and is now larger than downtown Portland, 50 miles to the southwest. At the current rate, the volcano could rebuild its peak to pre-1980 size within a century—if it doesn't blow its top again.

"Right now there is very little space between the sides of the dome and the crater walls," said Steve Brantley, a USGS volcano-watcher and chief spokesman for the Johnston Cascades Volcano Observatory in Vancouver.

"It's very unstable. There are hundreds of rocks falling from the crater walls. Fumaroles are releasing steam on portions of the crater floor, some measured at 912 degrees Celsius. That's partially molten."

The observatory is named for David A. Johnston, a USGS volcanologist who died in the 1980 eruption. Johnston was six miles from St. Helens taking survey measurements when the volcano suddenly erupted. He announced the event to the world, shouting "Vancouver! Vancouver! This is it!" into his radio before he was overcome by searing hot gases and debris moving at nearly the speed of sound.

Another well-known casualty was Harry Truman, 83, the cantankerous owner of a lodge on Spirit Lake who refused orders to evacuate.

"Harry's lodge is under 300 to 400 feet of mudflow and landslide," said Brantley. Harry's Ridge above Spirit Lake was named in Truman's honor.

The 1980 blast literally splashed Spirit Lake up the mountain and redeposited it in a new basin 200 feet higher. The silt has settled and the lake is once again blue, but much of the surface is covered with logs swept off the mountainside.

Instead of trees and a snow-capped peak, the lake now reflects mountainside devastation and the smoldering crater that still spews hundreds of tons of sulfur dioxide into the atmosphere each day. The chemical, familiar to high-school chemistry students, smells strongly of rotten eggs.

In 1982, Congress set aside 110,000 acres around the volcano as the Mount St. Helens National Volcanic Monument under the management of the U.S. Forest Service. The area is only a small portion of the 230 square miles devastated by the blast.

The land is largely preserved as the blast left it, with millions of trees blown down like arrows pointing away from the mountain. Tourist facilities are sparse—a few overlooks outside the restricted zone and a trailer for a visitors' center.

But the monument serves as a giant laboratory and study area. Botanists and biologists are watching to see how the area rejuvenates itself.

Plant life already has returned to ravines where runoff has washed away the volcanic silt and exposed old soil, and a herd of elk uses the restricted zone to hide from hunters.

"There's one old bull in there that would set a new record," said Roggendack, who used to hunt around the mountain.

Salmon and steelhead also have returned to the Toutle, despite heavy silt.

St. Helens' quiet period could last several months or several years, Brantley said, and it is unlikely there will be another huge blast.

"The mountain is unplugged," he said. "The crater is clear. The next eruption would likely go straight up from the (lava) dome."

But any activity can send more mudflows and debris down the rivers and add to the silting problem. Even without further eruptions, the Toutle River spews out 68,000 cubic yards of sediment each day—enough to cover a two-lane highway a half-foot deep for 23 miles.

The scientists keep amassing their figures and knowledge, but the Roggendacks were left with more practical lessons.

They now live with their two daughters, including one born a month after the eruption, in another house on a hillside a mile or so away.

"I'll never live along the river again," said Brenda. "I'll never live near a mountain that hasn't blown. Mount Ranier (to the north) isn't pretty to me any more."

Count down begins

VANCOUVER, Wash. (UPI) — Seismic activity beneath Mount St. Helens increased Thursday, nearing high levels, as the southwest Washington volcano shuddered toward what scientists said could be an explosive eruption.

Sometime in the next few days to two weeks, there will be a "dome-building" eruption centered on the huge lava dome in the volcano's crater, researchers said.

Scientists have predicted 15 of the volcano's 17 eruptive episodes since the devastating May 18, 1980, blast that left 57 people dead or missing, and have never issued an alert of an eruption that failed to occur.

"The buildup in activity is continuing this morning," U.S. Geological Survey spokesman Steven Brantley said. "The earthquakes continue to occur at a shallow depth, generally of a magnitude of 1 or less on the Richter scale."

University of Washington geophysicists reported that the volcano's seismic levels reached "the upper level of the moderate category" by Wednesday afternoon, just shy of the high category, Brantley said.

"It's still too early" to tell exactly what will happen, or when, Brantley said.

"Things are just building up slowly, and of course we will be looking for a rapid and systematic increase in the number of quakes and the rate of swelling of the lava dome."

Scientists planned another helicopter trip into the volcano's mile-wide crater Thursday. They planned to spend the afternoon using lasers and other equipment to measure changes in the swelling lava dome.

Despite the renewed activity at the mountain — the first since last September — the "restricted zone" in the immediate area around the peak remains open to people with valid permits, Brantley said.

"It certainly doesn't pose any hazards to people who want to view the volcano over the Memorial Day weekend," he added. Big crowds are expected at viewpoints and visitor centers located a safe distance from the rumbling mountain.

Breakfast club loses when restaurant dies

By Paul J. Burke

WEST NEWTON — After 12 years in West Newton Square, D and J's Restaurant is closing for good on May 30. The West Newton community will miss Joan and Dick O'Halloran and their staff, but the biggest loss will be felt by the West Newton Breakfast Club.

With over 65 members, the club, started by Paul Burke and Charlie Blackington to serve as a morning breakfast club, soon blossomed into a non-partisan political and social organization.

Politics was probably the most widely discussed item, with sports a close second. Members included current State Rep. Joe DeNucci, former Rep. Joe Bradley, Alderman Robert Tennant and former Alderman Paul Burke. Regular political visitors included Alderman Dick Bullwinkle and former Secretary of State Paul Guzzi, both Saturday regulars; Alderman Paul Coletti, whose father Jim Coletti was the guardian of the square for years; Alderman Paul Daley and former Alderman Gene Cronin.

Mayor Ted Mann dropped in as a frequent visitor.

A stop at the restaurant was a must for any candidate running for office. Bob Tennant escorted Margaret Heckler on a couple of occasions during her last congressional fight; and the list goes on of candidates who found out D and J's was "the place to go."

Although the present and former officeholders tried hard to dominate the political talk, conservative Stan Keyes or the middle-of-the-road Jack Morrissey and many others got their two cents into the heavy discussion.

Sportswise, BC was the most intensely discussed team, with Newton North High School a close second. The Foleys, Burkes, DeNuccis, the Billy Ryans and several others who had sons playing for Norm Walker were always ready on Monday morning to give their impression of how Saturday's game was coached, depending on whether it was a victory or a loss.

Professional sports had to play their part in the discussion, and when Vic Nicolazzo would bring Bobby Orr in on Saturday mornings, Bobby would receive his share of ribbing, whether it was over his t.v. commercials or when he was going to put the skates back on. Dave Cowens was a visitor, with his newspaper and a big breakfast, as was Billy Cleary, Harvard's hockey coach.

Socially, the club had Christmas parties, cookouts and other social functions for the members' families every year. Also, members and their families received flowers on special occasions and visits from Charlie and Paul. The club held a cookout a couple of weeks ago where more than 70 members, families and friends gathered to honor Joan and Dick O'Halloran with a plaque.

Without any membership drive, the club grew so fast it even became a problem for Dick O'Halloran to handle the entire gang when too many of them showed up at the same time.

Starting time was 6:30 a.m., with the likes of Recreation Commissioner Russ Halloran and City Comptroller Larry Marino. The early shift at the Fire Department led by Lt. Buddy Keegan and two bank presidents who are members arrived a little later, along with others of the gang.

The future of the club is up in the air, and its members are considering several spots to relocate to. Trouble is, the gang is mostly the "muffin-and-coffee" crowd and floor space is getting too precious around the square.

(Paul Burke, who has lived in West Newton for 61 years, is a former alderman and senior member of the city's Recreation Commission whose name is on the ballfield at Albemarle Park.)

Marguerite J. Corcoran, 92

World War I Army nurse

NEWTON LOWER FALLS — The Funeral of Marguerite J. (O'Dwyer) Corcoran, 92, of Newton Lower Falls, was held from the Henry J. Burke & Sons Funeral Home, 56 Washington St., (Route 16), Wellesley Hills, last Thursday, followed by a funeral mass in St. John's Church. Interment was in St. Mary's Cemetery, Needham.

One of two remaining Massachusetts Army Nurse Corps veterans of World War I, Mrs. Corcoran saw service in England, France and Germany. She also was a charter member of American Legion Post 48, Newton.

Born in 1893 in Lowell, Mrs. Corcoran became the first school nurse at St. John's Hospital for nurses in that city.

She met her husband John E. Corcoran in Monaco during World War I. Mr. Corcoran later became chief of the Newton Fire Department. At the time of his death they had been married for 59 years.

The wife of the late John E. Corcoran, she leaves three daughters, Margaret Mary Grant and Ann Corcoran, both of Newton, Ellen S. Giovanella of Plymouth; two sons, Daniel Corcoran of Newton; John E. Corcoran of Wellesley; 13 grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.

Thomas J. Mullen, 78

Headed Mullen Lumber Co., Sudbury

SUDBURY — A funeral mass was celebrated Tuesday in Our Lady of Fatima Church, Concord Road, Sudbury, for Thomas J. Mullen, 78, formerly of Sudbury and Waltham, founder and chairman of the board of the Mullen Lumber Co., Sudbury.

Mr. Mullen died last week in St. Mary's Hospital, West Palm Beach, Fla., after being stricken two weeks ago while on a vacation cruise.

Born in Waltham, Mr. Mullen was in the lumber business for more than 60 years.

He began his career with the Webster Lumber Co., Newton Highlands, and also worked for Waltham Lumber Co. and Grossman's from 1935 to 1945.

Mr. Mullen founded Pine Banks Lumber Co. in Malden in 1946 and in 1955, he established the Mullen Lumber Co., Sudbury.

He was a member of the Fraternal Order of Lumbermen, the Who-Who Club, the Northwest Retail Lumber Dealers Association, the Charles River Country Club, Newton, the Old Guard Society of Palm Beach Golfers, the Sudbury Rotary and the Waltham Elks.

He leaves his wife, Winifred (Johnson) of Newton; three sons, David A. of Littleton, Richard T. of Lebanon, N. H., G. Burton Mullen of Sudbury; two daughters, Carole Ripley of Keene, N.H., Donna Levin of Ridgefield, Conn.; two sisters, Mary Quinn of California, Barbara Mullen of Boston; three brothers, John and Robert Mullen of California, James Mullen of Florida; 14 grandchildren.

William E. York, daughter from Newton

CAMBRIDGE — Funeral services for William E. York, 87, of Cambridge, a retired postal carrier, were held last week in the A. E. Long Chapel, Cambridge.

Mr. York died in the Emerson Convalescent Home, Watertown.

Locally he is survived by a daughter, Christine Benders of Newton Highlands. He also is survived by three sons; a sister, Mae York Smith of Providence, RI; several grandchildren.

York worked for the United States Postal Service for many years prior to his retirement. Born in New Bedford, he had been a resident of Cambridge for more than 40 years.

Brother Peter Celestine, teacher

SHREWSBURY — A funeral mass was celebrated last week for Brother Peter Celestine, CFX, 79, an Xaverian brother for 59 years and a former instructor at the Working Boys' Home, Newton Highlands, for 37 years, in St. Mary's Church, Shrewsbury.

Brother Celestine died Sunday in the Shrewsbury Nursing Home after a long illness.

Born in Randolph as John C. Fahey, he entered the congregation of the Xaverian Brothers in 1926. From 1926 to 1928, he taught at the Sacred Heart Novitiate in Virginia. From 1928 to 1933, he taught at St. Mary's Industrial School, Maryland.

Brother Celestine also taught at St. Patrick's Grammar School in Lowell from 1934 to 1937 and then at the Working Boys' Home, Newton Highlands for 37 years.

He spent nearly all of his active apostolate working with homeless and orphaned boys.

He also attended Holy Cross School of Culinary Art at Stonehill College and was a certified food supervisor.

For the past 10 years, he had lived in the Xaverian Brothers Home at St. John's High School, Shrewsbury.

He leaves three cousins, John Fahey and Elinor C. Crotty, both of Marlboro, Elizabeth McAuliffe of Hudson.

John H. Cotton, brother from Newton

WALTHAM — Services for John Harold Cotton, 69, of Waltham, were held from the Brasco and Son Memorial, 773 Moody St., Waltham, Saturday morning, with a mass of Christian burial at St. Charles Church. Interment was in Calvary Cemetery, Waltham.

Mr. Cotton died last week at the Middlesex County Hospital, after a long illness.

Born in Waltham, Mr. Cotton was a lifelong resident of Waltham and for many years he was employed by the Railway Express Co. He later was employed as a machinist for VanKeuran Company, Watertown, and for the past several years prior to his disability, he was employed as a custodial supervisor at Brandeis University. He also was a member of the Waltham Lodge of Moose No. 1018.

He leaves his wife, Marie M. (Keating) Cotton; three sons, John J. Cotton of Norwood, Richard T. Cotton of Hudson, Michael J. Cotton of Waltham; a brother, Richard G. Cotton of West Newton; two sisters, Mrs. Marguerite Sozanski of Waltham and Mrs. Leonard (Rita) Erickson of Marlboro; eight grandchildren.

Arthur H. Crawford, son of Newton

ROSLINDALE — A funeral service was held last week for Arthur H. Crawford, 77, of Newton, former owner of an auto body repair shop in West Roxbury, at the Folsom Funeral Home, Roslindale.

Mr. Crawford died in the West Roxbury Veterans Administration Hospital, after a long illness.

Born in Boston, he resided in Boston until he moved first to Foxboro and then to Newton, nine years ago.

Mr. Crawford also worked for the Massachusetts Display Service in Allston, setting up display advertising in stores, from 1950 until his retirement in 1970.

A veteran of World War II, he served as a technician fifth grade in the 9th Armored Division, under Gen. George Patton. He fought in the Battle of the Bulge and at the capture of the bridge at Remagen.

He leaves a son, John Henry Crawford of Newton; two brothers, Francis D. Crawford of Billerica, Joseph G. Crawford of Arlington; five nephews and three nieces.

Backman discusses day care at Center

NEWTON — Sen. Jack Backman breakfasted with children and staff at Newton Community Service Centers Day Care. The day care staff was particularly eager to discuss important day care policy issues as well as impending legislation.

The senator, who has long been a legislative advocate for day care, lent a sympathetic ear to discussion of statewide low day care wages, the need for more D.S.S. accessible and affordable training, subsidized training courses and the possibilities of student loan forgiveness programs to attract Early Childhood majors.

The senator was kept so busy sharing with staff that he hardly had time to eat the special banana bread baked by the children.

Thomas A. Charbonnier, 47

MBTA employee

NEWTON — Funeral Mass was celebrated for Thomas A. Charbonnier, 47, of Newton, formerly of Brighton, in St. John The Evangelist Church, Wellesley last week. Interment was in Evergreen Cemetery, Brighton.

Mr. Charbonnier died May 14 at his home in Newton, after a long illness.

He was a member of the Carmen's Union Local 589 and was an employee of the Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority for 17 years. Born in Brighton, he was a graduate of Brighton High School.

The son of the late August V. Charbonnier, he leaves his wife, Maureen E. (Maloney) Charbonnier; two sons, Thomas and Brian; a daughter, Bernodette; his mother Winnifred Leydon; a brother, Paul Charbonnier of Framingham, formerly of Newton; two sisters, BettyJean Curran of Wellesley and Mrs. Gail Hargett of Houston, Texas.

Catherine A. Maloney, 71

Lifelong Newton resident

WEST NEWTON — A proburial mass was celebrated for Catherine A. Maloney, 71, of West Newton in St. Bernard's lower church last Thursday.

Miss Maloney died at the Newton-Wellesley Hospital last week after a brief illness.

Born in Newton, she was a lifelong resident of Newton and was employed as a bookkeeper for the National Merchandise Co. in Natick for many years.

The daughter of the late John J. and Gobnet (Sullivan) Maloney, she leaves four sisters, Anne Geary of Newton, Theresa M. Kelly and Margaret C. Ryan, both of West Newton, Elizabeth F. Maloney of Westwood; several nieces and nephews.

W. Latimer Gray, 91

Former bank director, Waban resident

WAREHAM — A funeral service was held Tuesday in the Church of the Good Shepherd, Wareham, for W. Latimer Gray, 91, retired vice president of the First National Bank of Boston and the bank's director of foreign operations for many years.

Mr. Gray was a resident of Chestnut Street, Waban, and had lived with his wife, the former Margaret Morton Platt, in Wareham for the past 30 years. Mr. Gray also was a member of the Brae Burn Country Club, Newton.

Born in Lincoln, Neb., he was the son of William Leonard Gray and Mary E. (Latimer) Gray. He attended Boston Public Latin School and Northfield (Minn.) High School, and graduated cum laude from Harvard College in 1917.

After graduation, he went with the First National Bank, where, after spending time in several departments, he became associated with the credit and loan division until 1926. As director of the division, he was an early and persuasive advocate of inter-American relations.

He then transferred to the foreign division. At the time of his retirement in 1959, he had been associated with the bank for more than 40 years. He served as honorary director of the bank until 1964.

After retirement, he became chairman of the American Overseas Finance Corp. and the American Overseas Investing Co., Inc., which he helped organize in the early 1950s for bank owners. They subsequently came under the control of Rockefeller family interests.

As chairman, he succeeded the late Nelson A. Rockefeller, who had stepped down after being elected governor of New York. The companies at the time were the only private companies specializing in their two fields.

Later they merged with the Transoceanic Corp. and in 1965 with IBEC at Rockefeller Plaza. Mr. Gray then retired to his former summer home on Buzzards Bay.

Shortly afterward, he became chairman of an old Boston company, the Central Aguirre Sugar Co., with offices on Federal Street and production facilities in Puerto Rico. Eventually he became chairman of its executive committee.

He also was a director of Helmerich and Payne Corp., Tulsa, Okla., Barden Corp., Danbury, Conn., Stone Straw, Washington, D.C., Platt & Co., Baltimore.

In the 1950s, Mr. Gray was a vice chairman of the United States Inter-American Council, the U.S. section of the Inter-American Council of Commerce and Production, representing private enterprise associations.

Mr. Gray was a former director of the National Foreign Trade Council and after World War II, he was an adviser to the European Iron and Steel Community, a precursor of the Common Market.

Mr. Gray helped organize the yacht club in Wareham and was a member of the Eastern, Beverly and Bourne Cove Yacht Clubs.

He served in the vestry and as senior warden of All Saints Church, Brookline, and on the vestry of St. Gabriel's Church, Marion. He also was head of the board of trustees at Tobey Hospital, Wareham.

Ensemble in festival

The Massachusetts Youth Wind Ensemble, from the Extension Division of the New England Conservatory of Music, were invited to perform in Germany's European Youth Festival of Music May 18 through 28. Sixty members of the ensemble, under the direction of faculty conductor Daniel Riley since 1979, performed concerts in Dusseldorf, Osnabruck, Munich, and Mainz.

The festival activities in Munich brought together 9,000 young musicians from 22 different countries. The concert was recorded and televised throughout Europe.

Local MYWE members who toured Germany are: Sharra Davidson and Michale Gajewski, both of Newton North.

Sculptors show talent at Newton arts center

Art works by sculptors John Wilson, Lloyd Lillie, Penelope Jencks and Marianna Pineda will be on display at the Newton Center for the Arts through June.

By Candy Kosow
Correspondent

It's amazing how artists can work in the same medium, and yet produce entirely different end products. That is the situation at the Newton Center for the Arts, which is featuring the works of four sculptors. The artists are all accomplished and talented, but they each have a strong sense of individuality.

John Wilson is probably the most well-known in this quartet. Wilson, 63, was born and raised in Boston and has been creating his trademark bronze castings since the 1940s. He has won several major art awards, and has held one-man show exhibitions at some of the top galleries, but his biggest accomplishment is still in the works.

Wilson has been commissioned to do a bronze bust of Martin Luther King that will be prominently displayed in the Rotunda on Capitol Hill. It will be unveiled in June of 1986, just in time for the first national celebration of Martin Luther King Day as a governmentally approved holiday. A small scale version of the King bust is included in this exhibit.

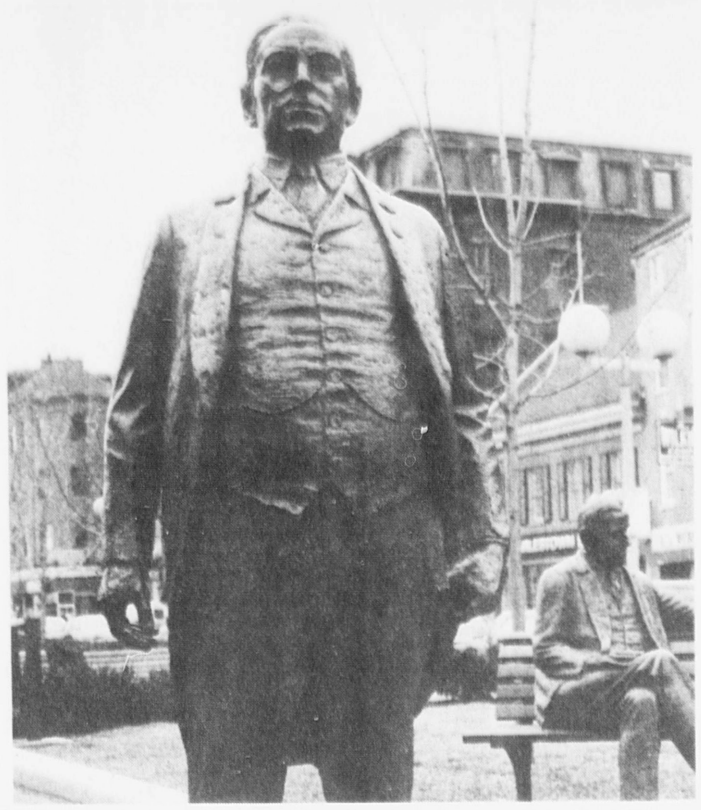

Like many of the French Impressionists, Wilson seems to have a select group of models with whom he works. Through his art, we become familiar with a few black women, notably "Roz," who has an arched back and who wears a turban, and "Becky," who has a penetrating stare. His most brilliant piece in the show is a bronze head of a lady called "Gabrielle." Her face has pleasant features, but it is the layers of cascading hair that makes this work so imposing.

Lloyd Lillie appears to be the most talented in this group. His bronze castings have great lines and movement about them. Whether he creates a "Female Figure Standing" or a bust of Thomas Jefferson, each piece has its own style and substance. One work is entitled "Falling Couple." It is a round bronze disc, that has been mounted on the wall. At the top of the disc there are two figures and they seem to be falling into the concaved circle. Is this couple falling off the edge of the world, or are they falling in love, or falling out of love? This bronze relief might well be the most thought provoking piece in the show. This Newton resident has also been commissioned to do some major works that most people have, in fact, seen right around Boston. Lloyd sculpted the statue of former Boston Mayor James Michael Curley that stands across the street from Fanueil Hall. He also completed a sculpture at Government Center that depicts two men playing chess. In September of this year, Lloyd will unveil the piece that is sure to bring him the most acclaim. He is hard at work on a life-size bronze casting of Boston Celtics president Red Auerbach.

Another Newton resident featured in this show is Penelope Jencks. Her sculptures are mainly done in a Terra Cotta. Her works are different, well thought out and humorous. A very original and practical piece called "Pelvis and Flowers" shows the part of a woman's body that goes from her upper thigh to her waist. There is an empty space at the top of the piece, that turns this work of art into a vase for flowers. Jencks has also created a life-size female, that is just standing in the corner of the room. This lady is unobtrusive enough, but for a few moments, her eyes did seem to follow patrons around the room. Jencks' most descriptive work is a sculptured self-portrait. It is the bust of a pony-tailed woman, who is screaming with frustration. Her mouth is open, her tongue is extended and her larynx is enlarged.

Marianna Pineda of Boston had more ink and pen drawings on the walls of the gallery, than actual sculpture. Her most impressive sculpture, though, was a stained oak piece called "Double Torsos." The smoothness of this texture and the entwining of the bodies certainly displayed a different approach in sculpture. Her ink work, "Into the Distance" featured a superb combination of rose pencil and a tan wash. Pineda has also been honored with a major commission. A scaled-down version is at the show, but it must not have the same dominance as the real piece. It's called "Maquette for the Queen." It is a huge, impressive, regal female, standing in a courtyard in Hawaii. The monument is subtitled, "The Spirit of Lili'uokalani." It is a gift for the people of the Islands.

All four artists in this show have their own techniques and approaches to their craft. They should all be lauded for their exceptional talent.

Lloyd Lillie's Mayor Curley stands near Fanueil Hall, Boston.
